Hamlet, Prince of Denmark.

The germ from which sprang this wonderful tragedy, which has occupied the attention of commentators, critics, and metaphysicians, to a much larger extent than any other work of its great author, may be found in Saxo Grammaticus, the Danish historian. From thence it was adopted by Belleforest, and appeared in his collection of novels in seven volumes, entitled Histoires Tragique, and this being translated into English, in 1608, with the title of The Historie of Hamblet, furnished Shakspere with the subject of this reflective yet highly popular drama.

Those, however, who have the curiosity to turn to the story will find merely a plain narrative, which has no resemblance in language, and which differs very materially in action, from the Hamlet of Shakspere. In it the prince feigns to be an idiot, to save himself from incurring the anger or suspicion of Fengon the usurper, who suspects that he has some intention of revenging the murder of his father (which is effected by open violence, and not by subtlety), and who therefore employs several stratagems to discover whether he is really the harmless fool he appears to be. He first sets a beautiful girl to seduce the prince, and in moments of abandonment to win his confidence, and learn if he has any secret designs to revenge his father, and to recover his kingdom. He then places a courtier behind the arras of the queen's chamber, to report the conversation of the mother and her son; but Hamlet discovering him, kills and cuts him in pieces, and gives them to the hogs. This nameless parasite, who has not a word to utter, is all the hint that our poet received for his excellent character of Polonius. The prince finally destroys the whole court by nailing down the tapestry of the banquetting hall over them when they lay on the ground in a drunken sleep after a bacchanalian revel, and then setting fire to the palace at each corner; so that they all perish in the flames. While the king, who had retired, he seeks in his own chamber, and slays by cutting off his head. Hamlet then governs in his stead, marries two wives, and is at last betrayed by one of them into the hands of a rebellious chief, who is beloved by his queen, and by him put to death. Thus his own fate is not dissimilar to that of his father's.

I have thus briefly mentioned the chief incidents of this story, to show that although it undoubtedly suggested to Shakspere the idea of his tragedy, he was still not greatly indebted to it.

A critical analysis of this drama would be impossible within our necessary limitation; but notwithstanding that there already exist so many acute and eloquent essays upon it, I shall briefly notice its most prominent characters and beauties.

The chief thing which strikes us in the character of Hamlet is his irresolution; everything he does is "sicklied o'er" with doubt and uncertainty; he occupies himself with constant and unsatisfactory meditations upon the great mysteries of life and death; he is in all things sceptical, and in losing his faith in nature he loses much of his love of it also. Man delights him not, and the blue vault of heaven seems to him no other "than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours." Compare him with Shakspere's character of Richard the Third, and you perceive the extent of his inertness; Richard is all action, Hamlet all thought. Of Richard it is said "actions but thought by him are half performed," but Hamlet does nothing until he is spurred and goaded on by outward circumstances. He is eaten up with a great woeful which shuts out all sympathy with others, and wanders about on the stage of life like a man who has some task to do greater than he can perform. Destiny has proposed to him a riddle which he cannot solve; and because he cannot, like the Sphinx of old, it devours him. Hamlet is no hero, his irresolution is weakness bordering on moral cowardice. He resolves on suicide, and then...
reasons himself out of his decision; he dedicates his life to the revenge of his father's murder, then defers taking it until he has further evidence of his uncle's guilt; receives that evidence, and still doubts, deliberates, and does nothing; and his revenge is consummated at last almost by accident, when finding that he has but a few minutes to live, that his mother is poisoned, and his own life destroyed by the treachery of his father's murderer, then lashed by personal agony, and the horror of his situation, into a paroxism of fury; and knowing that revenge, if delayed but for a moment, is lost forever, he rushes upon the king with the frantic violence of desperation, and after stabbing him with the anointed weapon forces the contents of the poisoned goblet down his throat.

Mr. Steevens estimates the character of Hamlet very sternly, and considers him not only amiable but criminal though he admits that the prince assassinated Polonius by accident, yet he states that he deliberately procures the execution of his two schoolfellows, who appear to have been ignorant of the treacherous nature of the mandate they were employed to carry; his conduct to Ophelia deprives her both of her reason and her life, and he then interrupts her funeral, and insults her brother by boasting of an affection for his sister which he had denied to her face, and that he kills the king at last to revenge himself, and not his father.

This summary of the character of Hamlet, though strongly stated, is not a false one; his conduct is certainly indefensible unless we regard him as a man whose mind was to some extent overthrown by the peculiarity of the circumstances in which he was placed. This brings us to the oft disputed question, whether the madness of Hamlet was real or feigned—an attentive perusal of the tragedy will, I think, lead us to the conclusion that it was both one and the other. His mind at times trembled on the brink of madness, shaken but not overthrown. Not utterly perverted by mental disease, but very far from the exercise of its healthy functions, at times enjoying the perfect use of reason, and at others clouded and confused. Hamlet exaggerates his mental defects, and feeling his mind disordered, plays the downright madman.

He, however, nowhere admits his insanity; and his soliloquies certainly bear no appearance of wildness. So far from believing himself mad, he has great faith in his own intellectual resources: he feels that he is surrounded by spies—by men whom he will trust as he will "adders fanged;" but, he adds—

It shall go hard,
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon.

This implies great confidence in his own acuteness; and, to his mother, he most emphatically denies that he labours under mental disorder: he is, he says, "not in madness, but mad in craft." But we should not take the word of a madman for evidence respecting his own malady. Hamlet is rather cunning than wise—a quality not unfrequently found in men suffering from a partial mental alienation. It should be recollected, also, that he has no reason for assuming insanity to his friend Horatio, whom he had trusted with his secret, and informed that he might think fit "to put an antic disposition on." Still, when discoursing very gravely with him in the churchyard, he suddenly breaks off from his subject, and asks, abruptly—"Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?" A mind so lightly cannot be justly called sound.

Dr. Johnson says—"of the feigned madness of Hamlet there appears no adequate cause, for he does nothing which he might not have done with the reputation of sanity. He plays the madman most when he treats Ophelia with so much rudeness, which seems to be useless and wanton cruelty." This is true enough, Hamlet's assumed madness in no way assists in working out his revenge, but, on the contrary, nearly prevents its execution, for had the king succeeded in his design in sending him to England, the pretended lunacy would have brought him to his death; or it might very likely have led to his close confinement in Denmark. This absence, then, of a sufficient cause for feigning madness implies that some seeds of absolute insanity were the origin of it.

Hamlet's conduct to Polonius is very unjustifiable, only to be accounted for by supposing that his mind is somewhat disturbed, though he may also dislike the old courtier because he is the coun-seller and companion of the King; but there is no treachery in the talkative old man. Polonius is very just and open; when he discovers Hamlet's love for his daughter, he lays no plot to induce him to marry her, he will not play "the desk or table-book," but discountenances the attachment, and informs the King and Queen of it. Foolishly talkative, he is still a very shrewd man, and though his wisdom is fast falling into the weakness and childishness of age, he has been a very acute observer. Dr. Johnson, who has given an admirable delineation of this character, says:—"Such a man is positive and confident, because he knows that his mind was once strong, and knows not that it has become weak. Such a man excels in general principles, but fails in the particular application.

He is knowing in retrospect, and ignorant in foresight. While he depends upon his memory, and can draw from his repositories of knowledge, he utters weighty sentences and gives useful counsel; but as the mind, in its enfeebled state, cannot be kept long busy and intent, the old man is subject to sudden dereliction of his faculties, he loses the order of his ideas, and entangles himself in his own thoughts, till he recovers the leading principle and falls again into his former train. This idea of dotage encroaching upon wisdom, will solve all the phenomena of the character of Polonius."

Ophelia is a gentle affectionate character, drawn in and sucked down by the whirlpool of tragic events which surround her. Hamlet treats her very harshly, but, although this probably proceeds partly from his aberration of intellect, he is also influenced by a suspicion that she is acting treacherously towards him, and is an instrument in the hands of the King and her father for some unworthy purpose.

It has puzzled many of the critics to account for the circumstance, that although Ophelia is so modest in her sanity that she never even confesses her love for Hamlet, we only gather from her actions that she loves him; that when she becomes insane she sings snatches of obscene songs. Some have thought Shakspere erred in this, but in the expression of human passions he never errs. It has been well suggested, that in madness people frequently manifest a disposition the very opposite of that which they possessed while in in a state of sanity—the timid become bold, the tender cruel—and that Ophelia, in like manner, forsook her modesty of demeanour, and became the reverse of her natural character. Mr. G. Dawson thinks Ophelia, in her sanity, to be warm in her passions—not a coarse sensualist, like the Queen; but what he calls sensuous—that way disposed, yet keeping a strict guard upon herself; and that when she becomes mad that restraint is removed, and her character appears in its natural colours.

Much controversy also has been expended upon the question whether the Queen was an accessory to the murder of her husband; her surprise on Hamlet's exclamation in her chamber, "As kill a king," has been quoted to exonerate her. This supposition is strengthened by the fact, that she exhibits no unceasing or remorse at the play, as the King does, and that no remark ever takes place between her and her husband in relation to it. Her agony of mind when her son compares her two husbands, and so severely censures her, arises from the recollection of her adulterous intercourse with Claudius during the life of the late king, and her hasty and incestuous marriage.

This tragedy is highly interesting, because we have in it so great a revelation of the Poet him-sell in certain phases of his rich and varied mind; in it he seems also to have made some attempt at dramatic reformation—at one time he instructs the actors, then his remarks have a direction to the audience, and he gives them a lesson upon what they should admire, and what condemn, and in what light they should regard the actors—not as trillers or disreputable men, but as a means of popular education and refinement.

According to the chronology of Mr. Malone, Shakspere produced this tragedy in 1596; it was registered in the books of the Stationers' Company on the 26th of July, 1602. On the title-page of the earliest copy now extant, dated 1604, it is stated to be "newly imprinted, and enlarged to almost as much again as it was."

SCENE—Elsinore.
SCENE I.—Elsinore.—A Platform before the Castle.

FRANCISCO on his Post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold Yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief, much thanks: 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Fran. I think, I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there!

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegenmen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier: Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo hath my place.

Give you good night. [Exit FRAN.

Mar. Holla! Bernardo!

Ber. Say.

What is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.²

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our fantasy;
And will not let belief take hold of him.

Touching this dreadful sight, twice seen of us:
Therefore I have entreated him along,
With us to watch the minutes of this night;
That, if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush! tush! 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile;
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
When yon same star, that's westward from the pole,
Had made his course to illumine that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,
The bell then beating one,—

Mar. Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again!

Enter GHOST.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like:—it harrows me with fear, and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Speak to it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak.

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay; speak: speak I charge thee, speak.

[Exit GHOST.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio? you tremble, and look pale:

T. n 2
Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you of it?
Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.
Mar. Is it not like the king?
Hor. As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armour he had on,
When he the ambitious Norway combated,
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledged Polack on the ice.
'Tis strange.
Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.
Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not;
But, in the gross and scope of mine opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.
Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land?
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon;
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week:
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day;
Who is 't, that can inform me?
Hor. That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
There to pricket'd on by a most emulat'd pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet
(For so this side of our known world esteem'd him,)
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law, and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands,
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror:
Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same co-mart,
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet: Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd up a list of landless resolute;
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in 't: which is no other
(As it doth well appear unto our state,)
But to recover of us, by strong hand,
And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost: And this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations;
The source of this our watch; and the chief head
Of this post-haste and romage in the land.
Ber. I think, it be no other, but even so:
Well may it sort, that this portentous figure
Comes armed through our watch; so like the king
That was, and is, the question of these wars.
Hor. A mote it is, to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.
As, stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star,
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands,
Was sick almost to dooms-day with eclipse.
And even the like precourse of fierce events,
As harbingers preceding still the fates,
And prologue to the omen coming on,—
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated Unto our climatures and countrymen.—

Re-enter Ghost.
But, soft; behold! lo, where it comes again!
I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease, and grace to me
Speak to me:
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!
Or, if thou hast upholstered in thy life
Exalted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,

[cock crows.
Speak of it:—stay, and speak.—Stop it, Marcellus.
Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partizan?
Hor. Do, if it will not stand.
Ber. 'Tis here!
Hor. 'Tis here!
Mar. 'Tis gone!
[Exit Ghost.
We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.
Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.
Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing.
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine: and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet: for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him:
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?
Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most convenient.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the same.

Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltimand, Cornelius, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death
The memory be green; and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one brow of woe;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious and one dropping eye;
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,—
Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along:—For all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,—
Holding a weak supposal of our worth;
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death,
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Colleged with this dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for him.
Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting,
Thus much the business is: We have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His further gait herein; in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject:—and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow.

Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. Vol. In that, and all things, will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing; heartily farewell.
[Exeunt Vol. and Cor.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; What is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: What would'st thou beg, Laertes,
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What would'st thou have, Laertes?
Laer. My dread lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation;
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave,
By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time bo thine,
And thy best graces; spend it at thy will.— But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind. [Aside.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord, I am too much i'the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not, for ever, with thy vailed lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st, 'tis common; all, that live, must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be, Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of fore'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly: These, indeed, seem,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within, which passeth show;
These, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation, for some term
To do obsequious sorrow: But to persw'ร—
In obstinate condolence, is a course
Of impious stubborness; 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;
A heart unfortified, or mind impatient;
An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For, what we know, must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart? 'Tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse, till he that died to-day,
"This must be so." We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe; and think of us
As of a father: for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;

And, with no less nobility of love,
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And, we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet;
I pray thee, stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply;
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come.
This gentle and unforced accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health, that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruise again,
Re-speaking earthy thunder. Come away.

[Exeunt King, Queen, Lords, &c., Pol., and Laer.

Ham. O, that this too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank, and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not betheem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: And yet, within a month,—
Let me not think on't;—Frailty, thy name is woman!—
A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she,—
O heaven! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer,—married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: Within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married:—O most wicked speed, to post
Hamlet, Prince of Denmark.

ACT I.

With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart; for I must hold my tongue!

Enter Horatio, Bernardo, and Marcellus.

Hor. Hail to your lordship?
Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio—Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even, sir.—
But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student;
I think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

'Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!—
My father,—Methinks, I see my father.

Hor. Where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw! who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attaint ear; till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch.
Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.
Hor. Not when I saw it.
Ham. His beard was grizzl’d? no?
Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life, a sable silver’d.
Ham. I will watch to-night; Perchance, ’twill walk again.
Hor. I warrant, it will.
Ham. If it assume my noble father’s person, I’ll speak to it, though hell itself should gape, And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all, If you have hitherto conceal’d this sight, Let it be tenable in your silence still; And whatsoever else shall hap to-night, Give it an understanding, but no tongue I will require your loves: So, fare you well: Upon the platform, ’twixt eleven and twelve, I’ll visit you.
All. Our duty to your honour.
Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: Farewell.
[Exeunt Hor, Mar, and Ber.
My father’s spirit in arms! all is not well; I doubt some foul play: ’would, the night were come!
Till then sit still, my soul: Foul deeds will rise, Though all the earth o’erwhelm them, to men’s eyes.

SCENE III.—A Room in Polonius’ House.
Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessaries are embark’d; farewell And, sister, as the winds give benefit, And convoy is assistant, do not sleep, But let me hear from you.
Oph. Do you doubt that?
Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood; A violet in the youth of primy nature, Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting, The perfume and suppliance of a minute; No more.
Oph. No more but so?
Laer. Think it no more For nature, crescent, does not grow alone In thews, and bulk; but, as this temple waxes, The inward service of the mind and soul Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now; And now no soul, nor cautel, doth besmirch The virtue of his will: but, you must fear, His greatness weigh’d, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth: He may not, as unvalued persons do, Carve for himself; for on his choice depends The safety and the health of the whole state; And therefore must his choice be circumscrib’d Unto the voice and yielding of that body, Whereof he is the head: Then if he says he loves you, It fits your wisdom so far to believe it, As he in his particular act and place May give his saying deed; which is no farther, Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal. Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain, If with too credent ear you list his songs; Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure open To his unmaster’d importance. Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister; And keep you in the rear of your affection.
Out of the shot and danger of desire. The charest maid is prodigal enough, If she unmask her beauty to the moon: Virtue itself escapes not calumnious strokes: The canker galls the infants of the spring, Too oft before their buttons be disclosed; And in the morn and liquid dew of youth Contagious blastments are most immanent. Be wary then: best safety lies in fear; Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.
Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep, As watchman to my heart: But, good my brother, Do not, as some ungracious pastors do, Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven Whilst, like a puff’d and reckless libertine, Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads, And recks not his own read.
Laer. O fear me not. I stay too long;—But here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace; Occasion smiles upon a second leave.
Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame;
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail, And you are staid for: There,—my blessing with you; [Laying his hand on Laer.’s head. And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion’d thought his act. Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar. The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried, Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel;
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT I

Scene IV.

But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-knack't d, unpledged comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel: but, being in,
Bear it that the opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice:
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,
Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—To thine ownself be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season this in thee!

Laertes. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Polonius. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.

Laertes. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Ophelia. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laertes. Farewell. [Exit Laertes.

Polonius. What is 't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Ophelia. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Polonius. Marry, well betought;
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you: and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous:
If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly,
As it behoves your daughter, and your honour:
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Ophelia. He hath, my lord, of late, made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

Polonius. Affection? puh! you speak like a green girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Ophelia. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Polonius. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby;
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;

Or (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Wronging it thus,) you'll tender me a fool.

Ophelia. My lord, he hath importuned me with love,
In honourable fashion.

Polonius. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

Ophelia. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Polonius. Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows; those blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both
Even in their promise, as it is a making,—
You must not take for fire. From this time,
Be somewhat sanguine of your maiden presence;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet
Believe so much in him, That he is young:
And with a larger tether may he walk,
Than may be given you: In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows: for they are brokers
Not of that die which their investments show,
But mere impleators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment's leisure,
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.
Look to 't, I charge you; come your ways.

Ophelia. I shall obey, my lord. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Hamlet. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Horatio. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Hamlet. What hour now?

Horatio. I think, it lacks of twelve.

Marcellus. No, it is struck.

Horatio. Indeed? I heard it not; it then draws near the season,
Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[Flourish of Trumpets, and Ordnance shot off, within.

Hamlet. What does this mean, my lord?

Horatio. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rounds,
Keepest wassail, and the swaggering up-spring reels; and as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Horatio. Is it a custom?
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT I.

SCENE V.

Ham. Ay, marry, is’t:
But to my mind,—though I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honour’d in the breach, than the observance.
This heavy-headed revel, east and west,
Makes us traduc’d, and tax’d of other nations:
They clepe us, drunkards, and with swinish phrase
Soil our addition; and, indeed it takes
From our achievements, though perform’d at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That, for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin,)18
By the o’ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason;
Or by some habit, that too much o’er-leavens
The form of plausible manners;—that these men,—
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect;
Being nature’s livery, or fortune’s star,—
Their virtues else (be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,)19
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: The dram of base
Doth all the noble substance often doubt,
To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!
Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us:20—
Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn’d,
Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from hell,
Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
Thou com’st in such a questionable shape,
That I will speak to thee; I’ll call thee, Hamlet,
King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me:
Let me not burst in ignorance! but tell,
Why thy canoniz’d bones, hearsed in death,
Have burst their cerements! why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn’d,
Hath op’d his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again! What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel,
Revisit’st thus the glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous; and we fools of nature,
So horribly to shake our disposition,
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?
Hor. It becometh you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.
MR. MACREADY AS HAMLET.
MR. STUART AS THE GHOST.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT I.

HAMLET. What couple whose heaven! What couple whose heaven!

HAMLET. Alas, poor ghost!

GHOST. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing To what I shall unfold.

HAMLET. Speak, I am bound to hear.

GHOST. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

HAMLET. What? GHOST. I am thy father's spirit; Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires, Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature, Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid To tell the secrets of my prison-house, I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood; Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres; Thy knotted and combined locks to part, Like quills upon the fretful porcupine: But this eternal blazon must not be To ears of flesh and blood:—List, list, O list!—If thou didst ever thy dear father love,—

HAMLET. O heaven!

GHOST. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

HAMLET. Murder?

GHOST. Murder most foul, as in the best it is; But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

HAMLET. Haste me to know it; that I, with wings as swift As meditation, or the thoughts of love, May sweep to my revenge.

GHOST. I find thee apt; And dullest should'st thou be than the fat weed That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf, Would'st thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear: "Tis given out, that sleeping in mine orchard, A serpent stung me; so the whole car of Denmark Is by a forged process of my death Rankly abus'd: but know, thou noble youth, The serpent that did sting thy father's life, Now wears his crown.

HAMLET. O, my prophetic soul! my uncle!

GHOST. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast, With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts, (O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power So to seduce!) won to his shameful lust The will of my most seeming virtuous queen: O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there! From me, whose love was of that dignity, That it went hand in hand even with the vow I made to her in marriage; and to decline Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor To those of mine! But virtue, as it never will be mov'd, Though lowness court it in a shape of heaven; So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd, Will sate itself in a celestial bed, And prey on garbage. But, soft! methinks, I scent the morning air; Brief let me be:—Sleeping within mine orchard, My custom always of the afternoon, Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole, With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial, And in the porches of mine ears did pour The leperous distillation; whose effect Holds such an enmity with blood of man, That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through The natural gates and alleys of the body; And, with a sudden vigour, it doth posset And curd, like eager droppings into milk, The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine; And a most instant tetter bark'd about, Most Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust, All my smooth body. Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand, Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd: Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin, Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd: No reckoning made, but sent to my account With all my imperfections on my head: O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not; Let not the royal bed of Denmark be A couch for luxury and damned incest. But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act, Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive Against thy mother aught; leave her to heaven, And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge, To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once! The glow-worm shows the matin to be near, And 'gins to pale his unequalled fire. Adieu, adieu! remember me.

HAMLET. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else? And shall I couple hell?—O fie!—Hold, hold my heart; And you, my sinews, grow not instant old, But bear me stiffly up!—Remember thee? Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat In this distracted globe. Remember thee? Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there;
And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmixed with baser matter: yes, by heaven.
O most pernicious woman!
O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables,—meet it is, I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark:

[Writing.

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is, Adieu, adieu! remember me.
I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within.] My lord, my lord,—
Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet,—
Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!

Ham. So be it!

Mar. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.27

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord

Ham. O, wonderful!

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No;

You will reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Ham. How say you then; would heart of man
Once think it?—

But you'll be secret,—

Hor. Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Ham. There's ne'er a villain, dwelling in all Denmark,
But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave, *

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are in the right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit, that we shake hands, and part:
You, as your business, and desire, shall point
you;—

For every man hath business, and desire,
Such as it is,—and, for my own poor part,
Look you, I will go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; yes,
'Faith, heartily.
With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,
Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As, "Well, well, we know it!"—or, "We could, an if we would!"—or, "If we list to speak!"—or,
"There he, an if they might!"
Or such ambiguous giving out, to note
That you know aught of me:—This do you swear,
So grace and mercy at your most need help you!

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money, and these notes, Reynaldo.

Reyn. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,
Before you visit him, to make inquiry
Of his behaviour.

Reyn. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said: very well said. Look you,
Inquire me first what Dánskera are in Paris;
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,
What company, at what expense; and finding,
By this encompassment and drift of question,
That they do know my son, come you more nearer
Than your particular demands will touch it:
Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;
As thus,—"I know his father, and his friends,
And, in part, him?"—Do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Reyn. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. And, in part, him?—but," you may say,
"not well:
But, if't be he I mean, he's very wild;
Addicted so and so;"—and there put on him
What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Reyn. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling, Drabbing:—You may go so far.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentlemen,
With all my love I do commend me to you:
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is
May do, to express his love and friend ing to you,
God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;
And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.
The time is out of joint;—O cursed spite!
That ever I was born to set it right!

Nay, come, let's go together. [Exeunt

Reyn. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. 'Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,22
That he is open to incontinency;
That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults so quaintly,
That they may seem the taints of liberty
The flash and out-break of a fiery mind;
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.

Reyn. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Reyn. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i'the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes,
The youth you breathe of, guilty, be assur'd,
He closes with you in this consequence;
"Good sir," or so; or "friend," or "gentleman,"—
According to the phrase, or the addition,
Of man, and country.

Reyn. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—He does—

What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was about to say some something:—Where did I leave?

Reyn. At, closes in the consequence

Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—"Ay, marry;"

He closes with you thus:—"I know the gentleman;
I saw him yesterday, or t'other day,
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,
There was he gaming; there o'ertook in his rouse;
There falling out at tennis: or, perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sale,
(Videlicet, a brothel,) or so forth."—
See you now;
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlases, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out;
So, by former lecture and advice,
Shall you my son: You have me, have you not?
Pol. My lord, I have.
Rey. God be wi' you; fare you well.
Pol. Good my lord,—
Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.
Rey. I shall, my lord.
Pol. And let him ply his music.
Rey. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?
Oph. Oh, my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!
Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?
Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd;
No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle; 50
Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other,
And with a look so piteous in purport,
As if he had been loosed out of hell,
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.
Pol. Mad for thy love?
Oph. But, truly, I do fear it.
Pol. What said he?
Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;
Then goes he to the length of all his arm;
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face,
As he would draw it. Long staid he so;
At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,—
He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,
As it did seem to shatter all his bulk,
And end his being: That done, he lets me go:
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
For out o' doors he went without their helps,
And, to the last, bended their light on me.
Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecestasy of love;
Whose violent property foredoes itself, 31
And leads the will to desperate undertakings,
As oft as any passion under heaven,
That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—
What, have you given him any hard words of late?
Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command,
I did repel his letters, and denied
His access to me.
Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry, that with better heed and judgment,
I had not quoted him: 32 I fear'd, he did but trifle,
And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy!

It seems, it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions,
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:
This must be known; which, being kept close,
might move
More grief to hide, than hate to utter love
Come. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guil-denstern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guilde-stern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need, we have to use you, did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it,
Since not the exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was: What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,
That,—being of so young days brought up with
him:
And, since, so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,—
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
Some little time: so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures; and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
That, open'd, lies within our remedy.
Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;
And, sure I am, two men there are not living,
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To show us so much gentry, and good will,
As to expend your time with us a while,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.
Ros. Both your majesties Might,
by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.
Guil. But we both obey;
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded.
King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.
Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Ro-

Enter Polonius.
Pol. The embassadors from Norway, my good
lord,
Are joyfully return'd.
King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.
Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God, and to my gracious king:
And I do think, (or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do,) that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.
King. O, speak of that; that do I long to hear.
Pol. Give first admittance to the embassadors;
My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.
King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.
He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.
Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

Pol. with Voltimand and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, my good friends!
Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?
Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and desires.
Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;
But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness: Whereat griev'd,—
That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests
On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys:
Receives rebuke from Norway: and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle, never more
To give the assay of arms against your majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee;
And his commission, to employ those soldiers
So levied as before, against the Polack:
With an entreaty, herein further shown,

[Gives a paper.
That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise;
On such regards of safety, and allowance,
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;
And, at our most consider'd time, we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.
Mean time, we thank you for your well-look labour:
Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together;
Most welcome home! [Exit Volt. and Cor.
Pol. This business is well ended.
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night, night, and time is time
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore,—since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,—
I will be brief: Your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it: for, to define true madness,
What is 't, but to be nothing else but mad:
But let that go.
Queen. More matter, with less art.
Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true, 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis, 'tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him then: and now remains,
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT II.

That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect;
For this effect, defective, comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend.
I have a daughter; have, while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: Now gather, and surmise.

—To the celestial, and my soul’s idol, the most beauteous Ophelia,— That’s an ill phrase, a vile phrase; "beautified" is a vile phrase; but you shall hear.—Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.—

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

Doubt thou, the stars are fire;
Doubt, that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt, I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.
Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet.

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me:
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Receive’d his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,
When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
(As I perceived it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,) what might you
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If I had play’d the desk, or table-book;
Or given my heart a working, mute and dumb;
Or look’d upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? no, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus did I bespeak;
"Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy sphere;
This must not be:" and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make,)—
Fell into a sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and, by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think, 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, (I’d fain know that,) That I have positively said, "’Tis so,"
When it prov’d otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:
[Pointing to his head and shoulder.
If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours together,
Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I’ll loose my daughter to
him:
Be you and I behind an arras then;
Mark the encounter: if he love her not,
And bo not from his reason fallen thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm, and carters.

King. Wo will try it.

Enter Hamlet, reading.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away;
I’ll read him presently:—O, give me leave.—

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Attendants.

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord?

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes,
is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That’s very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god, kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord

Ham. Let her not walk i’ the sun: conception is a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive, friend, look to’t.

Pol. How say you by that? [Aside.] Still harping on my daughter:—yet be knew me not at first;

HAMLET: "Slanders, sir, for the actual rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes purging thick amber and plum tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak backs.

All of which, sir, though I most powerfully and present believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down for you; for you, yourself, sir, should be as old as I am, if this a crook, you could go backward."
he said, I was a fishmonger: He is far gone, far gone: and, truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words!

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: All of which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, shall be as old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there's method in it. [Aside.] Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air.—How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Pol. You go to seek the lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you, sir! [To Pol.—Exit Pol.

Guil. My honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!—

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not overhappily; On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. 'Faith, her privates we.
ROS. To what end, my lord?

HAM. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the conscience of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

ROS. What say you? [To Guilt.

HAM. Nay, then I have an eye of you; [Aside.]—if you love me, hold not off.

GUI. My lord, we were sent for.

HAM. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moul't no feather. I have of late, (but, wherefore, I know not,) lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises: and, indeed, it goes, so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterl promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me, nor woman neither; though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

ROS. My lord, there is no such stuff in my thoughts.

HAM. Why did you laugh then, when I said, "Man delights not me?"?

ROS. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and bither are they coming to offer you service.

HAM. He that plays the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o'the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't. What players are they?

ROS. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

HAM. How chances it, they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

ROS. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

HAM. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

ROS. No, indeed, they are not.

HAM. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

ROS. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, sir, an aery of children, little cyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapp'd for 't: these are the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

HAM. What, are they children? who maintains them? how are they escoat'd? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are no better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

ROS. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarre them on to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

HAM. Is it possible?

GUI. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

HAM. Do the boys carry it away?

ROS. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.

HAM. It is not very strange: for my uncle is king of Denmark; and those, that would make mouths at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Flourish of Trumpets within.

GUI. There are the players.

HAM. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come then: the appertrance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

GUI. In what, my dear lord?

HAM. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw.
Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern;—and you too;—at each ear a hearer: that great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophecry, he comes to tell me of the players; mark it. —You say right, sir: o'Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome, —

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz! 50

Pol. Upon my honour, —

Ham. "Then came each actor on his ass," —

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ, and the liberty, these are the only men. 59

Ham. "O Jephthah, judge of Israel," —what a treasure hast thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why — "One fair daughter, and no more, The which he loved passing well."

Pol. Still on my daughter. [Aside.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter, that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why, "As by lot, God wot," 61 and then, you know, "It came to pass, As most it was," —"The first row of the pious chanson" will show you more; for look, my abridgment comes.

Enter Four or Five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all:—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! Why, thy face is valanced 53 since I saw thee last; Com'st thou to beg me in Denmark?—What! my young lady and mistress!—By'r-lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. 54

Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We 'll e'en to 't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: We 'll have a speech straight: Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

1st Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,—but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once: for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general: 56 but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments, in such matters, cried in the top of mine,) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, there were no sollets in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the author of affection: but called it, an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: If it live in your memory, begin at this line; let me see, let me see:—

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcian beast,—

'tis not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse, Hath now this dread and black complexion smar'd With heraldry more dismal; head to foot Now he in total cotes; horribly trick'd With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons; Buk'd and impast with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous and a damned light To their lord's murder: Roasted in wrath, and fire, And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore, With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandsire Priam seeks;—So proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent, and good discretion.

1st Play. Anon he finds him

Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword, Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, Repugnant to command: Unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage, strikes wide; But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword The unnerved father falls. Then senseless Ilium, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword Which was declining on the milky head Of reverend Priam, seem'd it the air to stick: So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood; And, like a neutral to his will and matter, Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still, The bold winds speechless, and the sea below As hush as death: anon the dreadful thunder Both rend the region: So, after Pyrrhus' peace,
A roused vengeance sets him new a work;
And never did the Cyclops' hammer fall
On Mars' armour, forg'd for proof etern;
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.
Out, out, thou strumpet Fortune! All you gods,
In general synod, take away her power;
Break all the spokes and fulleys from her wheel,
And bow the round nave down the hill of heaven,
As low as to the fiends!

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—
Pr'ythee, say on:—He's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on: come to Hecuba.

1st Play. But who, ah woe! had seen the mobled queen—

Ham. The mobled queen?

Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

1st Play. Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames
With hiss rheum; 48 a clot upon that head,
Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er-temed loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up;
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,
'Gainst fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd;
But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs;
The instant burst of clamour that she made,
(Unless things mortal move them not at all,) Would have made milch the burning eye of heaven,
And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his colour, and has tears in's eyes.—Pr'ythee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract, and brief chronicles, of the time: After your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. Odd's bodikin, man, much better: Use every man after his desert, and who shall 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: The less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

[Exit Pol., with some of the Players.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow.—Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the murder of Gonzago 1st Play. Ay, my lord.

ACT III.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference Get him from you, why he puts on this confusion; Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy? Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted; But from what cause he will by no means speak. Guilt. Nor do we find him forward to be sounds; But, with a crafty madness, keeps afool, When we would bring him on to some confession Of his true state.

Queen. Did you assay him To any pastime? Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players We o'er-raught on the way: of these we told him; And there did seem in him a kind of joy To hear of it: They are about the court; And, as I think, they have already order This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true: And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties, To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a further edge, And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks; I'll tent him to the quick; if he do blench, I know my course. The spirit, that I have seen, May be a devil: and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps, Out of my weakness, and my melancholy, (As he is very potent with such spirits,) Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds More relative than this: the play's the thing Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Ros. We shall, my lord. [Exit Ros. and Guilt.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too:

For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither That he, as 'twere by accident, may here Affront Ophelia: Her father, and myself (lawful espials,) Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen, We may of their encounter frankly judge; And gather by him, as he is behav'd, If 't be the affliction of his love, or no, That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you: And, for your part, Ophelia, I do wish, That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet's wildness: so shall I hope, your virtues Will bring him to his wonted way again, To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here:—Gracious, so please you, We will bestow ourselves:—Read on this book; [To Oph.

That show of such an exercise may colour Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,— 'Tis too much prov'd,—that, with devotion's visage, And pious action, we do sugar o'er The devil himself.

King. O, 'tis too true! how smart A lash that speech doth give my conscience! The harlot's cheek, beautied with plast'ring art, Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it, Than my deed to my most painted word: O heavy burden! [Aside.
Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord.
[Exeunt King and Pol.]

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question:—
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And, by opposing, end them?—To die,—to sleep,—
No more;—and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die;—to sleep;—
To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: There's the respect,
That makes calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin?28 who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life;
But that the dread of something after death,—
The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will;
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprise of great pitch and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now!
The fair Ophelia:—Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well, you did;
And, with them, words of so sweet breath composed
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind.
There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.23

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness; this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me: for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it: I loved you not

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery; Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in: What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven! We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us: Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him; that he may play the fool no where but in's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance: Go to; I'll no more of't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit Ham.
To be or not to be, that is the question.
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune
Or take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?

HAMLET.
Act 3 Sc 1
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT III.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

SCENE II.

Opf. O, what a noble mind is here o’erthrown!
The courtier’s, soldier’s, scholar’s, eye, tongue, sword:
The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
The obser’d of all observers! quite, quite down!
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck’d the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatch’d form and feature of blown youth,
Blasted with ecstasy: O, woe is me!
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter King and Polonius.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;
Nor what he spake, though it lack’d form a little,
Was not like madness. There’s something in his soul,
O’er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And, I do doubt, the batch, and the disclose,
Will be some danger: Which for to prevent,
I have, in quick determination,
Thus set it down; He shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the seas, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart;
Whereon his brains still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on’t?

Pol. It shall do well: But yet I do believe,
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia?
You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his grief; let her be round with him;
And I’ll be plac’d, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference: If she find him not,
To England send him; or confine him, where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch’d go.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the same.

Enter Hamlet, and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town-erier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul, to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows, and noise; I would have such a fellow whipped for o’er-doing Toremagant; it out herod’s Herod:

Pray you, avoid it.

1st Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o’er-step not the modesty of nature: for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure. Now this, over-done, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one, mast, in your allowance, o’er-weigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players, that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of christians, nor the gait of christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted, and bellowed, that I have thought some of nature’s journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1st Play. I hope, we have reformed that indifferently with us.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean time, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that’s villainous; and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.—

[Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

How now, my lord? will the king hear this piece of work?
Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.
Ham. Bid the players make haste.—
[Exit Pol.

Will you two help to hasten them?
Both. Ay, my lord. [Exit Ros. and Guildenstern, and Others.

Ham. What, ho; Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.
Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.
Hor. O, my dear lord,—
Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits,
To feed, and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?
No, let the candid tongue lick absurd pomp;
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
And could of men distinguish her election,
She hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
A man, that fortune's buffers and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those, Whose blood and judgment are so well co-mingled,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please: Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of hearts,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this.—
There is a play to-night before the king;
One scene of it comes near the circumstance,
Which I have told thee of my father's death.
I pr'ythee, when thou seest that act a-foot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe my uncle: if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen;
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face;
And, after, we will both our judgments join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord:
If he steal aught, the whilst this play is playing,
And scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:
Get you a place.

Danish March. A Flourish. Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?
Ham. Excellent, i'faith; of the camelion's dish:
I eat the air, promise-crammed: You cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet;
these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. My lord,—you played once in the university, you say? [To Pol.
Pol. That did I, my lord: and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?
Pol. I did enact Julius Caesar: I was killed i'the Capitol; Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?
Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metem more attractive.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King.
Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[LYING DOWN AT OPH.'S FEET.

Oph. No, my lord.
Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?
Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think, I meant country matters?
Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord.

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but he merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: But, by'r-lady, he must build churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, "For,
O for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot."
Trumpets sound. The dumb Show follows.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner does the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but, in the end, accepts his love. [Exit.]

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mewing machecho, it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they 'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: Bo not you ashamed to show, he'll not shamo to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught; I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter a King and a Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phoebus' cart gone round
Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;
And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen,
About the world have times twelve thirty been;
Since love our hearts, and Heaven did our hands,
Unite committal in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon
Make us again count o'er, ere love be done!
But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer, and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;
For women fear too much, even as they love;
And women's fear and love hold quantity;
In neither aught, or in extremity.
Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;
And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too
My operant powers their functions leave to do;
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd; and, haply, one as kind
For husband shalt thou——

P. Queen. O, confound the rest! Such love must needs be treason in my breast;
In second husband let me be accurst!
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. That's worn wood.

P. Queen. The instances, that second marriage move,
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;
A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe, you think what now you speak;
But, what we do determine, off we break,
Purpose is but the slave to memory;
Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ebbing, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own counteracts with themselves destroy:
Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye; nor 'tis not strange,
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;
The poor advance'd makes friends of enemies.
And hither to doth love on fortune tend:
For who not needs, shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I began,—
Our wills, and fates, do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.
So think thou wilt no second husband wed;
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose lock from me, day, and night.
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife;
If, once a widow, ever 1 be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now,—

[To Oph.]

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;
My spirits grow dull, and faint I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain!

[Exit.]
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT III.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?
Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.
King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in 't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i' the world.
King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.—

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.
Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse. So you mistake your husbands.—Begin, murderer;—leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come ——

——The croaking raven

Doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;
Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecat's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magick and dire property,
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pros the Poison into the Sleeper's ears.

Ham. He poisons him i'the garden for his estate.
His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frightened with false fire!
Queen. How fares my lord?
Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light:—away!
Pol. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but Ham. and Hor.

Ham. Why, let the strucken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play:
Forsomustmustwatch,whilesomesthesia;
Thus runs the world away.—

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me,) with two Provençal roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was Of Jove himself; and now reigns here A very, very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—
Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come, some music; come, the recorders.—

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.1—

Enter Rosenclantz and Guildenstern.

Come, some music.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer, to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir:—pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon, and my return, shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: But, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother:
Mr. Charles Kean

As

Hamlet

Ham. 'Tis now the very witching time of night

Act 3, Scene 2
therefore no more, but to the matter: My mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says: Your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderfull son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of discontent? you do, surely, but bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but, "While the grass grows,"—the proverb is something musty.

Enter the Players, with Recorders.

O, the recorders:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—2—Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these vantages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me? You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think, I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then shall I come to my mother by and by.—They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit Pol.

Ham. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, friends. [Exit Ros. Guil. Hor., &c.

'Tis now the very witching time of night;
When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out
Contagion to this world: Now could I drink hot blood,
And do such business as the bitter day
Would quake to look on. Soft: now to my mother.—
O, heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:
Let me be cruel, not unnatural:
I will speak daggers to her, but use none;
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:
How in my words sover she be shent,73 To give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the same.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you; I your commission will forthwith despatch, And he to England shall along with you: The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow Out of his lunes.

Guil. We will ourselves provide:
Most holy and religious fear it is, To keep those many bodies safe, That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound, With all the strength and armour of the mind, To keep itself from 'noyance; but much more

That spirit, upon whose weal depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw
What's near it, with it: it is a mazy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things,
Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the hoist'srous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;
For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. Guili.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:
Behind the arras I'll convey myself;
To hear the process; I'll warrant, she'll tax him home:
And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet, that some more audience, than a mother,
Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege:
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Pol.]

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven
It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't.
A brother's murder!—Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will;
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand,
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood?
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,
To wash it white as snow? Wherefore serves mercy,
But to confront the visage of offence?
And what 's in prayer, but this two-fold force,—
To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!—
That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shive by justice; And oft 'tis seen, the wicked urze itself

Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above;
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
To try what repentance can: What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent?
O wretched state! O bosom, black as death!
O limed soul; that struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd! Help, angels, make assay!
Bow, stubborn knees! and, heart, with strugis of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe;
All may be well!

[Retires and kneels.]

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying;
And now I'll do't;—and so he goes to heaven:
And so am I reveng'd? That would be scanu'd
A villain kills my father; and, for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
And, how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven?
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him: And am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No.
Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent:
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage;
Or in the incestuous pleasures of his bed;
At gaming, swearing; or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in 't:
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven:
And that his soul may be as damn'd, and black,
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days.

[Exit.]

The King rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him:
Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear with;
And that your grace hath screen’d and stood between Much heat and him. I’ll silence me e’en here.
Pray you, be round with him.
Queen. I’ll warrant you;
Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Pol. hides himself.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother; what’s the matter?
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.
Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.
Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.
Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?
Ham. What’s the matter now?
Queen. Have you forgot me?
Ham. No, by the rood, not so:
You are the queen, your husband’s brother’s wife;
And,—would it were not so!—you are my mother.
Queen. Nay, then I’ll set those to you that can speak.
Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not hudge;
You go not, till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the innmost part of you.
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?
Help, help, ho!
Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help!
Ham. How now! a rat?

[Draws.

Dead, for a ducat, dead.

[Ham. makes a pass through the Arras.
Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain.

[Tells, and dies.
Queen. O me, what hast thou done?
Ham. Nay, I know not:
Is it the king?
[ Lifts up the Arras, and draws forth Pol.
Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!
Ham. A bloody deed;—almost as bad, good mother,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king!
Ham. Ay, lady, ’twas my word.—Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!

[To Pol.

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:
Thou find’st, to be too busy, is some danger.—
Leave wringing of your hands: Peace; sit you down,
And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff;
If damned custom have not braz’d it so,
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.
Queen. What have I done, that thou dar’st wag thy tongue
In noise so rude against me?
Ham. Such an act,
That bruises the grace and blush of modesty;
Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows
As false as diers’ oaths; O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven’s face doth glow;
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me, what act,
That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow:
Hyperion’s curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband.—Look you now, what fol-

Here is your husband; like a mildew’d ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it, love; for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it’s humble,
And waits upon the judgment; And what judgment
Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,
Else, could you not have motion: But, sure, that

Is apoplex’d: for madness would not err;
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne’er so thrall’d,
But it reserv’d some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil wasn’t,
That thus hath cozen’d you at hoodman-blind?
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope. O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
Thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge;
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots,
As will not leave their tint.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an ensemled bed;
Stew'd in corruption; honeying, and making love
Over the nasty styfe;—

Queen. O, speak to me no more;
These words, like daggers enter in mine ears;
No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer and a villain:
A slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe
Of your precedent lord:—a vice of kings:
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket?

Queen. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A king
Of shreds and patches:
Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards!—What would your gracious figure?

Queen. Alas, he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide
That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?
O, say!

Ghost. Do not forget: This visitation
Is but to what thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits;
O, step between her and her fighting soul;
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works;
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?

Queen. Alas, how is't with you?
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the incorporeal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,

Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him! on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoint'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable.—Do not look upon me;
Lest, with this piteous action, you convert
My stern effects: then what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears, perchance, for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all, that is, I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing, but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!
My father, in his habit as he liv'd!
Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!

[Exit Ghost.

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!
My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful music: It is not madness,
That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flattering unctuous to your soul,
That not your trespass, but my madness speaks:
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place;
Whiles rank corruption, minug all within,
Infests unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue:
For in the fatness of these pursy times,
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg;
Yea, curb and soo, for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night: but go not to my uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat
Of habit's devil, is angel yet in this;
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frowk, or lively,
That aptly is put on: Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence; the next more easy:
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good night,
And when you are desirous to be bless’d,
I’ll blessing beg of you.—For this same lord,

(Pointing to Pol.)
I do repent: But heaven hath pleas’d it so,—
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good night!—
I must be cruel, only to be kind:
Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.
But one word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:
Let the blot king tempt you again to bed;
Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you, his mouse;
And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,
Or padding in your neck with his damn’d fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. ’Twere good, you let him know:
For who, that’s but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense, and secrecy,

Unpeg the basket on the house’s top,
Let the birds fly; and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Do thou assur’d, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack, I had forgot; ’tis so concluded on.

Ham. There’s letters seal’d; and my two school-fellows,—
Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang’d,—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery: Let it work;
For ’tis the sport, to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petter: and it shall go hard,
But I will delvoe one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, ’tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet.—
This man shall set me packing.
I’ll lug the guts into the neighbour room:—
Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you:—
Good night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; Ham dragging in Pol.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There’s matter in these sighs; these profound heaves;
You must translate; ’tis fit we understand them:
Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.—
[To Ros. and Guild., who go out.
Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea, and wind, when both contend
Which is the mightier: In his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier cries, “A rat! a rat!”

F

And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!
It had been so with us, had we been there:
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer’d?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrained, and out of haunt,
This mad young man: but, so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit;
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill’d:
O’er whom his very madness, like some ore,
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.
King. O, Gertrude, come away!
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse.—Ho! Guildenstern!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Friends both, go join you with some further aid:
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:
Go, seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.
[Exeunt Ros. and Guld.
Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander,—
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our name,
And hit the wond'rous air.—O come away!
My soul is full of discord, and dismay.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Hamlet.
Ham.—Safely stowed.—[Ros. &c. within.
Hamlet! lord Hamlet!] But soft,—what noise? who calls on Hamlet? O, here they come.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?
Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.
Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.
Ham. Do not believe it.
Ros. Believe what?
Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge!
—what replication should be made by the son of a kings?
Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?
Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthing, to be last swallowed: When he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.
Ham. I am glad of it: A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.
Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.
Ham. The body is with the king; but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—
Guil. A thing, my lord?
Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the same.

Enter King, attended.
King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.
How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose?
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And, where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: Diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev'd,

Enter Rosencrantz.
Or not at all.—How now? what hath befallen?
Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
We cannot get from him.
King. But where is he?
Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.
King. Bring him before us.
Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.
King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?
Ham. At supper.
King. At supper? Where?
Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten:
a certain conviction of politic worms are 'e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet:
we eat all creatures else, to fat us; and we fat our-seives for maggots: Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table; that's the end.
King. Alas, alas!
Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.
King. What dost thou mean by this?
Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him 'tis the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

[Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—Which we do tender, as we dearly grieveFor that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence
With fiery quickness: Therefore, prepare thyself;The bark is ready, and the wind at help,The associates tend, and every thing is bentFor England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub, that sees them. But, come; for England!—Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: Father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;
Delay it not, I' ll have him hence to-night:
Away; for every thing is seal'd and done
That else leans on the affair: Pray you, make haste.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught,
(As my great power thereof may give thee sense;
Since yet thy cettatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free ace
Pays homage to us,) thou may'st not coldly set
Our sovereign process; which imports at full,
By letters concurring to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;
For like the hectic in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me: Till I know 'tis done,
How'er my laps, my joys will never begin.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king;

Tell him, that, by his licence, Fortinbras
Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye,
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on. [Exeunt For. and Forces.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who Commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,
Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, sir, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it
Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,
Will not debate the question of this straw:
This is the imposition of much wealth and peace;
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without
Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir.

[Exeunt Cap. Ros.

Ham. Will 't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I will be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good, and market of his time,
Be but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before, and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason
To lust in us uns'd. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on the event,—
A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part Wisdom,
And, ever, three parts coward,—I do not know
Why yet I live to say, 'This thing's to do;'—
Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means
To do’t. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me: Witness, this army of such mass, and charge, Led by a delicate and tender prince; Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff’d, Makes mouths at the invisible event; Exposing what is mortal, and unsure, To all that fortune, death, and danger, dare, Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great, Is, not to stir without great argument; But greatly to find quarrel in a straw, When honour’s at the stake. How stand I then,
That have a father kill’d, a mother stain’d, Excitements of my reason, and my blood, And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see The imminent death of twenty thousand men, That, for a fantasy, and trick of fame, Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause, Which is not tomb enough, and continent, To hide the slain?—O, from this time forth, My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!

[Exit.

SCENE V.—Elsinore.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Queen and Horatio.

Queen.—I will not speak with her.
Hor. She is importunate; indeed, distract; Her mood will needs be pitied.
Queen. What would she have?
Hor. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears, There’s tricks ’t the world, and hems, and beats her heart; Spurns curiously at straws; speaks things in doubt, That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing, Yet the unshaped use of it doth move The hearers to collection; they aim at it; And both the words up fit to their own thoughts; Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them, Indeed would make one think, there might be thought, Though nothing sure yet much unhappily.
Queen. ’Twere good she were spoken with; for she may strew Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds:
Let her come in. [Exit Hor.

To my sick soul, as sin’s true nature is, Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:
So full of artless jealousy is guilt, It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Horatio, with Ophelia.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?
Queen. How now, Ophelia?
Oph. How should I your true love know From another one? By his cockle hat and staff, And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

He is dead and gone, lady, [Sing.
He is dead and gone;
At his head a grass-green turf,
At his heels a stone
O, ho!

Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,— Oph. Pray you, mark.
White his shroud as the mountain snow,

Enter King.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.
Oph. Larded all with sweet flowers;
Which bewept to the grave did go,
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?
Oph. Well, God ’teld you! They say, the owl was a baker’s daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.
Oph. Pray, let us have no words of this; but when they ask you, what it means, say you this:

Good morrow, ’tis Saint Valentine’s day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine:
Then up he rose, and don’d his clothes,
And dupt’d the chamber door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!
Oph. Indeed, without an oath, I’ll make an end

By Gis, and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do’t, if they come to’t;
By cock, they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promis’d me to wed:
So would I ha’ done, by yonder sun,
An thou had’st not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?
ACT IV.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

SCENE V.

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they should lay him in the cold ground: My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies: good night, good night.

[Exit.]

King. Follow her close; give her a good watch, I pray you. [Exit II. Hou.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs All from her father's death: And now behold, O Gertrude, Gertrude, When sorrows come, they come not single spies, But in battalions! First, her father slain; Next, your son gone; and he most violent author Of his own just remove: The people muddied, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers, For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greedily, In hugger-mugger to inter him: Poor Ophelia Divided from herself, and her fair judgment; Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts. Last, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France: Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, And wants not buzzers to infect his ear With pestilent speeches of his father's death; Wherein necessity, of matter beggar’d, Will nothing stick our person to arraign In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this, Like to a murdering piece, in many places Gives me superfluous death! [A Noise within.]

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Attend. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door: What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord; The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste, Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erbears your officers! The rabble call him, lord; And, as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The rutters and props of every word, They cry, "Choose we; Laertes shall be king!" Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds, "Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!"

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!

O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter Laertes, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Dan. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Dan. We will, we will. [They retire without the Door.

Laer. I thank you:—keep the door.—O thou vile king, Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood, that's calm, proclaims me bastard;

Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes, That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?— Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person There's such divinity doth hedge a king, That treason can but peep to what it would, Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incensed?—Let him go, Ger- trude—

Speak, man

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with:

To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil! Conscience, and grace, to the profoundest pit! I dare damnation: To this point I stand,— That both the worlds I give to negligence, Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd Most throughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you

Laer. My will, not all the world's; And, for my means, I'll husband them so well, They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes, If you desire to know the certainty Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your re- venge, That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe, Winner and loser?
Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms;
And, like the kind life-read'ring pelican,
Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak
Like a good child, and a true gentleman.
That I am guiltless of your father's death,
And am most sensibly in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgment 'pear,
As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within.] Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Enter Ophelia, fantastically dressed with Straws and Flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt,
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!—
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight,
Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!—
O heavens! is 't possible, a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
Nature is fine in love: and, where 'tis fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself.
After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him barefac'd on the bier;
Hey no nonny, nonny hey nonny:
And in his grave rain'd many a tear;—

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,
It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing, "Down a-down, an you call him a-down-a." O, how the wheel becomes it!
It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance;
pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies,
that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness; thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines:—there's rue for you; and here's some for me:—
we may call it, herb of grace o' Sundays:—you may wear your rue with a difference.—There's a daisy:—I would give you some violets; but they withered all, when my father died:—They say, he made a good end,—

For nonny sweet Robin is all my joy, [Sings.]

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,
She turns to favour and to prettiness.

Oph. And will be not come again?
And will be not come again?
No, no, he is dead,
Go to thy death-bed,
He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,
All flavens was his poll:
He is gone, he is gone,
And we cast away moan;
God's a mercy on his soul!

And of all christian souls! I pray God. God be wi'you! [Exit Oph.

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,
Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me:
If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
To you in satisfaction; but, if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so;
His means of death, his obscure funeral,—
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones,
No noble rite, nor formal ostentation,—
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call 't in question.

King. So you shall;
And, where the offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Horatio, and a Servant.

Hor. What are they, that would speak with me?
Serv. They say, they have letters for you.
Hor. Let them come in.—[Exit Serv.

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

1st Sail. God bless you, sir.
Hor. Let him bless thee too.

1st Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir; it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT IV.

SCENE VII.

Hor. [Reads.] Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king; they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase: Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compiled valour; and in the grapple I beard them: on the instant, they got clear of our ship; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me, like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldest fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear, will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell. He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet.

Come, I will give you way for these your letters; And do't the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the same.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal, And you must put me in your heart for friend; Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear, That he, which hath your noble father slain, Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears:—But tell me, Why you proceeded not against these feats, So crimeful and so capital in nature, As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things else, You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons; Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd, But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother, Lives almost by his looks; and for my self, (My virtue, or my plague, be it either which,) She is so conjunctive to my life and soul, That, as the star moves not but in his sphere, I could not but by her. The other motive. Why to a public count I might not go, Is, the great love the general gender56 bear him: Who, dripping all his faults in their affection, Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone, Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows, Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind, Would have reverted to my bow again, And not where I had aim'd them. Laer. And so have I a noble father lost; A sister driven into desperate terms; Whose worth, if praises may go back again, Stood challenger on mount of all the age For her perfections:—But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think, That we are made of stuff so flat and dull, That we can let our beard be shock'd with danger, And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more: I loved your father, and we love ourselves; And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,— How now? what news?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet: This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say: I saw them not; They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them:— Leave us. [Exit Mess.

[Reads.] High and mighty, you shall know, I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return.

Hamlet.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back? Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. "Naked,"— And, in a postscript here, he says, "alone:" Can you advise me?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come; It warms the very sickness in my heart, That I shall live and tell him to his teeth, "Thus diddest thou."

King. If it be so, Laertes, As how should it be so? how otherwise?— Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord; So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,— As checking at his voyage, and that he means No more to undertake it,—I will work him To an exploit, now ripe in my device, Under the which he shall not choose but fall: And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe; But even his mother shall uncharge the practice, And call it, accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd The rather, if you could devise it so, That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right. You have been talk'd of since your travel much, And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality, Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts Did not together pluck such envy from him, As did that one; and that, in my regard, Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord? King. A very ribband in the cap of youth, Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears, Than settled age his sables, and his weeds, Importing health and graveness.—Two months since,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy,— I have seen myself; and serv'd against the French, And they can well on horseback: but this gallant Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat; And to such wondrous doing brought his horse, As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd With the brave beast: so far he topp'd my thought, That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks, Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman, was't? King. A Norman. Laer. Upon my life, Lamord. King. The very same. Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch indeed, And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you; And gave you such a masterly report, For art and exercise in your defence, And for your rapier most especial, That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed, If one could match you: the scrimers of their nation, He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, If you oppos'd them: Sir, this report of his Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy, That he could nothing do, but wish and beg Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you. Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord? King. Laertes, was your father dear to you? Or are you like the painting of a sorrow, A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this? King. Not that I think, you did not love your father But that I know, cove is begun by time; And that I see, in passages of proof, Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.

There lives within the very flame of love A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it, And nothing is at a like goodness still; For goodness, growing to a pleurisy, Dies in his own too-much: That we would do, We should do when we would; for this would changes, And hath abatements and delays as many, As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents; And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh, That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o'the ulcer:

Hamlet comes back; What would you undertake, To show yourself in deed your father's son More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i'the church. King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize; Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes; Will you do this, keep close within your chamber: Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home: We'll put on those shall praise your excellence, And set a double varnish on the fame The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine, togethert, Aud wager o'er your heads: he, being remiss, Most generous, and free from all contriving, Will not peruse the foils; so that, with ease, Or with a little shuffling, you may choose A sword unblunted, and, in a pass of practice, Respite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't: And, for the purpose, I'll anoint my sword. I bought an union of a mountebank, So mortal, that but dip a knife in it, Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare, Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death, That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point With this contagion; that, if I gall him slightly, It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this; Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means, May fit us to our shape: if this should fail, And that our drift look through our bad performance, 'Twere better not assay'd; therefore this project Should have a back, or second, that might hold, If this should blast in proof. Soft;—let me see:— We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning,— I ha't: When in your motion you are hot and dry,
(As make your bouts more violent to that end,) And that he calls for drink, I’ll have preferr’d him A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping, If he be chance escape your venom’d stick, Our purpose may hold there. But stay, what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another’s heel, So fast they follow.—Your sister’s drown’d, Laertes. Laer. Drown’d! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows ascaunt the brook, That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream; Therewith fantastic garlands did she make Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples, That liberal shepherds give a grosser name, But our cold maids do dead men’s fingers call them: There on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke; When down her woedy trophies, and herself, Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide;

And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up: Which time, she chantèd snatches of old tunes; As one incapable of her own distress, Or like a creature native and indu’d Unto that element: but long it could not be, Till that her garments, heavy with their drink, Pull’d the poor wretch from her melodious lay To muddy death.

Laer. Ahas, then, she is drown’d? Queen. Drown’d, drown’d.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia, And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet It is our trick; nature her custom holds, Let shame say what it will: when these are gone, The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord! I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze, But that this folly drowns it.

[Exit. King. Let’s follow, Gertrude: How much I had to do to calm his rage! Now fear I, this will give it start again; Therefore let’s follow.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church Yard.

Enter Two Clowns, with Spades, &c.

1st Clo. Is she to be buried in christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2nd Clo. I tell thee, she is; therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it christian burial.

1st Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2nd Clo. Why, ’tis found so.

1st Clo. It must be so offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: If I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: Argal, she drowned herself wittingly.

2nd Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman deliver.

1st Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, will he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: Argal, he, that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2nd Clo. But is this law?

1st Clo. Ay, marry is’t; crowner’s-quest law.

2nd Clo. Will you ha’ the truth on’t? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of christian burial.

1st Clo. Why, there thou say’st: And the more pity; that great folks shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam’s profession.

2nd Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1st Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2nd Clo. Why, he had none.

1st Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the scripture? The scripture says, Adam digged; Could he dig without arms? I’ll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself——

2nd Clo. Go to.

1st Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2nd Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.
1st Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith; the gallows does well: But how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill, to say, the gallows is built stronger than the church; argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come.

2nd Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1st Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

2nd Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1st Clo. To 't.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

1st Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating: and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker; the houses that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Vaughn, and fetch me a stoup of liquor. [Exit 2nd Clo.

1st Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love, Methought it was very sweet, To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behave O, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business? he sings at grave-making.

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of casiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1st Clo. But age, with his stealing steps, Hath claw'd me in his clutch, And hath shipped me into the land, As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: How the knave jouls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a curiour; which could say, "Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?" This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, 'e'en so: and now my lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade: Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see 't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats with them? mine ache to think on 't.

1st Clo. A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, [Sings. For—and a shrouding sheet: O, a pit of clay for to be made For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up a skull.

Ham. There's another: Why may not that be the scull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits now? his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rudo knave now to knock him about the scorne with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indeutures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow:— Whose grave's this, sirrah?

1st Clo. Mine, sir.—

O, a pit of clay for to be made [Sings. For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in 't.

1st Clo. You lie out on 't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in 't, yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't, and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1st Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1st Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman then?

1st Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

1st Clo. One, that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the lord, Horatio, these three years I have
Mr. H. Hall, and Mr. Vandrey

'If I come again, come you."
'Who builds a parsonage, builds a sepulchre or a Carmelite.

taken note of it; the age is grown so pickled, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he calls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1st Clo. Of all the days i’ the year, I came to ’t that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long’s that since?

1st Clo. Canst thou tell that? every fool can tell that: it was that very day that young Hamlet was born: he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

1st Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, ’tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1st Clo. ’Twill not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1st Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1st Clo. ’Faith, e’en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1st Clo. Why, here in Denmark; I have been sexton here, man, and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i’ the earth ere he rot?

1st Clo. ’Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pokey corses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a Tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1st Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here’s a scull now hath lain you i’ the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1st Clo. A whoreson mad fellow’s it was; whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1st Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same scull, sir, was Yorick’s scull, the king’s jester.

Ham. This?

1st Clo. E’en that.

Ham. Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hang those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady’s chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr’ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What’s that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander looked o’ this fashion i’ the earth

Hor. E’en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

[Throws down the Scull.

Hor. E’en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses wo may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. ’Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: As thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returned to dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loan: And why of that loan, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Caesar, dead, and turn’d to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away: O, that the earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a wall to expel the winter’s flaw! But soft! but soft! aside;—Here comes the king, Enter Priests, &c., in Procession; the Corpse of Ophelia, Laertes and Mourners following; King, Queen, their Trains, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: Who is this they follow? And with such maimed rites! This doth betoken, The corse they follow, did with desperate hand Fordo its own life. ’Twas of some estate: Couch we a while, and mark. [Retiring with Hon.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes

A very noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

1st Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg’d

As we have warranty: Her death was doubtful;
And, but that great command o’ersways the order,
She should in ground unsanctified have lodg’d
Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards,93 flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her,
Yet here she is allow’d her virgin crants,94
Her maiden strewnments, and the bringing home
Of bell and burial.

Lae.
Must there no more be done?
1st Priest.
No more be done!
We should profane the service of the dead,
To sing a requiem, and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

Lae.
Lay her i’ the earth;—
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
May violets spring!—I tell thee, churlish priest,
A minist’ring angel shall my sister be,
When thouliest bowling.

Ham.
What, the fair Ophelia!
Queen. Sweets to the sweet: Farewell!

[Scattering flowers.

I hop’d, thou should’st have been my Hamlet’s wife;
I thought, thy bride-bed to have deck’d, sweet maid,
And not have strew’d thy grave.

Lae.
O, treble woe
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Depriv’d thee of!—Hold off the earth a while,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Leaps into the Grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead;
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o’er-top old Pelion, or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wand’ring stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I,
Hamlet the Dane.

Lae.
The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him.

Ham. Thou pray’st not well.
I pr’ythee, take thy fingers from my throat
For, though I am not splenetic and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom fear: Hold off thy hand.

King. Pinch them asunder.

Queen.
Hamlet, Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—

Hor.
Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the Grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme,
Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov’d Ophelia; forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love
Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. ‘Zounds, show me what thou’lt do:
Woul’t weep? woul’t fight? woul’t fast? woul’t tear thyself?

Woul’t drink up Eisi? eat a crocodile?
I’ll do.—Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I:
And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw
Millions of acres on us; till our ground,
Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou’lt mouth,
I’ll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness:
And thus a while the fit will work on him;
Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couplets are disclos’d,
His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir;
What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov’d you ever: But it is no matter;
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.

[Exit. King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him.—

[Exit Hor.

Strengthen your patience in our last night’s speech;

We’ll put the matter to the present push.—
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—
This grave shall have a living monument:
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other;—
You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep: methought, I lay
ACT V.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Scene 11.

Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly, And prais'd be rashness for it.—Let us know, Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well, When our deep plots do pail; and that should teach us, There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin, My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark Grop'd I to find out them: had my desire; Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew To mine own room again: making so bold, My fears forgetting manners, to unseal Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio, A royal knavery; an exact command,— Larded with many several sorts of reasons, Importing Denmark's health, and England's too, With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,— That, on the supervise, no leisure bated, No, not to stay the grinding of the axe, My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission; read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

Hor. Ay, 'beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villanies, Or I could make a prologue to my brains, They had begun the play;—I sat me down; Devis'd a new commission; wro'to it fair: I once did hold it, as our statist's do, A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much How to forget that learning; but, sir, now It did me yeoman's service: Wilt thou know The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,—As England was his faithful tributary; As love between them like the palm might flourish; As peace should still her wheaten garland wear, And stand a comma 'tween their amities; And many such like as's of great charge,— That, on the view and knowing of these contents, Without dobatement further, more, or less, He should the bearers put to sudden death, Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordain'd; I had my father's signet in my purse, Which was the model of that Danish seal Folded the writ up in form of the other; Subscrib'd it; gave't the impression; plac'd it safely,

The changeling never known: Now, the next day Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment;

They are not near my conscience; their defeat Does by their own insinuation grow:

'Tis dangerous, when the baser nature comes Between the pass and fell incensed points Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon?

He that hath kill'd my king, and whor'd my mother; Popp'd in between the election and my hopes; Thrown out his angle for my proper life, And with such cozenage; is 't not perfect conscience, To quit him with this arm? and is 't not to be damn'd,

To let this canker of our nature come Into further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England, What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine And a man's life no more than to say, one. But I am very sorry, good Horatio, That to Laertes I forgot myself; For by the image of my cause, I see The portraiture of his: I'll count his favours: But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace; who comes here?

Enter Osric.

Os. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him: He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'Tis a chough, but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Os. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit: Your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Os. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT V.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks it is very sultry and hot; or my complexion—

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,—as 'twere,—I cannot tell how.—My lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[Ham. moves him to put on his hat.]

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for my ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes: believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society, and great showing: Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his deportment suffers no perdition in you;—though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy the arithmetic of memory; and yet but raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of exultation, I take him to be a soul of great article;98 and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and, who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is 't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do 't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me;—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr: I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his need he's unfollowed.

Ham. What 's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has impawned, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the margin, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more gorman to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides; I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on: Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish: Why is this impawned, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid, on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: If it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. [Exit.]

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well, to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug, before he sucked it.99 Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drossy age dotes on,) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yestery collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial: the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT V.

Scene II.

[Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osric, and Attendants with Foils, &c.]

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the Hand of Laert. into that of Ham.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have done you wrong;
But pardon it, as you are a gentleman.
This presence knows, and you must needs have heard,
How I am punish’d with a sore distraction.
What I have done,
That might your nature, honour, and exception,
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.
Was’t Hamlet wrong’d Laertes? Never, Hamlet:
If Hamlet from himself be ta’en away,
And, when he’s not himself, does wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.
Who does it then? His madness: If’t be so

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong’d;
His madness is poor Hamlet’s enemy.
Sir, in this audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpose’d evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot my arrow o’er the house,
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
To my revenge: but in my terms of honour,
I stand aloof; and will no reconciliation,
Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungord: But till that time,
I do receive your offer’d love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother’s wager frankly play.—
Give us the foils; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I’ll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star i’the darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.—
Cousin Hamlet,
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your grace hath laid the odds o’the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it: I have seen you both:—
But since he’s better’d, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: These foils have all a length?

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table:—

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordinance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet’s better breath;
And in the cup an union shall he throw,?
Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark’s crown have worn; Give me the cups;
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to earth,
Now the king drinks to Hamlet.—Come, begin;—
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord.

[They play.

47
Ham. One.
Lae. No.
Ham. Judgment.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.
Lae. Well,—again.

King. Stay, give me drink: Hamlet, this pearl is thine;¹⁰⁰
Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and Cannon shot off within.
Ham. I'll play this bout first, set it by awhile.
Come.—Another hit; What say you? [They play.
Lae. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scent of breath.—Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows:
The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord;—I pray you, pardon me.

King. It is the poison'd cup; it is too late.

[Aside.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Lae. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Lae. And yet it is almost against my conscience.

[Aside.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: You do but dally;
I pray you, pass with your best violence;
I am afraid, you make a wanton of me.

Lae. Say you so? come on. [They play.

Osr. Nothing neither way.

Lae. Have at you now.

[Laer. wounds Ham; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and Ham. wounds Laer.

King. Part them, they are incensed.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho! Hor. They bleed on both sides:—How is it, my lord?

Osr. How is 't, Laertes?

Lae. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe, Osr.

Osr. I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!—The drink, the drink:—I am poison'd! [Dies.

Ham. O villain!—Ho! let the door be lock'd: Treachery! seek it out. [Laer. falls.

Lae. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good,
In thee there is not half an hour's life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated, and even now'd: the foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd;
I can no more; the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point
Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work.

[Stabs the King.

Osr. and Lords. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion:—Is the union here?
Follow my mother. [King dies.

Lae. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.—
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee;
Nor thine on me! [Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio:—Wretched queen, adieu!—
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That aroo be mute or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest,) O, I could tell you,—
But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it;
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,
Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou 'rt a man,—Give me the cup; let go! by heaven I'll have it.—O God!—Horatio,¹°¹ what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me?
If thou dost ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story. [March afar off, and Shot within.

What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;—
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit;¹°²
I cannot live to hear the news from England:
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrences, more or less,
Which have solicited, — the rest is silence. [Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart; — good night, sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest! Why does the drum come hither? [March within.

Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors, and Others.

Fort. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it, you would see?
If aught of woe, or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc! — O proud death!
What feast is towards in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes, at a shot,
So bloodily hast struck?

1st Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late,
The ears are senseless, that should give us hearing,
To tell him, his commandment is fulfill'd,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:
Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth; Had it the ability of life to thank you;
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,
Are here arriv'd; give order, that these bodies

High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak, to the yet unknowing world,
How these things come about: So shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts;
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;
Of deaths put on by cunning, and for'rd cause
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more;
But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild; lest more mis-chance,
On plots, and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage,
The soldiers' music, and the rites of war,
Speak loudly for him. —
Take up the bodies: — Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.

Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead March.

[Execut, bearing off the dead Bodies; after which, a peal of Ordnance is shot off.]
NOTES TO HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

1 The rivals of my watch.
Rivals is here used as partners.

2 A piece of him.
In giving this answer, says Dr. Warburton, Horatio extends his hand to the questioner, but Mr. Steevens regards it as no other than a cant expression.

3 He smote the stolled Polack on the ice.
Polack was, at that time, the usual name for an inhabitant of Poland. Horatio alludes to the deceased king having slain a prince of that country.

4 Well ratified by law and heraldry.
Mr. Upton says, that Shakspeare sometimes expresses one thing by two substantives, and that law and heraldry means, by the herald law.

5 By the same co-mart
And carriage of the article design'd.
Co-mart is a joint bargain, carriage of the article is the meaning and import of it.

6 Rovage, i.e. tumult, hurry.

7 As, stars with trains of fire and doves of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star.
A line is evidently omitted previously to these two.
"When," says Mr. Malone, "Shakspeare had told us that the graves stood tenantless, &c., which are wonders confined to the earth, he naturally proceeded to say (in the line now lost) that yet other prodigies appeared in the sky, as stars with trains of fire, &c." He also reads, disasters dimmed the sun; by the moist star is meant the moon.

8 I am too much i' the sun.
Alluding probably to his being kept from the seclusion of his studies to be paraded in the court of his uncle as the "chiefest courtier." Too much in the way of mirth and feasting.

9 In going back to school to Wittenburg.
The university of Wittenburg was not founded until 1502, and consequently did not exist until long after the period to which this tragedy is referable.

10 My dearest foe.
Dearest is most immediate and important.

Unmaster'd, i.e. unrestrained, licentious.

And keep you in the rear of your affection.
Do not advance so far as your affection and feelings would lead you.

13 And reck not his own read.
That is, heed's not his own lessons.

14 And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou character.
That is, write or infix them in thy memory.

15 Take each man's censure.
By censure is not meant reproof, but opinion.

16 Set your entreatments.
Objects of entreaty, favours for which a lover might sue.

17 And the swaggering up-spring reels.
That is, the blustering upstart is intoxicated.

18 Complexion, i.e. temperament, constitution, bias, or characteristic.

19 Doth all the noble substance often dount.
Dout is supposed to be a contraction of do out, i.e. efface or oblirrate. It is a word of similar construction to doff for do off, which is frequently used by Shakspeare.

20 Angels and ministers of grace defend us.
Dr. Johnson has very judiciously observed that Hamlet's address to the ghost consists of three parts. When he first beholds it he strengthens himself with an invocation; he then deliberates with himself and determines that he will venture to speak to it; and finally, throwing aside his terror, he abandons himself to the impulse of the moment, and calls it, Hamlet, king, father, &c.

21 Toys of desperation, i.e. desperate fancies, wild thoughts.

22 I'll make a ghost of him that lets me.
To let is a word which anciently signified to prevent, to hinder.

23 Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd.
Despatched is here used for bereit.

24 Unhouse'd, disappointed, unen'd.
Unhouse'd is without receiving the sacrament; disappointed is synonymous with unappointed, and means, therefore, unprepared; and unen'd is without extreme unction.

25 His uneffectual fire.
Fire shining without generating heat.

26 And shall I couple hell? O fie!
These two last words, which not only spoil the measure of the line, but have an almost ludicrous expression, are suspected of being an interpolation; as they are found only in the two earliest quartos.
NOTES TO HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

27 Come bird, come.

Hamlet, desiring his friends to approach, calls to them in the terms which falconers use to a hawk in the air, when they would have him come down to them.

28 Inquire me first, what Danzers.

That is, natives of Denmark. In Warner’s Albion’s England, Danske is the ancient name of Denmark.

29 You must not put another scandal on him.

Mr. Theobald reads an utter scandal; but Mr. Malone thinks the text to be correct, and that it means a different and more scandalous vice than an accidental error—namely, habitual incontinency.

30 Ungarter’d, and down-gyved to his ancle.

Down-gyved means, hanging down, like the loose eineture which confines the fetters round the ankles. A consideration of this passage will show how far many of our distinguished actors have departed from the meaning of Shakspere, when they enter with the stocking rolled half-way down one leg. A general neglect of dress and personal appearance is what is implied by the poet.

31 Foredoes itself, i.e., destroys itself.

32 I had not quoted him.

Quoted here means regarded, or observed him.

33 To show us so much gentrity.

That is, to show us so much kindness or politeness.

34 And here give up ourselves in the full bent.

With all our ability and power; with the utmost extremity of exertion.

35 Was falsely borne in hand.

Trifled with, and deceived; to bear in hand is to delude by fair statements, without any intention of performance.

36 To expostulate, i.e., to inquire or discuss.

37 Conception is a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive—friend, look to’t.

This is the reading of the quarto: the folio has—but not as your daughter, &c. With either reading, the meaning is the same—conception (i.e., understanding) is a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive, (i.e., be pregnant), friend, look to’—have a care of that.

38 My thanks are not too dear a halfpenny.

The modern editors read, at a halfpenny. Mr. Malone thinks the text is correct as it stands—the thanks are not a halfpenny too dear. It is probable that Hamlet intended some obscurity in his speech, to mislead his questioners as to his sanity.

39 We coted them on the way.

To cote is to overtake. In The Return from Parnassus, a comedy, 1606:

Marry, we presently coted and outstript them.

40 The lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for’t.

The lady shall have no obstruction, unless from the lameness of the verse: or it may mean, that she shall have liberty to mar the measure, rather than not fully express herself.

41 I think their inhibition comes by means of the late innovation.

Shakspere makes Hamlet allude to an occurrence which had lately taken place in England. Several companies of actors, in his time, had their permission to act any longer at an established house taken away, in consequence of their practice of introducing personal abuse into their comedies.

42 There is, sir, an airy of children.

An allusion to the young singing lads of the chapel royal, or St. Paul’s, who performed plays, to the detriment of the regular actors. The former are mentioned in a puritanical pamphlet, entitled, The Children of the Chapel stript and whipt: 1569:—“Plaies will neuer be supprest while her majesties unfinishd minions flaunt it in silkes and satins. They had as well be at their popish service in the deuils garments,” &c. Also, in Jack Drum’s Entertainment, 1601:

I saw the children of Powles last night;
And troth they pleas’d me pretty, pretty well,
The spee in time will do it handsomely.

43 Little eyases, that ery out on the top of question.

That is, young nestlings—creatures just out of the egg, who ery out or declaim in that high tone of voice usual in children.

44 Escoted, i.e., paid or maintained.

45 Will they pursue the quality longer than they can sing?

Hamlet means, what will be their ultimate vocation? will they be actors no longer than they remain singing boys in the choir?

46 Hercules and his load too.

Probably an allusion to the Globe playhouse, on the Bankside, the sign of which was Hercules carrying the globe. Shakspere infers, that the boys carried away much of the patronage of this establishment.

47 Let me comply with you in this garb.

Sir T. Hanmer reads—compliment with you; but Mr. Stevens says, comply is apparently used in the sense of compliment.

48 I know a hawk from a handsaw.

“This,” says Dr. Warburton, “was a common, proverbial speech. The Oxford editor alters it to—I know a hawk from a henshaw; as if the other had been a corruption of the players; whereas the poet found the proverb thus corrupted in the mouth of the people; so that the critic’s alteration only serves to show us the original of the expression.”
Buz, buz!

Mere idle talk—the buz of the vulgar. "Buz," says Blackstone, "used to be an interjection at Oxford, when any one began a story that was generally known there."

For the law of writ, and the liberty, these are the only men.

The law of writ means the rules of writing or composition: liberty seems to be here used as freedom, or spirit. Thus the sense is—for the observance of the rules of just composition in their dramas, and the spirit and boldness of these productions, this company of actors are the only, or rather the best men.

As by lot, God wot.

Hamlet is here repeating passages from old songs, and says Polonius's answer does not follow his last quotation, but the continuation is.—As by lot, &c. Mr. Steevens says—"The old song from which these quotations are taken I communicated to Dr. Pope, who has honoured it with a place in his second and third editions of his Reliques of Ancient English Poetry."

The first row of the pious chanson.

It is pious chansons in the old copies, i.e., old ballads sung on bridges. But pious chansons are said by Mr. Steevens to be a kind of Christmas carols, containing some scriptural history, thrown into loose rhymes, and sung about the streets by people who solicited charity.

Why, thy face is valanced.

That is, fringed with a beard; the valance is the fringe or drapery hanging round the tester of a bed. Hamlet immediately after plays upon the word, by saying—"Com'st thou to beard (i.e., defy) me in Denmark?"

By the altitude of a chopine.

A chopine is a high shoe, or clog, worn by the Italians. The word, says Mr. Malone, ought rather to be written chopine, from chopin, Spanish, which is defined by Minshew, in his Spanish Dictionary, as a high cork sole.

'Twas caviare to the general.

A preparation of the roes of certain fish, esteemed a great delicacy in Russia, but disliked by the people of this country. The meaning is, that the play was a luxury, thrown away upon those who had no taste for it.

With bisson rheum.

That is, with blind rheum; her sight obscured by rheum.

Like John a-dreams.

John a-dreams, or of dreams, means only John the dreamer, probably a cant name for an ignorant, idle fellow.

I'll tent him to the quick, if he do bence.

Tent him is probe him, search him thoroughly: bence is to shrink, or start. The word is thus used by Fletcher, in The Night-walker:—

Bence at no danger though it be a gallows.

More relative than this.

Relative is more conclusive—more closely connected.

Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it.

That is, the cheek of the harlot is not more ugly in comparison with the artificial tint which adorns it.

The pans of despid'd love.

The folio reads—of disprized love, i.e., unvalued love—a more appropriate word, as the love of an amiable prince might be unvalued, but it is unlikely that it would be despised.

With a bare bodkin.

A bodkin was the ancient term for a small dagger; the word bare does not signify a mere dagger, but a naked, unsheathed one.

If that you be honest and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

That is, if you are honest, and desire to remain so, you should admit of no discourse or familiarity to your beauty. Discourse to your beauty, may be compliment to it. A different meaning is attributed to the sentence by Dr. Johnson, who quotes the reading of the folio which is—your honesty should admit, &c.

Blasted with ecstasy.

That is, struck by madness. The word ecstasy was anciently used to signify some degree of alienation of mind.

The very age and body of the time, his form and pressure.

Dr. Johnson suggests that we should read—face and body of the time. Its pressure is its resemblance, or impression, as in a print.

Marry, this is mitching mallecho.

The word mitching is still used in the west of England for skulking about for some sinister purpose; and mallecho, inaccurately written for malheco, signifies mischief; so that mitching mallecho is mischief, on the watch for opportunity.

An anchor's cheer.

That is, an anchorite's or hermit's cheer. In our early writers, the word was frequently so abbreviated.

The mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically.

He calls the play the mouse-trap, because he hopes by it to trap the king into such a show of agitation, as will confirm his guilt. Tropically is figuratively.

Still better, and worse.

Better, in regard to the wit of your double entendre but worse in respect to the coarseness of the meaning.
So you mistake your husbands.
Probably we should read—so you must take your husbands, i.e., for better, for worse.

He likes it not, perdy.
Perdy is a corruption of par dieu, and is not uncommon in our old plays.

To withdraw you.
This is without meaning as it stands. It should be, so withdraw you; or, so withdraw, will you?

She be shent, i.e. reproved harshly.

Look here upon this picture, and on this.
The introduction of miniatures on the stage in this scene appears to be a modern innovation. They were, no doubt, whole-length paintings in the queen’s chamber; this supposition is confirmed by the line,

A station like the herald Mercury, which does not mean the spot where he is placed, but the grace and dignity of his figure in the act of standing.

Could not so mope.
That is, be so deprived of natural powers, so approach to idiocy and incapability.

A vice of kings.
A low mimick of kings, the vice was the fool of the old moralities.

A king
Of shreds and patches.

Hamlet is carrying out the idea which he started when he called Claudius the vice of kings. The vice was dressed as a fool in a coat of party-coloured patches.

To try conclusions, i.e., experiments.

For ‘tis the sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petar.
That is, hoisted or blown into the air by the premature explosion of his own petard.

The body is with the king, &c.

This passage is very obscure, and perhaps intentionally so, designed by Hamlet to maintain the impression of his lunacy. Or it may mean, the body is with the king, that is, with the dead (for the rightful king was dead), while the king (i.e. the usurper) remains here, and is consequently not with the body.

However my joys, my joys will ne’er begin.

Until I know that Hamlet is dead, whatever may be my successes I shall derive no joy from them.

It doth move
The heaving to collection: they aim at it.

The listeners to the disjointed remarks of Ophelia were induced to collect them together and deduce consequences from them; aim or guess at their meaning.

They say the owl was a baker’s daughter.
This is an allusion to a tradition once current in Gloucestershire which is told thus:—Our Saviour went into a baker’s shop where they were baking, and asked for some bread to eat. The mistress of the shop immediately put a piece of dough into the oven to bake for him; but was reprimanded by her daughter, who, insisting that the piece of dough was too large, reduced it to a very small size. The dough, however, immediately afterwards began to swell, and presently became of a most enormous size. Whereupon, the baker’s daughter cried out, “Heugh, heugh, heugh,” which owl-like noise probably induced our Saviour for her wickedness to transform her into that bird. This story, says Mr. Douce, is often related to children, in order to deter them from such illiberal behaviour to poor people.

By Gis.
There is no saint of this name in the Roman Calendar; the word is probably only a corruption of Jesus, the letters J. H. S. being anciently all that was set down to denote the sacred name on altars, &c.

The general gender.
That is, the common race of the people.

And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh,
That hurts by easing.

A spendthrift sigh is a sigh that wastes the vital flame.
It was a common notion that sighs impaired the strength, and wore out the animal powers.

A sword unsheathed.
A sword not blunted, or protected at the point by a button, to prevent mischief.

If thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—
The sentence is broken by the interruption of the other clown, or he probably would have said, confess thyself, and be hang’d, or, confess thyself an ass.

Ay, tell me that, and unsheath.

Unsheath is a phrase borrowed from husbandry, meaning to rest, or give over.

In youth, when I did love, did love.
The three stanzas, sung here by the grave-digger, are extracted, with a slight variation, from a little poem, called The Aged Lover renouneth Love, written by Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, who lived in the reign of Henry the Eighth, and who was beheaded in 1547, on a charge of treason.

And now, my lady Worm’s.
That is, this soul that was my lord Such-a-one’s, is now my lady Worm’s.

The age is grown so picked.
That is, so quaint, so sharp; a superficial education is so common, that the peasant trends closely on the heels of the courtier.

Shards, i.e. broken pots or tiles.
NOTES TO HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

94 She is allone'd her virgin crants.

"Crants," says Dr. Johnson, "is the German word for garlands, and I suppose it was retained by us from the Saxons. To carry garlands before the bier of a maiden, and to hang them over her grave, is still the practice in rural parishes."

95 Worse than the mutines in the bilboes.

Mutines is the French word for seditious or disobedient fellows in the army or fleet. Billboes is described by Dr. Johnson, as the ship's prison, and by Mr. Steevens, as a bar of iron, with fetters annexed to it, by which mutinous or disorderly sailors were anciently linked together.

96 A chough, i.e. a kind of jackdaw.

97 I take him to be a soul of great article.

Probably a soul of great altitude; or, it may mean a soul of great comprehension. The meaning is obscure, and the word not well chosen.

98 He did comply with his dag, before he sucked it.

That is, the extreme of foppish politeness is so innate in him, that even while an infant, he complimented the breast before he sucked it.

99 And in the cup an union shall he throw.

An union is a very precious pearl; to swallow a pearl in a draught, was a piece of extravagance not uncommon in ancient times.

100 Stay, give me drink: Hamlet, this pearl is thine.

The king, under pretence of putting a pearl in the cup, drops the poison into the wine, which he intends shall dispatch Hamlet. The prince suspects this, for when he afterwards discovers the cup is poisoned, he says tauntingly to the king, "Is the union here?"

101 O God—Horatio.

Thus the quarto, 1604. The folio reads—O good Horatio.

102 The potent poison quite o'er-crowes my spirit.

To o'er-crow is to triumph over, overcome, or subdue. Mr. Pope substituted overgrows, which reading he took from a late quarto of no authority, printed 1637. To overgrow, was a word not unfrequently used by our elder authors. Thus, in Hall's Satires:

Like the vain bubble of Iberian pride,
That o'er-croweth all the world beside.

103 Occurrents, i.e., incidents.

104 Which have solicited.

That is, which have excited or induced. The sentence here terminates abruptly, the prince feeling death upon him: he would probably have added—which had excited him to the murder of the king, &c.

105 And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest.

Mr. Steevens attributes this beautiful line to the friendship of Horatio to the prince, rather than to Hamlet's deserving. He says—"Hamlet cannot be said to have pursued his ends by very warrantable means; and if the poet, when he sacrificed him at last, meant to have enforced such a moral, it is not the worst that can be deduced from the play; for, as Maximus, in Beaumont and Fletcher's Valentinian, says:

"Although his justice were as white as truth,
His way was crooked to it; that condemns him.""

106 This quarry cries on havock!

Sir Thomas Hanmer reads—cries out! havock! but to cry on was to exclaim against. The same kind of phraseology occurs in Othello:

What noise is this that cries on murder?

107 Not from his mouth.

That is, not from the king's, where they had expected it.

108 I have some rights of memory in this kingdom.

Some rights to the sovereignty, which are remembered in this kingdom.

109 And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more.

The old quartos read no more; but Mr. Theobald, and the modern editors after him, adhere to the elder folio. Hamlet, just before his death, has said that Fortinbras has his voice in the coming election for the sovereignty. Horatio here alludes to that circumstance, and infers that Hamlet's voice will be seconded by others, and influence them in favour of Fortinbras's succession.

110 Exeunt, bearing off the dead bodies; after which, a peal of ordnance is shot off.

This conclusion of the tragedy is far more solemn and effective than the manner in which it is terminated upon the modern stage. Critics were, a few years since, loud in their praises of the solemn and gorgeous picture which a distinguished tragedian and manager produced on the conclusion of Coriolanus. Shakspere has evidently intended a similar termination to this sublime effort of his genius.

H. T.
Macbeth.

THIS dark and terrible drama may, perhaps, be ranked as the most grand and fearful of all Shakspere's tragedies. Lear is usually considered as more exquisitely touching and sublime; but in Macbeth there is such a rapid march of events, such an extraordinary mingling of both the natural and supernatural, such an entirety of action, such varied scenery—now picturesque, now solemn—such romantic incidents, and such a strong halo of mystic beauty and poetry, as to mark it for one of the most extraordinary productions of the human mind.

The chief incidents of this tragedy our poet found in the history of Makketh, in Holinshed's Chronicle, which he has followed without greatly deviating from, in the historical part; but he has given perfect freedom to his bold and powerful imagination in the manner in which he has transformed a few naked facts into the most terrible tragedy which ever engrossed the attention, or appalled the mind of the reader or spectator. A hint was seldom lost upon Shakspere; one single expression in some old romance or chronicle, is often the seed which he matures into some elaborately conceived and grandly executed character; this is singularly the case with that of Lady Macbeth, of whom there is the following mention only in Holinshed:—"But speciallie his wife lay sore upon him to attempt the thing, as she that was verie ambitious, burning with unquenchable desire to be a queen." And upon these few words does he build that wonderful and fearful character, of whom it is difficult to believe that she is but a creation of the poet's brain. The chronicle, after recording the death of the tyrant, concludes thus:—"This was the end of Makketh, after he had reigned seventeen yerees over the Scotishmen. In the beginning of his reigne he accomplisht manie worthie acts, verie profitable to the commonwealth; but afterward, by the illusion of the divel, he defamed the same with the most terrible cruelty. He was slain in the yere of the incarnation, 1557, and in the sixteenth yere of King Edward's reigne over the Englishmen."*

Shakspere's tragedy upon this subject was produced in 1606, a period of singular superstition; King James originally published his book on Daemonologie at Edinburgh, in 1597, but after his succession to the throne of Elizabeth, it was reprinted at London, in 1603, with a preface in which he reminds the reader of "the fearful abounding at this time in this country, of these detestable slaves of the Divel, the Witches or Enchanters." This piece of mischievous absurdity was followed in the same year by a new statute against witches, having a clause to this effect, that:—"Any one that shall use, practise, or exercise any invocation or conjuration of any evil or wicked spirit, or consult, covenant with, entertaine or employ, feede or reward, an evil or wicked spirit, to or for any intent or purpose; or take up any dead man, woman, or child, out of his, her, or their grave, or any other place where the dead body resteth, or the skin, bone, or other part of any dead person, to be employed or used in any manner of witchcraft, sorcery, charm, or enchantment; or shall use, practise, or exercise any witchcraft, enchantment, charm, or sorcery, whereby any person shall be killed, destroyed, wasted, consumed, pined, or lamed, in his or her body, or any part thereof, such offenders, duly and lawfully convicted and attainted, shall suffer death." Such was the state of the public mind at that time, that a belief in witchcraft was almost universal in this country, and the result of the publication of King James's book was visible in the destruction, in Scotland, of not less than six hundred beings at once, for the supposed commission of a crime which the better judgment of a later age has declared to be impossible. It cannot be doubted that the mind of Shakspere was to some extent influenced by the prevailing superstition, and that to this we probably owe the existence of that masterpiece of dramatic genius, his tragedy of Macbeth.

* A very interesting account of the life and reign of Macbeth will be found in Wright's History of Scotland, now publishing by Messrs. Tallis and Co. The author thus dismisses the subject:—"Such is the veritable history of a chieftain who, from the circumstance of his having been made the hero of one of the best known tragedies of Shakspere, has become one of the most celebrated of the earlier Scottish kings. It will be seen that most of the incidents of Shakspere's play have no foundation in history, though some of them are taken from the fables of the later chronicles. Instead of being hated by his subjects, the name of Macbeth was long popular in Scotland as that of one of the best of their kings, and the Scottish people felt the indignity of a foreign intervention in their domestic affairs."

Let us now turn our attention more immediately to the work itself, and give a brief analysis of its principal characters; it may be called a sublime homily on the weakness of human nature—a startling warning, spoken, as it were, in words of thunder, and written in characters of blood, against dallying with temptation. Macbeth is gradually led to do that which he persuades himself he cannot avoid—he consents to become a murderer, because he believes that fate has willed it so; he is not the first or the last great criminal who have cast their sins upon a supposed fatal and indisputable ordinance, and who believe, or profess to believe, that they were predestined to evil. He is brave and just before he is tempted, but when tempted strongly, he yields, and falls from the warrior to the tyrant—timorous, cunning, and bloodthirsty. When he slays the unoffending Duncan he first reasons strongly against the act, tries to escape from its commission—his conscience wrestles with him, and represents the virtues of the meek king pleading like angels "against the deep damnation" of the deed; and when the act is done, it is instantly repented, and the murderer stands aghast at his soul-destroying work. The poet has here presented us with an awful picture of the terrors of conscience—the shuddering murderer trembling at every sound, and peopling the air with avenging voices uttering strange and fearful threatenings; but after Macbeth becomes deeply steeped in blood and familiar with crime, we may observe the savage premeditation of his murders. When giving directions for the death of Banquo, he addresses the assassins thus:—"Was it not yesterday we spoke together?" evincing a perfect indifference to the intended destruction of his old associate and fellow soldier; he has altogether got rid of the "compunctious visitings" which shoked him when engaged in the murder of Duncan. It has been said that a man who commits one murder, and escapes detection or punishment, seldom remains single in his crime—he is hounded on by his impetuous and savage desires again to imbrue his hands in blood; thus is it with Macbeth, he feels that for him there is no retreat, and he adds crime to crime, until he becomes a mere vulgar tyrant, surrounding his nobility with spies, and, in his fear, devoting to death even the innocent, whom he merely suspected to be dangerous.

Lady Macbeth is such a character as Shakspere alone, of all our dramaticists, could have painted—terrible even to sublimity in her determinate wickedness—fiend-like in the savage obduracy of her nature; the bitter scoff of the irreproachable pleadings of departing virtue, and the expiring throes of conscience in her guilty partner; still she is never utterly beyond our sympathy. She urges her husband to the murder of Duncan, but she bears no hatred to the mild old king: he is an obstacle in her path to greatness, and must be removed. When bending over his couch, on the fearful night of his murder, when, amidst the howlings of the storm and the rack of the elements, there were

Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death
And prophesying, with accents terrible—even then, unmoved by all these horrors, she contemplates his destruction by her own hand; but the resemblance between him and her aged father shoots athwart her mind, and she experiences a momentary tenderness for the unsuspecting and defenceless monarch. She is a woman still. But this softening of her stern nature is but transient; it does not last long enough to interfere with her dread resolve; she feels, but smothers human sympathies, and brings them into bondage to her adamantine will. This fearful woman is a faithful and affectionate wife: we view her with none of the abhorrence which is excited in us towards Regan and Goneril, the cruel and unnatural daughters of the aged Lear whom, with an exquisito probability, Shakspere also makes unchaste and treacherous wives. When, at the banquet, Macbeth raves about the ghost of Banquo, who glares horribly upon him, and points to the — Twenty trenchéed gashes on his head, she dismisses the guests in confusion; but when they are gone, she utters not one word of reproach, but gently tells him that he lacks rest.

MACBETH.

She has shown no sign of repentance—spoken no word of compunction; yet we see her punishment is begun; the torture of the mind tells on the fevered frame; the seed which she had sown in blood, though it had grown to be a vigorous plant, had borne no fruit; and when she next comes upon the scene, it is when broken-hearted and dying she utters in her sleep those fearful thoughts which, in her watchful moments, she had kept closed up in the whitened sepulchre of her own sad, yet hardened heart.

For his supernatural machinery, Shakspere has taken some broad hints from Middleton's play of The Witch, which, with a few bold thoughts, possesses a great deal that is both gross and frivolous: his witches are disgusting and unbridled female libertines. Shakspere has elevated them into wild and malignant essences, who, though possessing no sympathy with human suffering, appear to possess the worst of human passions. The weird sisters of Middleton are of earth; those of Shakspere, of hell—mean instruments of demoniacal power and temptation, and bearing a similar relation to humanity as the plague-winds and the pestilent swamp, from which is ever rising the malaria of death, do to the profile beauty of an otherwise enchanting and productive land. They meet in thunder and in lightning, to the accompaniment of wild and supernatural music; they answer strange voices in the air—familiaris, in the form of cats and toads; they love the midnight, and inhabit the passing storm; they crouch beneath the gibbet of the murderer, and meet in dark caves, amidst convulsions and rockings of the earth; and there they brew their hell-broth, and devise evil suggestions and illusions to ensnare the weak. They have nothing in common with this world, but are altogether hellish, in the coarse, material sense of the word. Shakspere does not create a spirit by merely making it exempt from the customary conditions of humanity—visible or invisible at its own will—dying away on the air, like music in the night, and setting the law of gravitation at defiance. No; his spirits have all a diverse, ethereal character. Titania, Oberon, and Puck, Ariel and Ca'lian, and the Ghost in Hamlet, have characteristics altogether distinct, not from his witches only, but from each other. And how finely does he distinguish between palpable, absolute apparitions, and mere spectral delusions. The Ghost in Hamlet is a reality—a spiritual existence, which is seen by Horatio and the officers on guard, and which communicates with Hamlet; but the Ghost of Banquo is seen by no one but Macbeth: it merely comes, gazes upon him, and vanishes—that is, there is no ghost, but a mere delusion, bred from feverish and unnatural excitement.

After Macbeth and his ambitious wife, there are few strongly marked characters in the play. Duncan is a mild and virtuous sovereign; but he calls for little further comment: the softness of his nature is traceable in the timid characters of his two sons, who, by their disgraceful flight, at first inure the suspicion of being his murderers. Banquo is the opposite of Macbeth, being both a brave and virtuous general. The witches solicit him, also, during sleep, to some horrible act, but he prays against a repetition of the temptation, while Macbeth is on the watch for opportunity.

This great tragedy conveys a grand moral precept: poetical justice is dealt out rigidly to its chief actors. Lady Macbeth, as the greatest criminal, is the greatest sufferer: madness, and a supposed suicide, close her career of guilt and gloom; and her husband meets his death by the same violent means as those by which he had attained his regal but wretched eminence, while the punishment of both is brought about by their own evil actions.

Scenes of terror, such as are found in this tragedy, stand alone; otherwise, says Schlegel, "the tragic muse might exchange her mask for the head of Medusa."

Macbeth.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An open Place.

Thunder and Lightening.—Enter three Witches.

1st Witch. When shall we three meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?

2nd Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won:¹

3rd Witch. That will be ere set of sun.

1st Witch. Where the place?

2nd Witch. Upon the heath.

3rd Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.²

1st Witch. I come, Graymalkin!

All. Paddock calls:—Anon.

Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Hover through the fog and filthy air.

[Witches vanish.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Foros.

Alarum within. Enter King Duncan, Malcolm, Donaldain, Lenox, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought
'Gainst my captivity:—Hail, brave friend!
Say to the king the knowledge of the broil,
As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtfully it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together,
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel; for, to that,
The multiplying villainies of nature
Do swarm upon him,) from the western isles
Of Kernes and Gallowglasses is supplied;³
And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore. But all's too weak:
For brave Macbeth, (well he deserves that name,) Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel
Which smoked with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion,
Carv'd out his passage, till he fac'd the slave;
And ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the navo to the chaps,
And fix'd his head upon our battalions.

Dun. O, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break;
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heels;
But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms, and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes;
As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks
So they
Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell:—
But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both:—Go, get him surgeons.

[Exit Sold., attended.

Enter Rosse.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy thane of Rosse.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes! So should he look,
That seems to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the king!

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?

Rosse. From Fife, great king
Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky,
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
The thane of Cawdor, 'gan a dismal conflict:
Till that Bellona's bridgework, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit; And, to conclude,
The victory fell on us:——

Dun. Great happiness!

Rosse. That now,
Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition
Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colmes' inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that thane of Cawdor shall deceive
Our bosom interest:—Go, pronounce his death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Rosse. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the Three Witches.

1st Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?
3rd Witch. Sister, where thou?

1st Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,
And mouschin'd, and moucheb'd, and mouch'd:
"Give me," quoth I:
"A ront thee, witch!" the rump-fed ronyon cries.

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o'the Tiger:
But in a sieve I'll thither sail,
And, like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

2nd Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

1st Witch. Thou art kind.

3rd Witch. And I another.

1st Witch. I myself have all the other;
And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
'The shipman's card.
I will drain him dry as hay:
Sleep shall, neither night nor day,
Hang upon his pent-house lid;
He shall live a man forbid,

Weary scur'ningights, nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:
Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-toss'd.
Look what I have.

2nd Witch. Show me, show me.

1st Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb.
Wreck'd, as homeward he did come. [Drum within.

3rd Witch. A drum, a drum;
Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand,
Posters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about;
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine:
Peace!—the charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
Ban. How far is 'tcall'd to Fores?—What are these,
So wither'd, and so wild in their attire;
That look not like the inhabitants o'the earth,
And yet are on 't? Live you? or are you aught
That man may question? You seem to understand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny lips:—You should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can;—What are you?

1st Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Glamis!

2nd Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Cawdor!

3rd Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start; and seem to fear
Things that do sound so fair?—I'the name of truth,
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace, and great prediction
Of noble having, and of royal hope,
That he seems rapt within; to me you speak not:
If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say, which grain will grow, and which will not Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear,
Your favours, nor your hate.

1st Witch. Hail!

2nd Witch. Hail!

3rd Witch. Hail!

1st Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2nd Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

3rd Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:
So, all hail, Macbeth, and Banquo!
M. MACRELLY AS MACBETH.

ACT I.

MACBETH.

SCENE III.

1st Witch. Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more:
By Sinel’s death, I know, I am thane of Glamis;
But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman; and, to be king,
Stands not within the prospect of belief.
No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence
You owe this strange intelligence? or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge you.

[Witches vanish.

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them:—Whither are they vanished?

Macb. Into the air; and what seem’d corporal, melted
As breath into the wind.—’Would they had staid!

Ban. Were such things here, as we do speak about?
Or have we eaten of the insane root,
That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?

Ban. To the self-same tune, and words. Who’s here?

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Rosse. The king hath happily receiv’d, Macbeth,
The news of thy success: and when he reads
Thy personal venture in the rebels’ fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend,
Which should be thine, or his: Silenc’d with that,
In viewing o’er the rest o’ the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afeard of what thysel’d didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale,
Came post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom’s great defence,
And pour’d them down before him.

Ang. We are sent,
To give thee, from our royal master, thanks;
To herald thee into his sight, not pay thee.

Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He made me, from him, call thee thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!”

For it is thine.

Ban. What, can the devil speak true?

Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives; Why do you dress me
In borrow’d robes?

Ang. Who was the thane, lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was Combin’d with Norway; or did line the rebel

With hidden help and vantage; or that with both
He labour’d in his country’s wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess’d, and prov’d,
Have overthrown him.

Macb. Glamis, and thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind.—Thanks for your pains.—
Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis’d no less to them?

Ban. That, trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the thane of Cawdor. But ’tis strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest triles, to betray us.
In deepest consequence.—

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen.—
This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—If ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
And make my seced heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man, that function
Is smother’d in surmise; and nothing is,
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner’s rapt.

Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me
Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him
Like our strange garments; cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of use.

Macb. Come what come may;
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour:—my dull brain was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains
Are register’d where every day I turn
The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king.—
Think upon what hath chance’d; and, at more time,
The interim having weigh’d it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough.—Come friends.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tores A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Lenox, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return’d?
Mal. My liege, They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die: who did report,
That very frankly he confess’d his treasons;
Implor’d your highness’ pardon; and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him, like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow’d,
As ’twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There’s no art,
To find the mind’s construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.—O worthiest cousin!

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross,, and Angus
The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. ’Would thou hadst less deserv’d;
That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness’ part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children, and servants;
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing
Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv’d, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me infold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fullness, seek to hide themselves

In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name hereafter,
The prince of Cumberland: which honour must
Not, unaccompanied, invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deserved.—From hence to Inverness, And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us’d for you:
I’ll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!
Macb. The prince of Cumberland!—That is a step,
On which I must fall down, or else o’er-leap,

[Aside. For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand! yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see. [Exit.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant; And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman.
[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in Macbeth’s Castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than dearth knowledge. When I burn’d in desire to question them further, they made themselves—air, into which they vanished.
Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hail’d me, “Thane of Cawdor;” by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, “Hail, king that shalt be!”
This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness; that thou mightest not lose the due of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promis’d:—Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full of the milk of human kindness,
To catch the nearest way: Thou wouldst be great;
Art not without ambition; but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet would'st wrongly win: thou'd'st have, great Glamis,
That which cries, "Thus thou must do, if thou have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Than wishest should be undone." Hie thee hither,
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear;
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.—What is your tidings?

Enter an Attendant.

Atten. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it:
Is not thy master with him? who, wer't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Atten. So please you, it is true; our thane is coming:
One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending, He brings great news. The raven himself is hoarse, [Exit Atten.

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here;
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood,
Stop up the access and passage to remorse;
That no compunctions visitings of nature
Shake my full purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect, and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you mur'dring ministers,
Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell!
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes;
Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
To cry, "Hold, hold!"—Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!

Enter Macbeth.

Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!
Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.

Lady M. Shall sun that morrow see!
Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men
May read strange matters.—To beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under it. No that's coming Must be provided for: and you shall put
This night's great business into my despatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear;
To alter favour ever is to fear;
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.

Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lenox, Macduff, Rosse, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his lov'd mansionry, that the heaven's breath,
Smells wooingly here: no jotty, frieze, buttress,
Nor coigne of vantage, but this bird hath made
His pendent bed, and procreant cradle: Where they Most breed and haunt, I have observ'd, the air
Is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Dun. See, see! our honour'd hostess!
The love that follows us, sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you,
How you shall bid God yield us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and single business, to contend
Against those honours deep and broad, wherewith
Your majesty loads our house: For those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the thane of Cawdor?
Wo cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but ho rides well;
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp him
To his home before us: Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lord. Your servants ever
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand:
Conduct me to mine host; we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Room in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, end divers Servants with dishes and service. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly: If the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch,
With his surcease, success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,—
We'd jump the life to come.16—But, in these cases,
We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor: This even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek,17 hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking-off:
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind.18—I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself,
And falls on the other.—How now, what news?

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady. He has almost supp'd; Why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady. Know you not, he has?

Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:
He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since
And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid
To be the same in thine own act and valour,
As thou art in desire? Would'st thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem;
Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i' the adage?19

Pr'ythee, peace: I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more, is none.

Lady. What beast was it then,
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place,
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness
now
Does unmake you. I have given suck; and know
How tender 'tis, to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn, as you
Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—

Lady. But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep,
(Where to the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him,) his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassel so convince,
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only.20 When in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers; who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only!
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
ACT II.

Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have don't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

MACBETH.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, and a Servant, with a torch before them.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?
Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.
Fle. I take 'tis, 'tis later, sir.
Ban. Hold, take my sword:—There's husband-dry in heaven,
Their candles are all out.—Take thee that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: Merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts, that nature
Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword:—

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a torch.

Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed:
He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess to your offices:
This diamond he gicts your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect;
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
Would spend it in some words upon that business,
If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent,— when 'tis,
It shall make honour for you.

T. K.

MACBETH.

ACT II.

Scene I.—The Same. Court within the Castle.

Ban. So I lose none,
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd, and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsel'd.

Macb. Good repose, the while!
Ban. Thanks, sir; The like to you! [Exit Ban.
Macb. Go, bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

Enter Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind; a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshal'st me the way that I was going;
And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy blade, and dudgeon, gouts of blood,
Which was not so before.—There's no such thing:
It is the bloody business, which informs
Thus to mine eyes.—Now o'er the one half world
Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain'd sleep; now witchcraft celebrates
Pales I'theane's offerings; and wither'd murder,
Alarum'd by his sentinels, the wofl,
Whose howl? his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set earth,
Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
Thy very stones prate of my whereabout,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it.—Whiles I threat, he lives;
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

[A bell rings.]

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.

Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven, or to hell. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk, hath made me bold:
What hath quench’d them, hath given me fire—

Hark!—Peace!

It was the owl that shriek’d, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern’st good-night. He is about it:
The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores:23 I have
’dragg’d their possets, That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live, or die.

Macb. [Within.] Who’s there?—what, ho! I
Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak’d,
And ’tis not done:—the attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us:—Hark!—I laid their daggers ready,
He could not miss them.—Had he not resembled
My father as he slept, I had done’t.—My husband?

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. I have done the deed:—Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream, and the crickets cry.

Didst thou not speak?

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended?

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark!—

Who lies i’ the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. This is a sorry sight. [Looking on his hands.

Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There’s one did laugh in his sleep, and one cried, “murder!”

That they did wake each other; I stood and heard them: But they did say their prayers, and address’d them
Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg’d together.

Macb. One cried, “God bless us!” and, “Amen,” the other;
As they had seen me, with these hangman’s hands.

Listening their fear, I could not say, amen,
When they did say, God bless us.

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce,
Amen?

I had most need of blessing, and amen
Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought, I heard a voice cry, “Sleep
no more!”

Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep
Sleep, that knits up the ravel’d sleave of care,
The death of each day’s life, sore labour’s bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature’s second course,
Chief nourisher in life’s feast;”—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried, “Sleep no more!” to all the house:

“Glamis hath murder’d sleep; and therefore Cawdor
Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no more!”

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength, to think
So brainsickly of things:—Go, get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.—
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there: Go, carry them; and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I’ll go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on’t again, I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!

Give me the daggers: The sleeping, and the dead,
Are but as pictures: ’tis the eye of childhood,
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I’ll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.

Whence is that knocking?

How is’t with me, when every noise appals me?

What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!

Will all great Neptune’s ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnardine,
Making the green—one red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I

shame
Mr. Phelps, as Macbeth.

Act V, Scene I.

'And this done, the heavens receive the throned monarch here! Then shall we love the heavens, and in loveourses our good. This shall be our goodnight song.'
To wear a heart so white. [Knock.] I hear a knocking
At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber:
A little water clears us of this deed;
How easy is it then? Your constancy
Hath left you unattended.—[Knocking.] Hark! more knocking:
Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers:—Be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts. [Macb. To know my deed,—’tis best not know myself.]
Wake Duncan with thy knocking! Ay, ’would thou could’sat! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter a Porter. Knocking within.

Port. Here’s a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who’s there, i’ the name of Belzebub? Here’s a farmer, that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty: Come in time; have napkins enough about you; here you ’ll sweat for ’t. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who’s there? [Knock; the other devil’s name?] ’Faith, here’s an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God’s sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who’s there? ’Faith, here’s an English tailor come hither, for stealing out of a French hose: Come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking.] Knock, knock: Never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I’ll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon; I pray you, remember the porter. [Opens the gate.]

Enter Macduff and Lenox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, That you do lie so late?

Port. ’Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance; Therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i’ the very throat o’ me: But I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

Macd. Is thy master stirring?—
Our knocking has awak’d him; here he comes.

Enter Macbeth.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir!

Macb. Good-morrow, both!

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him;
I have almost slipp’d the hour.

Macb. I ’ll bring you to him.

Macd. I know, this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet, ’tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in, physic pain.
This is the door.

Macd. I ’ll make so bold to call,
For ’tis my limited service. [Exit Macd.]

Len. Goes the king From hence to-day?

Macd. He does:—He did appoint it so.

Len. The night has been unruly: Where we lay, Our chimneys were blown down: and, as they say, Lamentings heard i’ the air; strange screams of death;
And prophecying, with accents terrible, Of dire combustion, and confus’d events, Now hatch’d to the woeful time. The obscure bird Clamour’d the livelong night: some say, the earth Was feverous, and did shake.

Macb. ’Twas a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue, not heart, Cannot conceive, nor name thee!

Macb. Len. What’s the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his master-piece!

Most snaerigious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building.

Macb. What is 't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon:—Do not bid me speak;
See, and then speak yourselves.—Awake! awake!—

[Exeunt Macb. and Len.

Ring the alarum-bell:—Murder! and treason!
Banquo, and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself!—up, up, and see
The great doom's image!—Malcolm! Banquo!—
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprights,
To countenance this horror! [Bell rings.]

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. What's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parlory
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak,—

Macb. O, gentle lady, 'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear,
Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!

Enter Banquo.

Lady M. Woe, alas!

What, in our house?

Ban. Too cruel, any where.—
Dear Duff, I pr'ythee, contradict thyself,
And say, it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lenox.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,
There's nothing serious in mortality:
All is but toys: renown, and grace, is dead;
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know it:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O, by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done 't:
Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood,

So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found
Upon their pillows:
They star'd, and were distracted; no man's life
Was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate, and furious,
Loyal and neutral in a moment? No man:
The expedition of my violent love
Out-ran the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;
And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature,
For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,
Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers Unmannerly breech'd with gore: Who could refrain,
That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage, to make his love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,
That most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. What should be spoken here,
Where our fate, hid within an augre-hole,
May rush, and seize us? Let's away: our tears
Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow on
The foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady:—[Lady M. is carried out.

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
In the great hand of God I stand; and, thence,
Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.

Macb. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet 't the hall together.

All. Well contented.

[Exeunt all but Mal. and Don.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:
To show an unfelt sorrow, is an office
Which the false man does easy: I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.
MACBETH.

ACT III.

MAL. This murderous shaft that’s shot, Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way Is, to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse; And let us not be dainty of leave-taking, But shift away: There’s warrant in that theft Which steals itself, when there’s no mercy left. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Without the Castle.

Enter Rosse and an Old Man.

Old M. Three score and ten I can remember well: Within the volume of which time, I have seen Hours dreadful, and things strange; but this sore night Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ah, good father, Thou see’st, the heavens, as troubled with man’s act, Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, ’tis day, And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp: Is it night’s predominance, or the day’s shame, That darkness does the face of earth intomb, When living light should kiss it?

Old M. ’Tis unnatural, Even like the deed that’s done. On Tuesday last, A falcon, tow’ring in her pride of place, Was by a mousing owl hawk’d at, and kill’d.

Rosse. And Duncan’s horses, (a thing most strange and certain,) Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, Turn’d wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out, Contending ’gainst obedience, as they would make War with mankind.

Old M. ’Tis said, they eat each other.

Rosse. They did so; to the amazement of mine eyes, That look’d upon’t. Here comes the good Macduff:

Enter Macduff.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?

Rosse. Is’t known, who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Rosse. Ahas, the day! What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn’d: Malcolm and Donalbain, the king’s two sons, Are stol’n away and fled; which puts upon them Suspicion of the deed.

Rosse. ’Gainst nature still; Thriftless ambition, that will raven up Thine own life’s means!—Then ’tis most like, The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam’d; and gone to Scone, To be invested.

Rosse. Where is Duncan’s body?

Macd. Carried to Colmes-kill: The sacred storehouse of his predecessors, And guardian of their bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin, I’ll to Fife.

Rosse. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there; adieu!—

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Rosse. Father, farewell.

Old M. God’s benison go with you: and with those That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all, As the weird women promis’d; and, I fear, Thou play’st most foully for ’t: yet it was said, It should not stand in thy posterity; But that myself should be the root, and father Of many kings. If there come truth from them, (As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,) Why, by the verities on thee made good, May they not be my oracles as well, And set me up in hope? But, hush; no more.

Senet sounded. Enter Macbeth, as King; Lady Macbeth, as Queen; Lenox, Rosse, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macd. Here’s our chief guest
MACBETH.

ACT III.

MACBETH.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten, it had been as a gap in our great feast, and all things unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir, and I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highness command upon me; to the which, my duties are with a most indissoluble tie for ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desired your good advice (Which still hath been both grave and prosperous,) in this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow. Is't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time 'twixt this and supper: go not my horse the better, I must become a borrower of the night, for a dark hour, or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear, our bloody cousins are bestow'd in England, and in Ireland; not confessing their cruel parricide, filling their hearers with strange invention: but of that to-morrow; when, therewithal, we shall have cause of state, craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: Adieu, till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon us,

Macb. I wish your horses swift, and sure of foot; and so I do command you to their backs.

Farewell.—[Exit Ban.]

Let every man be master of his time Till seven at night; to make society the sweeter welcome, we will keep ourselves till supper-time alone: while then, God be with you.

[Except Lady M., Lords, Ladies, &c.

Sirrah, a word: Attend those men our pleasure? Attendant. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.—[Exit Attendant.]

To be thus is nothing; But to be safely thus:—Our fears in Banquo stick deep; and in his royalty of nature Reigns that, which would be fear'd: 'Tis much he dares; and, to that dauntless temper of his mind, he hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour To act in safety. There is none, but he whose being I do fear: and, under him, my genius is rebuk'd; as, it is said, Mark Antony's was by Caesar. He chid the sisters, when first they put the name of king upon me, and bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like, they hail'd him father to a line of kings: upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown, and put a barren sceptre in my gripe; Thence to be wrenched with an unlineal hand, no son of mine succeeding. If it be so, for Banquo's issue have I fill'd my mind; for them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd; put rancours in the vessel of my peace only for them; and mine eternal jewel given to the common enemy of man, to make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings! rather than so, come, fate, into the list, and champion me to the utterance!—Who's there?—

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1st Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now have you consider'd of my speeches? know, that it was he, in the times past, which held you so under fortune; which, you thought, had been our innocent self: this I made good to you in our last conference; pass'd in probation with you, how you were borne in band; how cross'd: the instruments; who wrought with them; and all things else, that might, to half a soul, and a notion craz'd, say, thus did Banquo.

1st Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so; and went further, which is now our point of second meeting. Do you find your patience so predominant in your nature, that you can let this go? are you so gospell'd, to pray for this good man, and for his issue, whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave, and beggar'd yours for ever?

1st Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men; as hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs, Shouglis, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are eleded all by the name of dogs: the valued file distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, the house-keeper, the hunter, ev'ry one according to the gift which bounteous nature

ACT I.

MAC.

To be thus is nothing.
But to be safely thus:
Our fears in Banquo
Suck deep, and in his royalty of nature
Reigns that which would be feared.

MACBETH.
Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the bill
That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
And not in the worst rank of manhood, say it;
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off;
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2nd Mur. I am one, my liege,
Whom the vilo blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens'd, that I am reckless what
I do, to spite the world.

1st Mur. And I another,
So weary with disasters, tug'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you
Know, Banquo was your enemy.

2nd Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine: and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life: And though I could
With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avouch it; yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
When I myself struck down: and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love;
Masking the business from the common eye,
For sundry weighty reasons.

2nd Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

1st Mur. Though our lives——

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,
I will advise you where to plant yourselves.
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time, the moment on't; for 't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought,
That I require a clearness: And with him,
(To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work.)
Flanco his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;
I'll come to you anon.

2nd Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight; abide within.
It is concluded:——Banquo, thy soul's light,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. Another Room.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?
Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.

Lady M. Nought 's had, all's spent,
Whereo our desire is got without content:
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord? why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making?
Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died
With them they think on? Things without remedy,
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it;
She 'll close, and be herself: whilst our poor malice
Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let
The frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,
Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams,
That shake us nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks
Be bright and jovial 'mong your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we Must have our labours in these flattering streams;
And make our faces vizards to our hearts
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife!

Thou know'st, that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy, not eternally.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are assailable;
Then be thou join'd: Ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight; ere, to black Hecate's summons,
The shard-borne beetle, with his drowsy hums,
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done
A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done?
Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeing night,
Skarf up the tender eye of pitiful day;
And, with thy bloody and invisible hand,
Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond
Which keeps me pale!—Light thickens; and the crow
Makes wing to the rocky wood:
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse;
Whiles night's black agents to their prey do rouse.

Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee still;
Things, bad begun, make strong themselves by ill:
So, pr'ythee, go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A Park or Lawn, with a Gate leading to the Palace.

Enter Three Murderers.

1st Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?
2nd Mur. He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers
Our offices, and what we have to do,
To the direction just.
1st Mur. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:
Now spurs the latest traveller apace,
To gain the timely inn; and near approaches
The subject of our watch.
Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!
2nd Mur. Then it is he; the rest
That are within the note of expectation,
Already are i'the court.
1st Mur. His horses go about.
3rd Mur. Almost a mile: but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, a Servant with a torch preceding them.

2nd Mur. A light, light!
3rd Mur. 'Tis he.
1st Mur. Stand to't.
Ban. It will be rain to-night.

SCENE IV.—A Room of State in the Palace.

A Banquet prepared. Enter Macbeth, Lady Macbeth, Rosse, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit down:
At first
And last, the hearty welcome.
Lords. Thanks to your majesty.
Macb. Ourself will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.
Our hostess keeps her state; but, in best time,
We will require her welcome.
Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends;
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter first Murderer, to the door.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks:
Both sides are even: Here I'll sit i'the midst:
Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure
The table round.—There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without, than he within.
Is he despatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o'the cut-throats: Yet he's good,
That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it,
Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir,
Fleance is 'scap'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect;
Whole as the marble, founded as the rock;
As broad, and general, as the casing air:
But now, I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in
To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?
Act II.

Macb. Ay, my good lord: safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trench'd gashes on his head;
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that:—
There the grown serpent lies; the worm, that's fled,
Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present.—Get thee gone; to-morrow
We'll hear, ourselves again.

[Exit Mur.

Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold,
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a making,
'Tis given with welcome: To feed, were best at home;
From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrancer!—
Now, good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

Len. May it please your highness sit?

[The Ghost of Banquo rises, and sits in Macbeth's place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,
Were the grave'd person of our Banquo present;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness,
Than pity for mischance! 189

Rosse. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please it your highness
To grace us with your royal company?

Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here's a place reserv'd, sir.

Macb. Where?

Len. Here, my lord. What is't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say, I did it: never shake
Thy gory locks at me.

Rosse. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends:—my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth: 'pray you, keep seat;
The fit is momentary; upon a thought
He will again be well: If much you note him,
You shall offend him, and extend his passion;
Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man?

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O proper stuff!

This is the very painting of your fear:
This is the air-drawn dagger, which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws, and starts, (Impostors to true fear,) would well become
A woman's story, at a winter's fire,
Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done,
You look but on a stool.

Macb. Pr'ythee, see there! behold! look! lo!
how say you?—

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.—
If charnel-houses, and our graves, must send
Those that we bury, back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost disappears.

Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Pie, for shame!

Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i'the olden time,
Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal: 39
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end: but now, they rise again,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools: This is more strange
Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget:—

Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;
Then I'll sit down:—Give me some wine, fill full:—

I drink to the general joy of the whole table,

[Ghost rises.

And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would be were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Avant! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger,
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble; Or, be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhibit thee, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!

[Ghost disappears.]
Unreal mockery, hence!—Why, so;—being gone,
I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear.

Rosse. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;
Question enrages him: at once, good night:—
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night, and better health
Attend his majesty!

Lady M. A kind good night to all!

[Exeunt Lords and Attends.]

Macb. It will have blood; they say, blood will have blood:
Stones have been known to move, and trees to speak;
Augurs, and understood relations, have
By magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought forth
The secret'st man of blood.—What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies his person,
At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send:
There's not a one of them, but in his house
I keep a servant fe'd. I will to-morrow, (Betwixt me and,) unto the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know,
By the worst means, the worst: for mine own good,
All causes shall give way; I am in blood
Stept in so far, that, should I wade no more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er:
Strange things I have in head, that will to hand;
Which must be acted, ere they may be scann'd.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep: My strange and self-abuse
Is the initiate fear, that wants hard use:—
We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Heath.

Thunder. Enter Hecate, meeting the Three Witches.

1st Witch. Why, how now, Hecate? you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams, as you are,
Saucy, and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth,
In riddles, and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful, and wrathful; who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: Get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron,
Meet me 't the morning; thither ho'
Will come to know his destiny.
Your vessels, and your spells, provide,
Your charms, and every thing beside:
I am for the air; this night I'll spend
Unto a dismal-fatal end.
Great business must be wrought ere noon:
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound;
I'll catch it ere it come to ground:
And that, distill'd by magic sights,
Shall raise such artificial sprights,
As, by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear:
And you all know, security
Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

Song. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.

Hark, I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.

1st Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.
SCENE VI.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Lenox and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts, Which can interpret further: only, I say, Things have been strangely borne: The gracious Duncan Was pitied of Macbeth: marry, he was dead:—
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late;
Whom, you may say, if it please you, Fleance kill'd,
For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late. Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbain, To kill their gracious father? damned fact! How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight, In pious rage, the two delinquents tear, That were the slaves of drink, and thralls of sleep?
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too; For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive, To hear the men deny it. So that, I say, He has borne all things well: and I do think, That, had he Duncan's sons under his key, (As, an't please heaven, he shall not,) they should find What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance. But, peace!—for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear, Macduff lives in disgrace: Sir, can you tell Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan, From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth, Lives in the English court; and is receiv'd Of the most pious Edward with such grace, That the malevolence of fortune nothing Takes from his high respect: Thither Macduff Is gone to pray the holy king, on his aid To wake Northumberland, and warlike Siward: That, by the help of these, (with him above To ratify the work,) we may again Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights; Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives; Do faithful hommage, and receive free honours, All which we pine for now: And this report Hath so exasperate the king, that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute, "Sir, not I," The cloudy messenger turns me his back, And hums; as who should say, "You'll rue the time That clogs me with this answer."

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel Fly to the court of England, and unfold His message ere he come; that a swift blessing May soon return to this our suffering country Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. My prayers with him! [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A dark Cav. In the middle, a Cauldron boiling.

Thunder. Enter the Three Witches.

1st Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.
2nd Witch. Thrice; and once the hedge-pig whin'd.
3rd Witch. Harper cries:—'Tis time, 'tis time.
1st Witch. Round about the cauldron go; In the poison'd entrails throw.—
Toad, that under coldest stone,
Days and nights hast thirty-one
Swelter'd venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i' the charmed pot!

All. Double, double toil and trouble
Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.
2nd Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake:
Eye of newt; and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, owlet's wing,
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.
3rd Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witches' mummy; maw, and gulf,

75
Of the ravin’d salt-sea shark;
Root of hemlock, digg’d i’ the dark
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew,
Silver’d in the moon’s eclipse;
Nose of Turk, and Tartar’s lips;
Finger of birth-strangled babe,
Ditch-deliver’d by a drab,
Make the gruel thick and slab:
Add thereto a tiger’s chauldron,
For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.

2nd Witch. Cool it with a baboon’s blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate, and the other Three Witches.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;
And every one shall share i’ the gains.
And now about the cauldron sing,
Like elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

SONG. Black spirits and white,
Red spirits and grey;
Mingle, mingle, mingle,
You that mingle may.

2nd Witch. By the prickling of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes:—
Open, locks, whoever knocks.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags?
What is’t you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess, (Howe’er you come to know it,) answer me:
Though you untie the winds, and let them fight
Against the churches; though the yesty waves
Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodg’d, and trees blown down;
Though castles topple on their warders’ heads;
Though palaces, and pyramids, do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure
Of nature’s germins tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken, answer me
To what I ask you.

1st Witch. Speak.

2nd Witch. Demand.

3rd Witch. We’ll answer.

1st Witch. Say, if thou’dst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters’?

Macb. Call them, let me see them.

1st Witch. Pour in sow’s blood, that hath eaten
Her nine farrow; grease, that’s sweaten
From the murderer’s gibbet, throw
Into the flame.

All. Come, high, or low;
Thyself, and office, deftly show.

Thunder. An Apparition of an armed Head rises.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—

1st Witch. He knows thy thought;
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware Macduff;
Beware the thane of Fife.—Dismiss me:—Enough.

[Descends.

Macb. Whate’er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks;
Thou hast harp’d my fear aright:—But one word more:—

1st Witch. He will not be commanded: Here’s another,
More potent than the first.

Thunder. An Apparition of a bloody Child rises.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—

Macb. Had I three ears, I’d hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold,
And resolute: laugh to scorn the power of man,
For none of woman born shall harm Macbeth.

[Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff; What need I fear of thee?

But yet I’ll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear, it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this,

Thunder. An Apparition of a Child crowned, with a Tree in his Hand, rises.

That rises like the issue of a king;
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not.

App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care
Who chases, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish’d be, until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him.

[Descends.
Macb. That will never be;
Who can impress the forest; bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodements!
good!
Rebellious head, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time, and mortal custom. — Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: Tell me, (if your art
Can tell so much,) shall Banquo’s issue ever Reign in this kingdom?
All. Seek to know no more.
Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know:—
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this?
All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.
Eight Kings appear, and pass over the Stage in order; the last with a Glass in his Hand; Ban-quo following.
Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo;
down!
Thy crown does scar mine eye-balls: —And thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first: —
A third is like the former:—Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? —A fourth? —Start,
eyes!
What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?
Another yet? —A seventh? —I’ll see no more: —
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry:—
Horrible sight! — Ay, now, I see, ’tis true;
For the blood-bolter’d Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for. —What, is this so?
1st Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: —But why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly? —
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprights,
And show the best of our delights;
I’ll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antique round:
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.
Macb. Where are they? Gone? — Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar! —
Come in, without there!

Enter Lenox.
Len. What’s your grace’s will?
Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?
Len. No, my lord.
Macb. Came they not by you?
Len. No, indeed, my lord.
Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride;
And damn’d, all those that trust them! — I did hear
The galloping of horse: Who was ’t came by?
Len. ’Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you
word,
Macduff is fled to England.
Macb. Fled to England?
Len. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. Time, thou anticipat’st my dread exploits
The flighty purpose never is o’tertools,
Unless the deed go with it: From this moment,
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now
To crown my thoughts with acts. be it thought and done:
The castle of Macduff I will surprise
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o’ the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I ’ll do, before this purpose cool:
But no more sights!—Where are these gentlemen?
Come, bring me where they are.

Scene II.—Fife. A Room in Macduff’s Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Rosse
L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?
Rosse. You must have patience, madam.
L. Macd. He had none:
His flight was madness: When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.
Rosse. You know not,
Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear.
L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,
His mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not;
He wants the natural touch: for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.
Rosse. My dearest coz',
I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further:
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear;
But float upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way, and move.—I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but I'll be here again:
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.
Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort:
I take my leave at once. [Exit Rosse.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead;
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?
Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
L. Macd. Poor bird: thou'dst never fear the net, nor lime,
The pit-fall, nor the gin.
Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead; how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?
L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
Son. Then you'll buy'em to sell again.
L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet i'faith,
With wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?
L. Macd. Ay, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.
Son. And be all traitors, that do so?
L. Macd. Every one that does so, is a traitor, and must be hanged.
Son. And must they all be hanged, that swear and lie?
L. Macd. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them
L. Macd. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools: for there are liars and swearers enough to beat the honest men, and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey!
But how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
L. Macd. Poor pratter! how thou talk'st.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,
Though in your state of honour I am perfect.54
I doubt, some danger does approach you nearly:
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;
To do worse to you, were fell cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve
you!
I dare abide no longer. [Exit Mess.

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world; where, to do harm,
Is often laudable: to do good, sometime,
Accounted dangerous folly: Why then, alas!
Do I put up that womanly defence,
To say, I have done no harm?—What are these faces?

Enter Murderers.

Mur. Where is your husband?
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified,
Where such as thou may'st find him.
Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou li'st, thou shag-car'd villain.55
Young fry of treachery?
Son. He has killed me, mother:
Run away, I pray you. [Dies.

[Exit L. Macd., crying murder, and pursued by the Murderers.

SCENE III.—England. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Mac. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword; and, like good men Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom: Each new morn,
New widows howl; new orphans cry; new sorrows
ACT IV.

MACBETH.

SCENE III.

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yeld'd out
Like syllable of doleour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and, what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so, perchance.
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well;
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something
You may deserve of him through me; and wisdom
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb,
To appease an angry god.

Mai. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recall,
In an imperial charge. But crave your pardon;
That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose:
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,
Yet grace must still look so.

Mai. I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife, and child, (Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,)
Without leave-taking?—I pray you,
Let not my jealousy be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties—You may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Mai. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs,
Thy title is afer'd!—Tare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For tho whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Do not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think, our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think, withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer
Of goodly thousands: But, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Mai. What should ho be?
Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state
Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confinless harms.

Mai. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell, can come a devil more damn'd
In evills, to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name: But there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'er-bear,
That did oppose my will: Better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Mai. Boundless intemperance
In naturo is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hood-wink.
We have willing dames enough; there cannot be
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this, there grows,
In my most ill-composed affection, such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger moro; that I should forgo
Quarrels unjust against the good, and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Mai. This avarice
Sticks deeper; grows with more pernicious root
Than summer-seeding lust: and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: Yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foysons to fill up your will,
Of your mere own: All these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bountv, perserverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

_Macd._ o Scotland! Scotland!

_Mal._ If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

_Macd._ Fit to govern!
No, not to live.—O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again?
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accuses'd,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king; the queen, that bore
thee,
Oftener upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils, thou repeat'st upon thyself,
Have banish'd me from Scotland.—O, my breast,
Thy hope ends here!

_Mal._ Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcile'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power; and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste: But God above
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction; here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsworn;
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow; and delight
No less in truth, than life: my first false speaking
Was this upon myself: What I am truly,
Is thine, and my poor country's, to command:
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
All ready at a point, was setting forth:
Now we'll together; And the chance, of goodness,
Be like our warranted quarrel!  Why are you silent?

_Macd._ Such welcome and unwelcome things at once,
Tis hard to reconcile.

_Enter a Doctor._

_Mal._ Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth,
I pray you?

_Doct._ Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched souls,
That stay his cure: their malady convinces
The great assay of art; but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

_Mal._ I thank you, doctor.

_[Exit Doct._

_Macd._ What's the disease he means?

_Mal._ 'Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king;
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows: but strangely-visited people,
All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The more despair of surgery, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers: and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy;
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

_Enter Rosse._

_Macd._ See, who comes here?

_Mal._ My countryman; but yet I know him not.

_Macd._ My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

_Mal._ I know him now: Good God, betimes remove
The means that make us strangers!

_Rosse._ Sir, Amen.

_Macd._ Stands Scotland where it did?

_Rosse._ Alas, poor country; I Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot
Be called our mother, but our grave: where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Whereo sighs, and groans, and shrieks that rent the air,
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knoll
Is there scarce ask'd, for who; and good men's lives
Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying, or ere they sicken.

_Macd._ O, relation,
Too nice, and yet too true!

_Mal._ What is the newest grief?

_Rosse._ That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;
Each minute teems a new one.

_Macd._ How does my wife?
Macbeth.

Rosse. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Rosse. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter’d at their peace?

Rosse. No; they were well at peace, when I did leave them.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech; How goes it?

Rosse. When I came hither to transport the tidings,

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness’d the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant’s power a-foot:
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be it their comfort,
We are coming thither; gracious England hath
Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men;
An elder, and a better soldier, none
That Christendom gives out.

Rosse. 'Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words,
That would be howl’d out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.耐

Macd. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a foe-grief,
Due to some single breast?

Rosse. No mind, that’s honest,
But in it shares some woo; though the main part
Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Rosse. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound,
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humph! I guess at it.

Rosse. Your castle is surpris’d; your wife, and babes,
Savagely slaughter’d: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder’d deer,
To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven!—

What, man! no’er pull your hat upon your brows;
Give sorrow words: the grief, that does not speak,
Whispers the o’er-fraught heart, and bids it break.

Macd. My children too?

Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from hence!

My wife kill’d too?

Rosse. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted
Let’s make us med’cines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty ones?
Did you say all?—O, hell-kite!—All?
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.—Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff!
They were all struck for thee! naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls: Heaven rest them now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword: let grief
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And braggart with my tongue!—But, gentle heaven,
Cut short all intermission; front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself;
Within my sword’s length set him; if he ’scape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave: Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above
Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may;
The night is long, that never finds the day.

[Exeunt.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature! to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching.—In this slumber agitation, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may, to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a Taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands; I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark, she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One; Two; Why, then 'tis time to do't;—Hell is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afraid? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife; Where is she now?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. 'Pray God, it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: Yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep, who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown; look not so pale:—I tell you yet again Banquo's buried; he cannot come out of his grave.

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand; What's done, cannot be undone: To bed, to bed, to bed.

[Exit Lady Macb.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: Unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles: Infected minds
To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets. More needs she the divine, than the physician.—

God, God, forgive us all! Look after her;

Remove from her the means of all annoyance,

And still keep eyes upon her:—So, good night:

My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight:

I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Menteith, Cathness, Angus, Lenox, and Soldiers.

Menteith. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,
His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff.
Revenge here in them: for their dear causes
Would, to the bleeding, and the grim alarm,
Exeit the mortified man. 50

Ang. Near Birnam wood
Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Cath. Who knows, if Donalbain be with his brother?
Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file
Of all the gentry; there is Siward’s son, And many unrough youths, that even now
Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?
Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies:
Some say, he’s mad; others, that lesser hate him,
Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain,
He cannot buckle his distempered cause
Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands;
Now minutely revolts upbraids his faith-breath;
Those he commands, move only in command,
Nothing in love: now does he feel his title
Hang loose about him, like a giant’s robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame
His pester’d senses to recoil, and start,
When all that is within him does condemn
Itself, for being there?

Cath. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where ’tis truly ow’d:
Meet we the medicine of the sickly seed;
And with him pour we, in our country’s purge,
Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs,
To drow the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds.
Make we our march towards Birnam.

[Exit, marching.

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all;
Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane,
I cannot taint with fear. What’s the boy Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know
All mortal consequents, pronounce’d me thus:
“Fear not, Macbeth; no man, that’s born of woman

Shall e’er have power on thee.”—Then fly, false thanes,
And mingle with the English epieures;
The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear,
Shall never sagg with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac’d loon!
Where gott’st thou that goose look?

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,
Thou lily-liver’d boy. What soldiers, patch?

Death of thy soul! those linen checks of thine
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face?

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence.—Seyton!—I am sick at heart,

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will cheer me ever, or dissent me now.

I have liv’d enough: my way of life
Is fall’n into the sea, the yellow leaf:
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud, but deep, mouth-honour, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, but dare not.

Seyton!—

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm’d, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I’ll fight, till from my bones my flesh be hack’d.

Give me my armour.

Sey. ’Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I’ll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear.—Give me mine ar-

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that:

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas’d?

Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow;

Raze out the written troubles of the brain;

And with some sweet oblivious antidote,
ACT V.

MACBETH.

SCENE IV.—V.

Cleanse the stuff’d bosom of that perilous stuff, Which weighs upon the heart?

_Exit._

Doct. Therein the patient

Must minister to himself.

_Macb._ Throw physic to the dogs, I’ll none of it.—

Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff:—

_Scyton._ send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from me:—

Come, sir, despatch:—If thou could’st, doctor, cast The water of my land, find her disease, And purge it to a sound and pristine health, I would applaud thee to the very echo, That should applaud again.—Pull ’t off, I say.—

What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug, Would sour these English hence?—Hearest thou of them?

_Doct._ Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation Makes us hear something.

_Macb._—Bring it after me.—

I will not be afraid of death and bane, Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. [_Exit._

_Doct._ Were I from Dunsinane away and clear, Profit again should hardly draw me here. [_Exit._

SCENE IV.—Country near Dunsinane: A Wood in view.

_Enter,_ with _Drums and Colours,_ MALCOLM, old SIWARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTETH, CATINESS, ANGUS, LENOX, ROSSE, and Soldiers, marching.

_Mal._ Cousin, I hope, the day’s are near at hand, That chambers will be safe.

_Ment._ We doubt it nothing.

_Siw._ What wood is this before us?

_Ment._ The wood of Birnam.

_Mal._ Let every soldier hew him down a bough, And bear’t before him; thereby shall we shadow The numbers of our host, and make discovery For in report of us.

_Sold._ It shall be done.

_Siw._ We learn no other, but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure Our setting down before’t.

_Mal._ 'Tis his main hope:

For where there is advantage to be given, Both more and less have given him the revolt, And none serve with him but constrained things, Whose hearts are absent too.

_Macd._ Let our just censure Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

_Siw._ The time approaches,

That will with due decision make us know What we shall say we have, and what we owe. Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate: But certain issue strokes must arbitrate: Towards which, advance the war.

_[Exeunt, marching._

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

_Enter,_ with _Drums and Colours,_ MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers.

_Macb._ Hang out our banners on the outward walls;

The cry is still, “They come!” Our castle’s strength Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie, Till famiue, and the ague, eat them up: Were they not fore’d with that should be ours, We might have met them daceful, beard to beard, And beat them backward home. What is that noise? [A cry within, of Women.

_Sey._ It is the cry of women, my good lord.

_Macb._ I have almost forgot the taste of fears: The time has been, my senses would have cool’d To hear a night-shriek; and my fell of hair Would at a dismal treatise rouse, and stir As life were in’t: I have supp’d full with horrors; Direness, familiar to my slaught’rous thoughts, Cannot once start me.—Wherefore was that cry?

_Sey._ The queen, my lord, is dead.

_Macb._ She should have died hereafter; There would have been a time for such a word.— To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day To the last syllable of recorded time; And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle! Life’s but a walking shadow; a poor player, That struts and frets his hour upon the stage, And then is heard no more: it is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.—

_Enter a Messenger.

Thou com’st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly

_Mess._ Gracious my lord, I shall report that which I say I saw, But know not how to do it.

_Macb._ Well, say, sir.

_Mess._ As I did stand my watch upon the hill, I look’d toward Birnam, and anon, methought, The wood began to move.
SCENE VI.—The same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, &c., and their Army, with Boughs.

Mal. Now near enough; your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are:—You, worthy uncle,
Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff, and we,
Shall take upon us what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.—
Do we but find the tyrant’s power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macb. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbinger of blood and death.

[Exeunt. Alarums continued.

SCENE VII.—The same. Another Part of the Plain.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,
But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—What’s he,
That was not born of woman? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Siward.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou’lt be afraid to hear it.

Yo. Siw. No; though thou callst thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name’s Macbeth.

Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce
A title
More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword
I’ll prove the lie thou speak’st.

[They fight, and young Siw. is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman.—
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish’d by man that’s of a woman born. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macd. That way the noise is:—Tyrant, show thy face:
If thou be’st slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children’s ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir’d to bear their staves; either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an unbatter’d edge,
I sheath again unbolded. There thou should’st be;
By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited: Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarum.

Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Siw. This way, my lord;—the castle’s gently render’d:
The tyrant’s people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whilsts I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macb. Turn, hell-hound, turn

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead?

Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Rosse. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why then, God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more;
They say, he parted well, and paid his score:
So, God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's, Head on a Pole.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: Behold, where stands
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds:
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
Hail, king of Scotland!

All. King of Scotland, hail!

Flour.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,
Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,—
As calling home our exile'd friends abroad,
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen;
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life;—This, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

Flour. Exeunt.
NOTES TO MACBETH.

1 When the battle’s lost and won.
That is, the battle in which Macbeth was then engaged.

2 There to meet with Macbeth.
This line is most unmusical, and evidently imperfect; something has been accidentally omitted from it. The poet, Pope, reads—there I go to meet Macbeth; and Mr. Capell inserts the word brave, before Macbeth. Mr. Steevens meets the difficulty by adding the word whom, and dividing the line between the three witches, thus:

3rd Witch. There to meet with—1st Witch. Whom?
2nd Witch. Macbeth

3 Of Kernes and Gallonglasses is supplied.

Kernes and Gallonglasses were light and heavy armed foot-soldiers. From the following passage in The Mirror for Magistrates, they appear to have been of a rude and savage nature:—

The Galloglass, the Kerne,
Yield or not yield, whom so they take, they stay.

Of and with, are indiscriminately used by our old writers.

4 Confronted him with self-comparisons.
That is, confronted Norway, and not Cawdor, as it at first appears. The Thane of Cawdor was not with the army, but at court, where he is arrested and condemned; his offence consisted in giving secret assistance to the rebels. When Macbeth has the title of Cawdor bestowed upon him, he is not aware of that thane’s treason and apprehension.

5 Saint Colme’s Inch.
Colme’s-inch, now called Inchcolm, is a small island lying in the Firth of Forth, with the ruins of a monastery upon it, which was founded by Alexander I., in 1123, and dedicated to St. Columb. Inch, or Inshie, in the Irish and Erse languages, signifies an island.

6 Aroint thee, witch!
Aroint, is a word of Saxon origin, signifying away! run! There is an old drawing in Hernæ’s Collections, in which our Saviour is represented visiting Hell, and out of his mouth issues a label, on which is written, Out, out, aroint. These words are addressed to Satan, and the last is evidently identical with that used in this passage. One of the folio editions reads, Aroint thee; but aroint is, doubtless, the correct word.

7 The rump-fed ronyon.
Rump-fed, means fed on offal; ronyon, is a mangy or scrofulous woman.

8 And, like a rat without a tail.

“...It should be remembered," says Mr. Steevens, "as it was the belief of the times, that though a witch could assume the form of any animal she pleased, the tail would still be wanting. The reason given by some of the old writers, for such a deficiency, is, that though the hands and feet, by an easy change, might be converted into the four paws of a beast, there was still no part about a woman which corresponded with the length of tail common to almost all our four-footed creatures.”

9 He shall live a man forbid.
That is, as one under a curse or interdiction.

10 By Sinel’s death.
Sinel, Thane of Glamis, was the father of Macbeth.

11 From hence to Inverness.
Dr. Johnson, in his Journey to the Western Islands of Scotland, states, that the walls of the castle of Macbeth, at Inverness, are yet standing.

12 True, worthy Banquo: he is full so valiant.

He is quite, or to the full, as valiant as you describe him. While Macbeth was uttering the preceding lines, Duncan and Banquo have been conversing apart on Macbeth’s conduct, and to some praise supposed to have been bestowed upon him by Banquo, the reply of Duncan refers.

13 That tend on mortal thoughts.
This does not mean, that attend on the thoughts of mortals, but on deadly or murderous designs.

14 Stop up the access and passage to remorse.
Remorse was anciently often used as identical with pity.

15 Coigne of vantage, i.e., convenient corner.

16 We’d jump the life to come.

We would run the risk of eternal punishment, if certain of success and impunity here.

17 Hath borne his faculties so meek.
Faculties is used for office, exercise of power.

18 That tears shall drown the wind.
Alluding to the cessation of wind during a heavy rain. Again, in Shakspeare’s poem of Venus and Adonis:—

Even as the wind is hush’d before it raineth.

87
Like the poor cat i' the adage.
The adage, or old saying, alluded to, is:—the cat loves fish, but dares not wet her feet.

A limbeck only.
The limbeck is the vessel through which distilled liquors pass in the form of steam into the recipient. Their memory shall be but as a vapour.

Restrain me the cursed thoughts that nature Gives way to in repose.
It appears, from what Banquo says immediately afterwards, namely, “I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters,” that he had been tempted by them in a dream, to attempt some act which, when waking, he recollected from Shakspeare finely contrasts his character in this particular, with that of Macbeth. Banquo is praying against being tempted to encourage thoughts of guilt, even in his sleep; while Macbeth is hurrying into temptation, and depriving himself of rest, through impatience to commit the murder he is contemplating.

If you shall cleave to my consent.
Mr. Malone says that consent, in this line, appears to him unintelligible, and that it should be content; but consent is used as synonymous with will, and the meaning is plain enough; if you concur with my will, and assist my designs, it shall create honour for you.

Do mock their charge with snores.
By going to sleep, the grooms made light of and mocked their duty which was that of watching the king.

If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key.
That is frequent, more than enough of. With reference to the whole of this speech, Coleridge says:—
“Such low soliloquy of the Porter, and his few speeches afterwards, I believe have been written for the mob by some other hand, perhaps with Shakspeare’s consent; and that finding it take, he, with the remaining ink of a pen otherwise employed, just interpolated the words, I’ll devil-porter it no further; I had thought to have let in some of all professions that go the primrose way to th’ everlasting bonfire. Of the rest, not one syllable has the ever-present being of Shakspeare.”

Yet I made a shift to cast him.
To cast him up, or case my stomach of him. An equivocation is intended between cast or throw, as a term in wrestling, and to cast up or throw off the stomach.

Limited service, i.e., appointed service.

And when we have our naked frailties hid That suffer in exposure.
That is, when we have clothed our half-dressed bodies, which suffer from exposure to the cold night air.
feast he affects to complain, that he may not be suspected of knowing the cause, though at the same time he very unguardedly drops an allusion to that cause."

29 Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal.
In the primitive times, before human laws purged society of its guilty members.

40 If trembling I inhibit.
To inhibit is to forbid; thus, in Othello, a practiser of arts inhibited.

41 —— You make me strange,
    Even to the disposition that I owe.
That is, you make me amazed at my own disposition or weakness, when I see that you can see such things without fear.

42 How sayst thou, that Macduff denies his person,
    At our great bidding?
The meaning is not—do you say that Macduff denies himself? but—how say you? what do you infer from that? what think you of it?

43 And at the pit of Acheron.
Shakspeare has here bestowed the name of Acheron on any pit or cavern through which there was superstitiously believed to be a communication with the infernal world. The true Acheron was a river in Greece, but Virgili gives this name to his lake in the valley of Amsanctus, in Italy.

44 Magick slight, i.e., magic arts, or practices.
45 Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives.
That is, free our feasts and banquets from the presence or the fear of assassins. Perhaps the words are transposed, and the line originally stood—
    Our feasts and banquets free from bloody knives.

46 Harper cries.
This appears to be some imp or familiar spirit, of which we have no information. Probably it is only a misprint for harpy.

47 Chaudron, i.e., entrails.

48 Song.
This stanza is taken from The Witch, by Middleton, a play to which Shakspeare was indebted for several hints respecting his witches. It is there called A Charme Song about a Vessel; but it was, in all probability, traditional, and belonged neither to Middleton or Shakspeare.

49 An apparition of an armed Head rises.
The armed head represents, symbolically, Macbeth's head cut off, and brought to Malcolm by Macduff. The bloody child is Macduff untimely ripped from his mother's womb. The child with a crown on his head and a bough in his hand, is the royal Malcolm, who ordered his soldiers to liew them down a bough, and bear it before them to Dunsinane.

60 Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.
That is, thou shalt command my most exclusive and entire attention, even were my sense of hearing greater than it is. Had I three ears, thou shouldst engross them all.

61 —— And thy hair,
    Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first.
We should most probably read—thy hair: but Mr. Mason observes that the old reading may be the true one, as it implies that their hair was of the same colour, which is more likely to mark a family resemblance than the hair, which depends on habit.

62 That two-fold balls and triple sceptres carry.
An allusion to the union of the two islands, and the three kingdoms under the rule of James the First.

63 For the blood bolstered.
That is grimed or besmeared with blood. In Warwickshire, when a man's head was broken, and the hair matted together with blood, it was said to be bolstered. Such a term was peculiarly applicable to Banquo, who had twenty trenched gashes on his head.

64 Though in your state of honour I am perfect.
That is, though I am perfectly acquainted with your honourable rank.

65 Thou shag-ear'd villain.
Perhaps we should read shag-haired, a term of abuse very common in our ancient plays.

66 All these are portable.
Portable is perhaps here used for supportable. All these vices, balanced by your graces, may be endured.

67 —— And the chance of goodness,
    Be like our warranted quarrel!
This passage conveys no decided meaning. Dr. Johnson inclines to the belief that Shakspeare wrote—and the chance, O goodness, &c. The sense then will be—may the chance or result of this battle be in accordance with the justice of our cause.

68 Where hearing should not catch them
To latch any thing, is to seize or lay hold of it; in the north country, it signifies the same as to catch.

69 Since his majesty went into the field.
Mr. Steevens very judiciously remarks that this is one of our poet's oversights. Macbeth had not gone into the field, but was shut up in his castle of Dunsinane, and surrounded by besiegers.

70 Excite the mortified man.
That is, they would excite a hermit, one whose feelings were subdued and mortified within him, and who could not therefore easily be roused to aggressive actions.

89
Othello, the Moor of Venice.

SHAKSPERE took the hint for this tragedy from a story in the Iliocatomithi of Giraldi Cinthio, the Italian novelist, of which, however, no translation of the time of our poet has been discovered. The story by Cinthio is very short, the characters consisting only of the Moor, Desdemona, the lieutenant, the ensign, and the wife of the latter; none of them being called by their names, except the unfortunate victim of treachery and jealousy. The incidents also are dissimilar in many respects, especially in regard to the death of Desdemona, who is murdered in a manner so revolting that the good taste of Shakspeare instantly discarded it. She is beaten to death by the ensign with a stocking filled with sand, the Moor countenancing this savage murder by his presence. Then placing her in bed they pull down the rafters of the room upon it, and the Moor calls for help, saying the house is falling. The neighbours on this alarm running there, find Desdemona dead under the beams, and her decease is attributed to accident, and not to design. "But," says the novelist, "God, who is a just observer of the hearts of men, suffered not so great a crime to pass without the punishment that was due to it." The Moor becomes deranged in his mind, and hating the ensign for the part he took against his wife degrades him from his commission, upon which the latter accuses him of the murder of Desdemona, and the general is subjected to the rack, and then condemned to exile, "in which," says the narrator, "he was afterwards killed, as he deserved to be, by his wife's relations." The ensign escaped for a time, but being arrested for some other crime, he also was put to the torture, and racked so severely that he died in consequence.

Such are the bare and rude materials (possessing no further interest or literary merit than a modern newspaper narrative of murder) upon which our poet has founded his great tragedy, which Mr. Douce contends is inferior "in point of originality and poetic wealth to Macbeth, to Lear, to Hamlet, and The Tempest." Its inferiority in point of originality I emphatically deny; Shakspeare's obligation to Cinthio is so very trifling as to be unworthy of record, if it were not interesting to know from what seed in the garden of fiction so great and noble a tree as Othello was generated. To carry out the comparison, it reminds me of the mustard seed in the parable, which is the least of all seeds, but when it is grown it becometh a great tree, and the fowls of the air lodge in the branches. This tragedy may be inferior in mere poetry to all the plays just enumerated, but in the delineation of the sublime energy of passion, it is superior to them all except Lear, and our compassion for Othello is even greater than that which we entertain for the aged monarch.

The Moor is amiable, brave, generous, and firm; with him, what should be, must be: he will not permit his feelings to interfere with what he deems his duty. This feature of his character contributes materially to the catastrophe of the tragedy: had he possessed the irresolution of Hamlet, Iago's villany would have been discovered, and Desdemona saved; for Hamlet would always have been desiring more evidence, and even, when convinced of her falseness, would have remained undecided how to act, and probably would have ultimately divorced her. But Iago calculates on the hot Moorish blood which runs in Othello's veins; he knows the impetuous fierce passions which lie latent in the soul of the victim of his fiendish deception, and practises upon them accordingly. Othello is very philosophical until his mind is poisoned by the insinuations of Iago; he keeps a sort of military guard over his passions; remember his calm even conduct when Brabantio approaches him in the street at night, followed by armed servants and public officers, whom he bids to seize the Moor; he himself addressing him as "vile thief," and with other violent language. And before the Duke he conducts his own cause with the subtlety and readiness of an advocate. What a touch of effective oratorical artifice is that where he tells the assembled senate, that he had been bred in a camp, knew but little of the world, and therefore could not grace his cause by the arts of eloquence. Thus leading them to the belief that he was incapable of defending himself, and then delivering the most effective oration that could have been uttered in his behalf. But when the maddening conviction of his wife's treachery and shame is forced upon him, he breaks out into a paroxysm of frantic passion; his habit of self-government is for a time annihilated, and the hot blood of the savage triumphs over the judgment of the man. He tries to escape from this dreadful conviction:—

By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.

But Iago draws the web gradually closer and more closely around him, and, with fiendish sagacity, keeps the subject in all its most hideous colours perpetually in his mind, until the final perpetration of the terrible catastrophe of the drama. How painfully affecting is the anguish of soul with which he exclaims: “But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!” Well might Coleridge, with the true feeling of a poet, ask, as the curtain drops, which do we pity most, Desdemona, or the heart-broken Moor.

Iago is an utter villain, with no redeeming circumstances—love, benevolence, sympathy for his race, every holy and exalted feeling have, in him, no existence; their place is occupied by a satanic selfishness, and an absolute love of malice; it is the fertile activity of his intellect, and the ingenuity of his wickedness, that alone make him endurable, otherwise we should shrink from him with loathing and disgust. He is the most villainous character ever drawn by Shakspere, for Richard III. is cruel, to serve his ambition; but Iago is cruel and fraudulent, because he finds a pleasure in fraud and cruelty; he has no belief in honesty—does not think there is any such thing in the world; he entertains an obdurate incredulity as to the virtue of women, and has a perfect faith that Desdemona will be seduced by Cassio, if he tempts her. He looks upon everything only in a gross and sensual light, and delights in painting the purest feelings in the most repulsive colours; this will explain why Shakspere has put so many coarse and revolting speeches in his mouth. No character the great poet ever drew utters so many offensive expressions, and this was, doubtless, intended to exhibit the intense depravity of his mind. He has a natural turn for dishonesty and trickery, and would rather gain his ends by deception than by straightforward conduct. He is proud of his cunning, and witty also, full of that ill-natured sarcasm which delights in giving pain to others.

The character of Cassio is admirably delineated—he is every way calculated to become an object of suspicion to the Moor—he is young, handsome, and courteous, a scholar, and something of a poet, as his beautiful description of Desdemona will evidence. Even Iago admits, “That he hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after.”

Poor Desdemona is the perfection of womanly gentleness and tenderness—a generous, romantic girl, full of kindness to every one, and by the very liberality of her nature, laying herself open to the aroused suspicions of her husband. If she has a fault, it is that she is too passive. Observe the wide contrast between her character and that of Emilia, as finely portrayed in the third scene of the fourth act. Othello has desired his wife to retire and dismiss her attendant, and the two women are conversing before they separate for the night, Desdemona, in her simple purity, asks:—

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emilia,—
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind.

Note the worldliness of the other's reply; she would not do “such a thing for a joint-ring,” but, &c.; and Desdemona's sceptical rejoinder, “I do not think there is any such woman.” The absolute purity of her mind will not permit her to believe in evil. How sweetly touching is her character, compared with that of Iago—a seraph and a demon.

This tragedy is attributed by Mr. Malone to the year 1611, but on very slender grounds, with which he professes himself to be dissatisfied; but there is no doubt that it was one of Shakspere's latest productions.

SCENE—For the First Act in Venice; during the rest of the Play at a Seaport in Cyprus.
SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Roderigo and Iago.

Rod. Tush, never tell me, I take it much unkindly,
That thou, Iago,—who hast had my purse,
As if the strings were thine,—should'st know of this.
Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:—
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me, thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Oft capp'd to him;—and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them, with a bombast circumstance,
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;
And, in conclusion, nonsuits
My mediators; "for, certes," says he,
"I have already chose my officer."

And what was he?
Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;¹
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theorist,
Wherein the toged consuls² can propose
As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,
Is all his soldiership. But, he, sir, had the election:
And 1,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof,
At Rhodes, at Cyprus; and on other grounds
Christian and heathen,—must be be-lee'd and calm'd
By debitor and creditor, this counter-caster;³
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I, (God bless the mark!) his Moor-ship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

1. "near without practice" 2. "some with a pride and purposes" 3. "one of whom his eyes had seen the proof" 4. "of whom his eyes had seen the proof" 5. "must be be-lee'd and calm'd"
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on't,
As it may lose some colour.

Roderigo. Here is her father's house; I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do; with like timorous accent, and dire yell,
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Roderigo. What ho! Brabantio! signior Brabantio, ho!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

Brabantio, above, at a Window.

Brabantio. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?

Roderigo. Signior, is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Brabantio. Why? wherefore ask you this?

Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are robb'd; for shame, put on your gown;
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul;
Even now, very now, an old black ram
Is tapping your white ewe. Arise, arise;
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandaire of you:

Arise, I say.

Brabantio. What, have you lost your wits?

Roderigo. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Brabantio. Not I; what are you?

Roderigo. My name is—Roderigo.

Brabantio. The worse welcome:
I have charg'd thee, not to haunt about my doors:
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper, and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Roderigo. Sir, sir, sir, sir,—

Brabantio. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit, and my place, have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Roderigo. Patience, good sir.

Brabantio. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;
My house is not a grange.Æ

Roderigo. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are one of those, that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, you think we are ruffians: You'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have couriers for cousins, and gennets for German.

Brabantio. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Brabantio. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Brabantio. This thou shalt answer; I know thee, Roderigo.

Roderigo. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech you,
If 't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly, I find, it is,) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,Æ
Transported—with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knife of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But, if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe,
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter,—if you have not given her leave,—
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger,Æ
Of here and everywhere: Straight satisfy yourself:
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Brabantio. Strike on the tiuder, ho! Give me a taper;—call up all my people:—
This accident is not unlike my dream,
Belief of it oppresses me already:—
Light, I say! light! [Exit, from above.

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you:
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as, if I stay, I shall,) Against the Moor: For, I do know, the state,—
However this may gall him with some check,—
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd With such loud reason to the Cyprus' wars, (Which even now stand in act,) that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have not,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Mr. McKean Buchanan as Othello.

Oth: Let him do his spite—
My services which I have done the signory
Shall out-tongue his complaints.

Othello, Act 3, Sc. 2.
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,
Lead to the Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

[Exit.

Enter, below, Brabantio, and Servants with Torches.

Brabantio. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despised time,
Is nought but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O, unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, say'st thou?—Who would be a father?—
How didst thou know 'twas she?—O, thou deceiv'st me Past thought!—What said she to you?—Get more tapers;
Raise all my kindred.—Are they married, think you?

Roderigo. Truly, I think, they are.

Brabantio. O heaven!—How got she out?—O treason of the blood!—

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act.—Are there not charms,
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Roderigo. Yes, sir; I have indeed.

Brabantio. Call up my brother.—O, that you had had her!—

Some one way, some another.—Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Roderigo. I think, I can discover him; if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Brabantio. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;

I may command at most:—Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.—

On, good Roderigo; I'll deserve your pains.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain
men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience,
To do no contriv'd murder; I lack iniquity

Sometimes, to do me service: Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yer'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such seury and provoking terms
Against your honour;

That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir
Are you fast married? for, be sure of this,—
That the magnifico is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential
As double as the duke's; he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance
The law (with all his might, to enforce it on,)~
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
(Which, when I know that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate,) I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege; and my demerits
May speak, unbonneted, to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition,
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder

Enter Cassio, at a distance, and certain Officers with Torches.

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I: I must be found
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you, friends
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine;
It is a business of some heat: the gallies
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls, rais'd, and met,
Are at the duke's already: You have been hotly call'd for;
When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests,
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?
Jago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land
    carack;
If it prove a lawful prize, he's made for ever.
Cas. I do not understand.
Jago. He's married.
Cas. To who?

Re-enter Othello.

Jago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?
Oth. Have with you.
Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers of night, with Torches and Weapons.

Jago. It is Brabantio:—general, be advis'd;
He comes to bad intent.
Oth. Hola! stand there!
Rodi. Signior, it is the Moor.
Bra. Down with him, thief! [They draw on both sides.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.—
Good signior, you shall more command with years,
Than with your weapons.
Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her:
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound,
Whether a maid—so tender, fair, and happy;
So opposite to marriage, that she shun'st
The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardance to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou: to fear, not to delight.
Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense,
That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms;
Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs, or minerals,
That waken motion:—I'll have it disputed on;
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts infiltrated and out of warrant:—
Lay hold upon him; if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.
By no assay of reason; 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gaite: When we consider
The importance of Cyprys to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,18
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in:—if we make thought of this,
We must not think, the Turk is so unskilful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first;
Neglecting an attempt of ease, and gain,
To wake, and wage, a danger profitless.
Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.
Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottowmites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.
1st Sen. Ay, so I thought:—How many, as you guess?
Mess. Of thirty sail: and now do they re-steam
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprys.—Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.
Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprys.—
Mareus Lucchesè, is he not in town?
1st Sen. He's now in Florence.
Duke. Write from us; wish him post-post-haste: despatch.
1st Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago, Roderigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you!7
Against the general enemy Ottoman.
I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior;

[To Bra.
We lack'd your counsel and your help to night.
Bra. So did I yours: Good your grace, pardon me;
Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business,
Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care
Take hold on me; for my particular grief

Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature,
That it engluts and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?
Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!
Sen. Dead?
Bra. Ay, to me;
She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks.
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not——
Duke. Who'er he be, that, in this soul proceeding,
Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter,
After your own sense; yea, though our proper son
Stood in your action.
Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.
Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,
Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath hither brought.
Duke and Sen. We are very sorry for it.
Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this?
[To Oth.
Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
My very noble and approv'd good masters,—
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true; true, I have married her
The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd
Their dearest action in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracious patience,
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,)
I won his daughter with.
Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself; And she,—in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing,—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on?
It is a judgment main'd, and most imperfect,
That will confess—perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

_Duke._ To vouch this, is no proof;
Without more certain and more overt test,
Than these thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming, do prefer against him.

_1st Sen._ But, Othello, speak;—
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections
Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affor'deth?

_Oth._ I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary;
And let her speak of me before her father
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

_Duke._ Fetch Desdemona hither.

_Oth._ Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place,—
_Exit Lago and Attendants._

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

_Duke._ Say it, Othello.

_Oth._ Her father lov'd me; oft invited me
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes
That I have pass'd.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it.
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents, by flood, and field;
Of hair-breadth escapes i' the imminent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travel's history;

Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads

Do grow beneath their shoulders.

These things to hear,
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affairs would draw her thence;
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse: Which I observing,
Took once a plant hour; and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard.
But not intentionally, I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke,
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore,—In faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing
strange;
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd, she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint, I spake:
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd;
And I lov'd her, that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd;
Here comes the lady, let her witness it.

_Enter Desdemona, Lago, and Attendants._

_Duke._ I think, this tale would win my daughter too.—

_Good Brabantio._

Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

_Bra._ I pray you, hear her speak;
If she confess, that she was half the wooer,
 Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress;
Do you perceive in all this noble company,
Where most you owe obedience?

_Des._ My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you, I am bound for life, and education;
My life, and education, both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty,
I am hitherto your daughter: But here's my husband;
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

_Bra._ God be with you!—I have done:
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs;
I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—
Come hither, Moor:
I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

_Duke._ Let me speak like yourself;²² and lay a sentence,
Which, as a grise, or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended,
But soon the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv’d when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb’d, that smiles, steals something from the thief;
He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

_Bra._ So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears:
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear,
That the bruis’d heart was pierced through the ear.
I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

_Duke._ The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus:—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you: And though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to stubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

_Oth._ The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrico-driven bed of down: I do agnize³⁴
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardness; and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomanes.
Most humbly therefore biding to your state
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reverence of place, and exhibition;
With such accommodation, and resort,
As levels with her breeding.

_Duke._ If you please,
Be’t at her father’s.

_Bra._ I’ll not have it so.

_Des._ Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend a gracious ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice,
To assist my simpleness.

_Duke._ What would you, Desdemona?

_Des._ That I did love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes²⁵
May trumpet to the world; my heart’s subdued
Even to the very quality of my lord
I saw Othello’s visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites, for which I love him, are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence: Let me go with him.

_Oth._ Your voices, lords:—beseech you, let her will
Have a free way.
Vouch with me, heaven; I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat, the young affects,
In my distinct and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend your good souls, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
For she is with me: No, when light-wing’d toys
Of feather’d Cupid seal with wanton dulness
My speculative and active instruments,²⁶
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

_Duke._ Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going: the affair cries—
haste,
And speed must answer it; you must hence tonight.

_Des._ To-night, my lord?

_Duke._ This night.

_Oth._ With all my heart.
Duke. At nine 'tis the morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect.
As doth import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty, and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.—
Good night to every one.—And, noble signior,

[To BRA.

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.
1st Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to see;
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Execute Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee;
I pr'ythee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Execute Oth. and DES.

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinent drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torment: and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish between a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinen-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a fig! 'tis in ourselves, that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which, our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme; supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many; either to have it sterile with idleness, or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poised another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this, that you call—love, to be a sect, or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: Drown thyself? drown cats, and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard: I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse;—nor be his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration;—put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice.—She must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: if sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me;—Go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted; this hath no less reason: Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, and me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time, which will be delivered: Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus.

A Platform.

Enter Montano and Two Gentlemen.

Mont. What from the cape can you discern at sea?
1st Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Desery a sail.

Mon. Methiuks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land;

A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortar? what shall we hear of this?

2nd Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:

For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chiding billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous main,

Seems to cast water on the burning bear,
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:
I never did like molestation view
On th' eneufed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not inshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3rd Gent. News, lords! our wars are done;

Will do, as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio 'a proper man: Let me see now;
To get his place, and to plume up my will;
A double knavery,—How? how?—Let me see:—
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear,
That he is too familiar with his wife:—
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram'd to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seems to be so
And will as tenderly be led by the nose,

As asses are.
I have 't;—it is engender'd:—Hell and night

Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

[Exit.

The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,

That their designment halts: A noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance

On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true

3rd Gent. The ship is here put in,

A Veronese; Michael Cassio,

Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,

Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,

And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on 't; tis a worthy governor.

3rd Gent. But this same Cassio,—though to speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss,—yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. 'Pray heaven he be;

For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!

As well to see the vessel that's come in,

As throw out our eyes for brave Othello;

Even till we make the main, and the aerial blue,

An indistinct regard.

3rd Gent. Come, let's do so;

For every minute is expectancy

Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks to the valiant of this warlike isle,

That so approve the Moor; O, let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!
Mon. Is he well shipp’d?
Cas. His bark is stoutly timber’d, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv’d allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold crew.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter another Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?
4th Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o’ the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry—a sail.
Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.
2nd Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:

[ Guns heard.

Our friends, at least.
Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who ’tis that is arriv’d.
2nd Gent. I shall.
Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv’d?
Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev’d a maid
That paragons description, and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation,
Does bear all excellency.—How now? who has put in?

Re-enter second Gentleman.

2nd Gent. ’Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.
Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter’d rocks, and congregated sands,—
Traitors ensteep’d to clog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.
Mon. What is she?
Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain’s captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A se’nnight’s speed.—Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath;
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love’s quick pants in Desdemona’s arms,
Give renew’d fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!—O, behold,

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo, and Attendants.
The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees:—
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?
Cas. He is not yet arriv’d; nor know I aught
But that he’s well, and will be shortly here.
Des. O, but I fear;—How lost you company?
Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship: But, hark! a sail.

[ Cry within, A sail, a sail! Then guns heard.
2nd Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel;
This likewise is a friend.
Cas. See for the news.—[Exit Gent.
Good ancient, you are welcome;—Welcome, mistress:—
[To Emilia.
Let it not galls your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; ’tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You’d have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.
Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still, when I have list to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.
Emil. You have little cause to say so.
Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,
Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,
Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!
Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk;
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.
Emil. You shall not write my praise.
Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What would’st thou write of me, if thou should’st praise me?
Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to’t;
For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on, assay:—There’s one gone to the harbour?
Iago. Ay, madam.
Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.—
Come, how would'st thou praise me?
Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my invention
Comes from my pate; as birdlime does from frizze,
It plucks out brains and all: But my muse labours,
And thus she is deliver'd.
If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.
Des. Well praise'd! How if she be black and witty?
Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.
Des. Worse and worse.
Emil. How, if fair and foolish?
Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair,31
For even her folly helps her to an heir.
Des. These are old fond paradoxes, to make fools Laugh i'the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her's foul and foolish?
Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish thereunto,
But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.
Des. O heavy ignorance!—thou praises the worst best.
But what praise could'st thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one, that in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?
Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;
Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;
Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay;
Fled from her wish, and yet said—' now I may,'
She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly:
She that in wisdom never was so frail,
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;
She that could think, and ne'er disclose her mind,
See suitors following, and not look behind;
She was a wight—if ever such wight were—
Des. To do what?
Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicl small beer.
Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!—
Do not learn of him, Emilia, though be he thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most proflane and liberal counsellor?32
Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.
Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: Ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship.
You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would, they were elyster-pipes for your sake!——[Trumpet.] The Moor, I know his trumpet.
Cas. 'Tis truly so.
Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.
Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!
Des. My dear Othello?
Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,
To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!
If after every tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow till they have waken'd death
And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas,
Olympus high; and duck again as low
As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,
'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear,
My soul hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.
Des. The heavens forbid,
But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers
I cannot speak enough of this content,
It stops me here; it is too much of joy:
And this, and this, the greatest discord be,
[ Kissing her.
That e'er our hearts shall make!
Iago. O, you are well tun'd now!
But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am.

[Aside.

Oth. Come, let's to the castle.—
News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd. How do our old acquaintance of this isle?
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts.—I pr'ythee, good Iago,
Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers:
Bring thou the master to the citadel;
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus

[Exeunt Oth., Des., and Att.]

103
Act II.

Othello, the Moor of Venice.

Scene I.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour.
Come hither. If thou be'st valiant as (they say) base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard:—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: And will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite,— loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in:
Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor;
very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position,) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble; no further conscionable, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compasning of his salt and most hidden loose affection?
why, none; why, none: A slippery and subtle knave; a finder out of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: A devilish knave!
besides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath all those requisites in him, that fully and green minds look after: A pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: Blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index, and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion:

Fish!—But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay 't upon you: Cassio knows you not;—I'll not be far from you: Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler;
and, haply, with his truncheon may strike at you:
Provoke him that he may: for, even out of that, will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore.
Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit. Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,— is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now I do love her too;
Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure,
I stand accountant for as great a sin,)—
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat: the thought whereof
Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards;
And nothing can or shall content my soul,
Till I am even with him, wife for wife;
Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—
If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too;
Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me.
For making him egregiously an ass,
And practising upon his peace and quiet
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd
Knavery's plain face is never seen, till us'd.

[Exit.
MR. MACREADY AS IAGO.

IAGO. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it:
That she loves him, is apt and of great credit:

OTHELLO. Act 2 Sc 1.
SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a Proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials: So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath tolled eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello!—Exit.

SCENE III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard tonight: Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do; But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.

Michael, good night: To-morrow, with our earliest, Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear love, The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue; That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.—Good night. [Exit Oth., Des., and Attend.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock: Our general cast us thus early, for the love of his Desdemona; whom let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.
Iago. Some wine, ho!
And let me the canakin clink, clink;
And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier's a man;
A life's but a span;
Why then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys.
_Cas._ 'Tis Nere heaven, an excellent song.
_Iago._ I learned it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

_Cas._ Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?
_Iago._ Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be filled.

_Cas._ To the health of our general.
_Mon._ I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

_Iago._ O sweet England!
King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence ell too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor—town.
He was a wight of high renown,
And then art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine auld elocution thee.

Some wine, ho!

_Cas._ Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

_Iago._ Will you hear it again?

_Cas._ No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that does those things.—Well,—Heaven's above all; and there be souls that must be saved, and thence souls must not be saved.

_Iago._ It's true, good lieutenant.

_Cas._ For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

_Iago._ And so do I too, lieutenant.

_Cas._ Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancien.

Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's to our business.

Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk; this is my ancien;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand:—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

_Cas._ Why, very well, then: you must not think then that I am drunk.

[Exit.]

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

_Iago._ You see this fellow, that is gone before;—
He is a soldier, fit to stand by Cesar
And give direction: and do but see his vice;
'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him.
I fear, the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

_Mon._ But is he often thus?

_Iago._ 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

_Mon._ It were well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils; Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

_Iago._ How now, Roderigo?

[Aside.

I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit Rod.

_Mon._ And 'tis great pity, that the noble
Moor
Should hazard such a place, as his own second,
With one of an ingrate infirmity:
It were an honest action, to say
So to the Moor.

_Iago._ Not I, for this fair island
I do love Cassio well; and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?

[Orywithin]—Help! help!

Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

_Cas._ You rogue! you rascal!

_Mon._ What's the matter, lieutenant?
_Cas._ A knave!—teach me my duty!
I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

_Rod._ Beat me!
_Cas._ Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking Rod.

_Mon._ Nay, good lieutenant;

[Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

_Cas._ Let me go, sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

_Mon._ Come, come, you're drunk.

_Cas._ Drunk!

[They fight.

_Iago._ Away, I say! go out, and cry—a mutiny.

[Aside to Rod., who goes out.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen,—
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—
MR. MACREADY AS OTHELLO.

OTH

Now by heaven!
My blood begins my safer guides to die
And passion having my best judgment coiled
Assays to lead the way. If I cause stir
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you
Shall sink in my rebuke.

Act 2. Sc. 3.
ACT II.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE

Scene III.

Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed!

[Bell rings.

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
The town will rise: God's will, lieutenant! hold;
You will be shamed for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death;—he dies,

Oth. Hold, for your lives.

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant,—sir, Montano, gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this? Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that,

Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?

For christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,

Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—

Silence that dreadful bell, it frights the isle

From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,

Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know;—friends all but now, even now,

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom

Devesting them for bed: and then, but now,

(As if some planet had unwitted men,

Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,

In opposition bloody. I cannot speak

Any beginning to this peevish odds;

And 'would in action glorious I had lost

These legs, that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;

The gravity and stillness of your youth

The world hath noted, and your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure; What's the matter,

That you unlace your reputation thus,

And spend your rich opinion, for the name

Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;

Your officer, Iago, can inform you—

While I spare speech, which something now offends me;—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught

By me that's said or done amiss this night;

Unless self-charity be sometime a vice;

And to defend ourselves it be a sin,

When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,

My blood begins my safer guides to rule;

And passion, having my best judgment collid'd,

Assays to lead the way: If I once stir,

Or do but lift this arm, the best of you

Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know

How this foul rout began, who set it on;

And he that is prov'd in this offence,

Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,

Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war,

Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,

To manage private and domestic quarrel,

In night, and on the court and guard of safety!

'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office,

Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,

Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near

I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth

Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.

Montano and myself being in speech,

There comes a fellow, crying out for help;

And Cassio following him with determin'd sword,

To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman

Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;

Myself the crying fellow did pursue;

Lost, by his clamour, (as it so fell out,)

The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot,

Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather

For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,

And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night,

I ne'er might say before: When I came back,

(For this was brief,) I found them close toger-

At bow, and thrust; even as again they were,

When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report:—

But men are men; the best sometimes forget:—

Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,—

As men in rage strike those that wish them best,—

Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, receiv'd,

From him that fled, some strange indignity,

Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,

Thy honesty and love doth mine this matter,

Making it light to Cassio:—Cassio, I love thee;

But never more be officer of mine.—
Enter Desdemona, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais’d up;—
I’ll make thee an example.

Des. What’s the matter, dear?
Oth. All’s well now, sweeting; Come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts,
Myself will be your surgeon: Lead him off.

[To Mon., who is led off.]

Iago, look with care about the town;
And silence those whom this vile brawl distract-

Come, Desdemona; ’tis the soldier’s life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak’d with strife.

[Execunt all but Iago and Cas.]

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?
Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part, sir, of myself, and what remains is bestial.—My reputation, Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving; You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: You are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog, to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he’s yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander, with so slight; so drunken, and so indiscreet an office. Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one’s own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O, that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: How came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler: As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stauds, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me, I am a drunkard! If I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unblesshed, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think, you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I’ll tell you what you shall do. Our general’s wife is now the general;—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces: confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she’ll help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested: This broken joint, between you and her husband, entertain her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am despirate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cas.]

Iago. And what’s he then, that says,—I play the villain?

When this advice is free, I give, and honest,

Probabl to thinking, and (indeed) the course

To win the Moor again? For ’tis most easy

The inclining Desdemona to subdue

In any honest suit; she’s fram’d as fruitful

As the free elements. And then for her
To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his baptism,
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,—
His soul is so en fetter'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I then a villain,
To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now: For while this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor.
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,—
That she repeals him for her body's lust;
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch;
And out of her own goodness make the net,
That shall enmesh them all.—How now, Roderigo?

Enter Roderigo.

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well endgelled; and, I think, the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have not patience!—
What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?
Thou know'st, we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio:
Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits, that blossom first, will first be ripe:
Content thyself a while.—By the mass, 'tis morning;
Pleasure, and action, make the hours seem short.—
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Rod.] Two things are to be done,—
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;
I'll set her on;
Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find
Soliciting his wife:—Ay, that's the way;
Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains,
Something that's brief; and bid—good-morrow, general. [Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been at Naples, that they speak 'i' the nose thus?
1st Mus. How, sir, how!
Clo. Are these, I pray you, called wind instruments?
1st Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.
Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail.
1st Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?
Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

1st Mus. Well, sir, we will not.
Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to 't again: but, as they say, to hear music, the general does not greatly care.
1st Mus. We have none such, sir.
Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: go; vanish into air; away. [Exeunt Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?
Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas.. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife, be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: Wilt thou do this?
Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. [Exit.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time, Iago.

109
Iago. You have not been a-bed then?
Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife: My suit to her
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some access.
Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free. [Exit.]
Cas. I humbly thank you for 't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will soon be well.
The general, and his wife, are talking of it;
And she speaks for you stoutly: The Moor replies,
That he, you hurt, is of great fame in Cyprus,
And great affinity; and that, in wholesome wisdom,
He might not but refuse you: but, he protests, he loves you;
And needs no other suitor, but his likings,
To take the sa'f'st occasion by the front,
To bring you in again.
Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—
If you think fit, or that it may be done,—
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.
Emil. Pray you, come in;
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.
Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot;
And, by him, do my duties to the state:
That done, I will be walking on the works,
Repair there to me.
Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see 't?
Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf.
Oth. Who is 't, you mean?
Dess. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good my lord,
If I have any grace, or power to move you
His present reconciliation take;
For, if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face:
I pr'ythee, call him back.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Dess. Ay, sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me;
I suffer with him. Good love, call him back.
Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.
Dess. But shall 't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.
Dess. Shall 't be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Dess. To-morrow dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home;
I meet the captains at the citadel.
Dess. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;
Or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn;—
I pray thee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;
And yet his trespass, in our common reason,
(Save that, they say, the wars must make examples
Out of their best,) is not almost a fault
To incur a private check: When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me, that I should deny,
Or stand so mammering on. What! Michael Cassio,
That came a wooing with you; and many a time,
When I have spoke of you disparagingly,
Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,— Oth. Pr'ythee, no more: let him come when he will;
I will deny thee nothing.
Dess. Why, this is not a been;
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm;
Or sue to you to do peculiar profit
To your own person: Nay, when I have a suit,
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poise and difficulty,
And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I will come to thee straight.
Dess. Emilia, come:—Be it as your fancies teach you;
What'er you do, I am obedient.
[Exit, with Emil.
Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,
Know of your love?
Oth. He did, from first to last: Why dost thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
No further harm.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with her.
Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:—Discern'st thou aught in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my lord?
Oth. Ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my lord?
Oth. Think, my lord!
By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought
Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something:
I heard thee say but now,—Thou lik'dst not that,
When Cassio left my wife; What did'lt not like?
And, when I told thee—he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou cry'dst "Indeed?"
And did'lt contract and purse thy brow together,
As if thou then had'lt shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit: If thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think, thou dost;
And,—for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,—
Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more:
For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
Are tricks of custom; but, in a man that's just, They are close denotements, working from the heart, That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,—
I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or, that those be not, 'would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why then,
I think that Cassio is an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:
I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thoughts,
As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts
The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.

Oth. Why, say, they are vile and false,—
As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets, and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,—
Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses; and, oft, my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not,—I entreat you then,
From one that so imperfectly conjects,
You'd take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance:—
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he, that filches from me my good name,
Robes me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means
Note, if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement opportunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
(As worthy cause I have, to fear—I am,)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings: If I do prove her haggard,46
Though that her jessies were my dear heart-strings,47
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Happily, for I am black;
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have: Or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that 's not much;—
She 's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be—to loath her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death;
Even then this forked plague is fated to us,48
When we do quicken. Desdemona comes:

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.
If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.
Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.
Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little;
He puts the Handkerchief from him, and it drops.
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt Oth. and Des.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin;
This was her first remembrance from the Moor;
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it: but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her, she would ever keep it.)
That she reserves it overmore about her,
To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give it Iago:
What he'll do with it, heaven knows, not I;
I nothing, but to please his fantasy.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you do here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.

Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common thing.

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now
For that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief?

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her?

Emil. No, faith; she let it drop by negligence;
And, to the advantage, I, being here, took it up.

Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with it, that you have been so earnest
To have me filech it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatching it.

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
Give it me again: Poor lady! she'll run mad,
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not you known of 't; I have use for it.
Go, leave me. [Exit Emil.

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it: Trifles, light as air,
Are, to the jealous, confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:—
Dangerous conceits are, in their natures, poisons,
Which, at the first, are scarce found to distaste;
But, with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—

Enter Othello.

Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?
To me?

Iago. Why, how now, general? no more of that.

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack:

I swear, 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Than but to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord?

Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?
I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know it, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known: O now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing sife,
The royal banner; and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And O you mortal engines, whose rude threats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

Iago. Is it possible?—My lord,—

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore;
Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof;

[Taking him by the throat.

Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is it come to this?

Oth. Make me to see it; or (at the least) so prove it,
That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop,
To hang a doubt on: or, wee upon thy life!

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
Never pray more: abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate:
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd,
For nothing canst thou to damnation add,
Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me
Are you a man? have you a soul, or sense?—
God be wi'you; take mine office.—O wretched fool,
That liv'is't to make thine honesty a vice!—
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world,
To be direct and honest, is not safe—
I thank you for this profit; and, from hence, I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay:—Thou should'st be honest.

Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool, And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world, I think my wife be honest, and think she is not; I think that thou art just, and think thou art not; I'll have some proof: Her name, that was as fresh As Dina's visage, is now begrimed and black As mine own face.—If there be cords, or knives, Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams, I'll not endure it.—Would, I were satisfied!

Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion: I do repent me, that I put it to you. You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would? nay, I will.

Iago. And may: But, how? how satisfied, my lord?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on? Behold her tupp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!

Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think, To bring them to that prospect: Damn them then, If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster, More than their own! What then? how then? What shall I say? Where's satisfaction? It is impossible, you should see this, Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say, If imputation, and strong circumstances,— Which lead directly to the door of truth,— Will give you satisfaction, you may have it.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office:

But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,— Prick'd to it by foolish honesty and love,— I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately; And, being troubled with a raging tooth, I could not sleep. There are a kind of men so loose of soul, That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs; One of this kind is Cassio: In sleep I heard him say,—"Sweet Desdemona, Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!"

And then, sir, would he grope, and wring my hand, Cry,—"O, sweet creature!" and then kiss me hard, As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots, That grew upon my lips: then laid his leg Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then Cry'd,—"Cursed fate! that gave thee to the Moor!"

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion; 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs, That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done.

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,— Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief, Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift.

Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief, (I am sure it was your wife's,) did I to-day See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—

Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers, It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives; One is too poor, too weak for my revenge! Now do I see 'tis true.—Look here, Iago; All my fond love thus I do blow to heaven 'Tis gone.

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne, To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught, For 'tis of aspic's tongues!

Iago. Pray, be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea, Whose icy current and compulsive course Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on To the Propontick, and the Hellespont; Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace, Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love, Till that a capable and wide revenge Swallow them up.—Now, by yond' marblo heaven, In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels.]

I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet. [Kneels.]

Witness, you ever-burning lights above! You elements that clip us round about! Witness, that here Iago doth give up The execution of his wit, hands, heart, To wrong'd Othello's service! let him command, And to obey shall be in me remorse, What bloody work soever.

Oth. I greet thy love, Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous, SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies?
Clo. I dare not say, he lies anywhere.
Des. Why, man?
Clo. He is a soldier; and for me to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.
Des. Can anything be made of this?
Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say—he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in my own throat.
Des. Can you enquire him out, and be edified by report?
Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.
Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope, all will be well.
Clo. To do this, is within the compass of man’s wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it.

[Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?
Emil. I know not, madam.
Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse full of cruzados. And, but my noble Moor is true of mind, and made of no such baseness As jealous creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill thinking.
Emil. Is he not jealous?
Des. Who, he? I think, the sun, where he was born,
Drew all such humours from him.
Emil. Look, where he comes.
Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio Be call’d to him.—How is ’t with you, my lord?

Enter Othello.

Oth. Well, my good lady:—[Aside.] O, hard- ness to dissemble!—
How do you, Desdemona?
Des. Well, my good lord.
Oth. Give me your hand: This hand is moist, my lady.
Des. It yet has felt no age, nor known no sorrow.
Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart;—
Hot, hot, and moist: This hand of yours requires A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer, Much castigation, exercise devout; For here’s a young and sweating devil here, That commonly rebels. ’Tis a good hand, A frank one.
Des. You may, indeed, say so;
For ’twas that hand that gave away my heart.
Oth. A liberal hand: The hearts of old, gave hands;
But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.
Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now your promise.
Oth. What promise, chuck?
Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.
Oth. I have a salt and sullen rheum offends me; Lend me thy handkerchief.
Des. Here, my lord.
Oth. That which I gave you.
Des. I have it not about me.
Oth. Not?
Des. No, indeed, my lord.
Oth. That is a fault:
That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,
’Twould make her amiable, and subdue my father
Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,
Or made a gift of it, my father’s eye
Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her. I did so: and take heed of’t,
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose or give ’t away, were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.
Des. Is it possible?
Oth. ’Tis true: there’s magic in the web of it: A sibyl, that had number’d in the world
The sun to make two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work:
The worms were hallow'd, that did breed the silk;
And it was died in mummy, which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Oth. Indeed! is 't true?

Des. Most veritable; therefore look to 't well.

Des. 'Tis 's true; I had never seen it.

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?

Oth. 'Tis lost? is 't gone? speak, is it out of

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; But what an if it were?

Oth. Ha!

Des. 'Tis lost. Fetch 't, let me see it.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now;

This is a trick, to put me from my suit;

I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind

Des. Come, come

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. A man that, all his time,

Hath founded his good fortune on your love;

Shar'd dangers with you;——

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. In sooth,

You are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit Oth.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief:

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:

They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;

They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,

They belch us. Look you! Cassio, and my husband.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do't;

And, lo, the happiness! go, and imparture her.

Des. How now, good Cassio? what's the news with you?

Cass. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you,

That, by your virtuous means, I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love,

Whom I, with all the duty of my heart,

Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd

If my offence be of such mortal kind,

That neither service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purpose merit in futurity,

Can ransom me into his love again,

But to know so must be my benefit;

So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,

And shut myself up in some other course,

To fortune's alms.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,

My adovcation is not now in tune;

My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,

Were he in favour, as in humour, alter'd.

So help me, every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best;

And stood within the blank of his displeasure,

For my free speech! You must a while be patient:

What I can do, I will; and more I will,

Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,

And, certainly, in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air;

And, like the devil, from his very arm

Puff'd his own brother;—And can he be angry?

Something of moment, then: I will go meet him;

There's matter in 't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I pr'ythee, do so.—Something, sure, of [Exit Iago.

Either from Venice; or some unbatch'd practice,

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,—

Hath puddled his clear spirit: and, in such cases,

Mou's natures wrangle with inferior things,

Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so;

For let our finger ache, and it induces

Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense

Of pain: Nay, we must think, men are not gods;

Nor of them look for such observances

As fit the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia,

I was (unhandsome warrior as I am,25)

Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;

But now I find, I had subborn'd the witness,

And he's indited falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as you think;

And no conception, nor no jealous toy,

Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day! I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so;

They are not ever jealous for the cause,
ACT IV.

OTHÉLLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster,
Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio walk hereabout:
If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uppermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt Des. and Emil.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?

How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.

What! keep a week away? seven days and nights?

Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours,
More tedious than the dial score time?

O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;

I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd;

But I shall, in a more considerable time,

Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,

[Giving her Des.'s Handkerchief.

Take me this work out.

Bian. O, Cassio, whence came this?

This is some token from a newer friend.

To the felt absence now I feel a cause:
Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Woman, go to!

Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,

From whence you have them. You are jealous now,

That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:

No, in good troth, Bianca.

Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well; ere it be demanded,
(As like enough, it will,) I'd have it copied:

Take it, and do 't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general;

And think it no addition, nor my wish,

To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me.

I pray you, bring me on the way a little;

And say, if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way, that I can bring you,

For I attend here: but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good; I must be circumstanc'd.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter Othello and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed,

An hour, or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?

It is hypocrisy against the devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,

The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:

But if I give my wife a handkerchief—

Oth. What then?

118

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,

She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;

May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft, that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:—

Thou said'st,—O, it comes o'er my memory,

As doth the raven o'er the infected house,

Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say,—As knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab——

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assured,
No more than he 'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. 'Faith, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie——

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they belie her: lie with her! that's fulsome.—Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief.—To confess, and be hanged for his labour, —First, to be hanged, and then to confess:—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some instruction.
It is not words, that shake me thus.—Fish!—Noses, ears, and lips. —Is it possible?—Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!—

[Falls in a Trance.

Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guiltless meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!

Enter Cassio.

My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio?
Cas. What is the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear:
The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,
Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—

[Exit Cas.

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven:
'Would you, you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;
Think, every bearded fellow, that 's but yok'd,
May draw with you: there's millions now alive,
That nightly lie in those unproper beds,
Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.
O, 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And, knowing, what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;
Confine yourself but in a patient list.
Whilst you were here, ere while mad with your grief,
(A passion most unsuiting such a man,)
Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,
And laid good 'seuse upon your cestasy;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;
The which he promis'd. Do but enceave yourself,
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,
That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife;
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?

Iago. I will be found most cunning in my patience;
But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

[Oth. withdraws.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature,
That dothes on Cassio,—as 'tis the trumpet's plague,
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one;—
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter:—Here he comes:—

Re-enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour,
Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worser, that you give me the addition,
Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure of't.
Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power.

[Speaking low.]

How quickly should you speed?

Cas.

Alas, poor wench!

Oth. Look, how he laughs already!

[Aside.

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.

Cas.

Alas, poor rogue! I think 'tis faith, she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs out.

[Aside.]

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth.

Now he importunes him To tell it o'er: Go to; well said, well said.

[Aside.

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her: Do you intend it?

Cas.

Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?

[Aside.

Iago. I marry her!—what? a customer! I pr'ythee, hear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so: They laugh that win.

[Aside.

Iago. 'Faith, the cry goes, that you shall marry her.

Cas. Pr'ythee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well.

[Aside.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.

[Aside.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither comes this bauble; by this hand, she falls thus about my neck:—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gesture imports it.

[Aside.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me; so bales, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!—

Oth. Now he tells, how she plucked him to my chamber: O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to.

[Aside.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the whole work?—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There,—give it your hobby-horse: wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca? how now? how now?

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

[Aside.

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for.

[Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. 'Faith I must, she'll rail in the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come; Will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more.

[Exit Cas.

Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Oth. O, Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman, your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing:—A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times:—And then, of so gentle a condition!

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain: But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.
Oth. I will chop her into messes:—Cuckold me!

Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—
I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unproviding my mind again:—this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases; very good.

Iago. And, for Cassio,—let me be his undertaker: You shall hear more by midnight.

[Trumpet within.

Oth. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico, Come from the duke: and, sec, your wife is with him.

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

[Opens the Packet, and reads.

Oth. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;
Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: How does lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord
An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. "This fail you not to do, as you will"

[Lreads.

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.
Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much
To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. 'May be, the letter mov'd him;
For, as I think, they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. How, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil!

Des. I have not deserv'd this.

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
Though I should swear I saw it: 'Tis very much;
Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears, 88
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile:—
Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you.

[Going.

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:—
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish, that I would make her turn:
Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,
And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep:
And she's obedient, as you say,— obedient,—
Very obedient;—Proceed you in your tears.—
Concerning this, sir,—'O well-painted passion!
I am commanded home:—Get you away;
I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,
And will return to Venice;—Hence, avaunt!

[Exit Des.

Cassio shall have my place. And,—sir, to-night,
I do entreat that we may sup together.
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and mon-kies 149

[Exit.

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senato
Call—all-in-all sufficient?—This the noble nature
Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
Could neither graze, nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my censure.

What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,—
I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What, strike his wife?

Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; Yet 'would I knew,
That stroke would prove the worst.
Act IV.

Othello, The Moor of Venice.

Scene II.

Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!
It is not honesty in me, to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe
him;
And his own courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech: Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiv'd in him.

[Exit Lod.]

Scene II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?
Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.
Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard
Each syllable, that breath made up between them.
Oth. What, did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?
Emil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. That's strange.
Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,
Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.
If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!
For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither:—go.—

[Exit Emil.]

She says enough;—yet she's a simple bawd,
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore;
A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:
And yet she'll kneel, and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter Emilia, with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes;
Look in my face.
Des. What horrible fancy 's this?

Oth. Some of your function, mistress;

[To Emil.]

Leave procurers alone, and shut the door;
Cough, or cry—hem, if anybody come:
Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.

[Exit Emil.]

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?
I understand a fury in your words.
But not the words.
Oth. Why, what art thou?
Des. Your wife, my lord; your true
And loyal wife.
Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;
Lost, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
Should fear to seize thee: therefore be doubledamn'd,
Swear—then art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.
Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? How am
I false?
Oth. O Desdemona!—away! away! away!

Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?
Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord?
If, haply, you my father do suspect,
An instrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him,
Why, I have lost him too.
Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven
To try me with affliction; had he rain'd
All kinds of sores, and shames, on my bare head;
Steed'm me in poverty to the very lips;
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes;
I should have found in some part of my soul
A drop of patience: but (alas!) to make me
A fixed figure, for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at,—
O! O!
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:
But there, where I have garner'd up my heart;
Where either I must live, or bear no life;
The fountain from which my current runs,
Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!
Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads
To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion
there!
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubim;
Ay, there, look grim as hell!.
Des. I hope, my noble lord esteems me honest.
Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
MR. GEORGE BENNETT AS OTHELLO,
AND
MISS JANE BENNETT AS DESDEMONA.

O'TH. CROS. \ A. D. 1605.
That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
That the sense aches at thee,—'Would, thou had'st ne'er been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,
Made to write whom upon? What committed!
Committed!—O thou public commover!
I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed!
Heaven stops th'o' nose at it, and the moon winks;
The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear it: What committed!—
Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.

Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a christian:
If to preserve this vessel for my lord,
From any other unlawful touch,
Be—not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Oth. Is it possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then;
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
That married with Othello.—You, mistress.

Re-enter Emilia.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay, you!
We have done our course; there's money for your pains;
I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel.

[Exit.]

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?—

How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?

Des. 'Tis faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia;
I cannot weep; nor answer I have none,
But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember;—
And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here is a change, indeed! [Exit.

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.
How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse?

Re-enter Emilia, with Iago.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young babes,
Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her, whore; a beggar, in his drink,
Could not have laid such terms upon his callet.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; Alas, the day!

Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,
Her father, and her country, and her friends,
To be call'd—whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for it!

How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging cozening slave, to get some office,
Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fye, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!

Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?

What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous knave,
Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow:—
O, heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold
And put in every honest hand a whip,
To lash the rascal naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!

Iago. [Speak within door.]

Emil. O, fye upon him! some such squire he was,
That turn'd your wit the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

_Iago._ You are a fool; go to.

_Des._ O good Iago,
What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—
If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say, whore;
It does abhor me, now I speak the word;
To do the act that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

_Iago._ I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour
The business of the state does him offence,
And he doth chide with you.

_Des._ If 'twere no other,—

_Iago._ It is but so, I warrant you. [Trumpets.
Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!
And the great messengers of Venice stay:
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

_[Exeunt Des. and Emil._

_Enter Roderigo._

How now, Roderigo?

_Rod._ I do not find, that thou deal'st justly with _me._

_Iago._ What in the contrary?

_Rod._ Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago; and rather (as it seems to me now,) keep'st me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suf-feter.

_Iago._ Will you hear me, Roderigo?

_Rod._ Faith, I have heard too much; for your words, and performances, are no kin together.

_Iago._ You charge me most unjustly.

_Rod._ With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votariest: You have told me—she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance;
but I find none.

_Iago._ Well; go to; very well.

_Rod._ Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: By this hand, I say, it is very scarry; and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

_Iago._ Very well.

_Rod._ I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make yourself known to Desdemona: If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

_Iago._ You have said now.

_Rod._ Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I presenttendence of doing.

_Iago._ Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but, yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

_Rod._ It hath not appeared.

_Iago._ I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared; and your suspension is not without wit and judgment.
But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

_Rod._ Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

_Iago._ Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

_Rod._ Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

_Iago._ O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

_Rod._ How do you mean—removing of him.

_Iago._ Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

_Rod._ And that you would have me do?

_Iago._ Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlot, and that will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall, be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look, it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt Oth., Lod., and Attens.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent; he hath commanded me to go to bed, and bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia, give me my nightly wearing, and adieu: we must not now displease him.

Emil. I would, you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve him, that even his stubbornness, his checks, and frowns,— Pr'ythee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one:—Good father! how foolish are our minds!

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me in one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd—Barbara; she was in love; and he, she lov'd, prov'd mad, and did forsake her: she had a song of—willow, an old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune, and she died singing it: That song, to-night, Will not go from my mind; I have much to do,

But to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee, despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.—

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. And he speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice, who would have walked barefoot to Palestine, for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,

[Singing,

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow;

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her means;

Sing willow, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones.

Lay by these:

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Pr'ythee, hie thee; he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my Garland.

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—

Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is it that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. I called my love, false love; but what said he then? Sing willow, &c.

If I court no women, you'll couch with no men.

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so.—O, these men, these men!—

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emilia,—That there be women do abuse their husbands in such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light! Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light; I might do it as well i' the dark.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'Tis a great price

For a small vice.

Des. Good troth, I think thou would'st not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should; and undo't, when I had done. Marry I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring; nor for measures of lawn; nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition: but, for the whole world,—Why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for 't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and, having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many
To the vantage, as would store the world they play'd for.
But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults, If wives do fall: Say, that they slack their duties, And pour out treasures into foreign laps; Or else break out in peevish jealousies,

Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they strike us, Or scant our former having in despite; Why, we have galls; and, though we have some grace,
Yet we have some revenge. Let husbands know, Their wives have sense like them: they see, and smell,
And have their palates both for sweet and sour, As husbands have. What is it that they do, When they change us for others? Is it sport? I think it is; And doth affection breed it? I think, it doth; Is't frailty, that thus errs? It is so too: And have not we affections? Desires for sport? and frailty, as men have? Then, let them use us well: else, let them know, The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good night, good night: Heaven me such usage send, Not to pick bad from bad; but, by bad, mend!

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home;
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow:
It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in 't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand; be bold, and take thy sword. [Retires to a little distance.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons:—
'Tis but a man gone:—forth, my sword; he dies.

[Exeunt.]

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio, Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: Live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I bobb'd from him,61
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
Thou teachest me,—Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your fate lies apace.—Strumpet, I come:
Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
Thy bed lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit Oth.

Enter Lodovico and Gratiano, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark!

Rod. O wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groans;—it is a heavy night:
These may be counterfeits; let 's think 't unsafe
To come in to the cry, without more help.

Rod. No body come? then shall I bleed to death.

Enter Iago, with a Light.

Lod. Hark!

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who is there? whose noise is this, that cries on murder?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did you not hear a cry?

Cas. Hero, here; for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same, indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O, I am spoil'd, undone by villains!
Give me some help.

Iago. Of me, lieutenant! what villains have done
this?

Cas. I think, that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!—

What are you there? come in, and give some help.

[To Lod. and Gra.

Rod. O, help me here!

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

[ Iago stabs Rod.

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!—
O! O! O!

Iago. Kill men i'the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town!—Ho! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good, or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy; Here is Cassio hurt

By villains.

Gra. Cassio?

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid—

Light, gentlemen; I 'll bind it with my shirt

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is 't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is 't that cry'd?

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!

O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet!—Cassio, may you suspect

Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus: I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter: So.—O, for a chair,

To bear him easily hence!

Bian. Alas, he faints:—O Cassio! Cassio!

Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury.—

Patience a while, good Cassio.—Come, come;

Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no?

Alas! my friend, and my dear countryman,
Roderigo? no.—Yes, sure; O heaven! Roderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry your gentle pardon;

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Roderigo!

Iago. He, he, 'tis he:—O, that's well said;—

the chair:—

[ A Chair brought in.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence;

I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you, mistress,

[To Bian.

Save you your labour.—He that lies slain here,

Cassio,

Was my dear friend: What malice was between

you?

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.
Act V.

Othello, the Moor of Venice.

Scene II.

Iago. [To Bian.] What, look you pale?—O, bear him out o' the air.—

[Cass. and Rod. are borne off.]

Stay you, good gentlemen:—Look you pale, mistress?

Do you perceive the gastness of her eye?—

Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon:—

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her;

Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak,

Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter; what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark,

By Roderigo, and fellows that are scap'd;

He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas good gentleman! alas, good Cassio!

Iago. This is the fruit of whoring. — Pr'ythee, Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night:—

What, do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. Fye, fye upon the strumpet!

Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest,

As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I? foh! fye upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd:—

Come, mistress, you must tell us another tale.—

Emilia, run you to the citadel,

And tell my lord and lady what has happ'd:—

Will you go on, I pray?—This is the night, [Aside.

That either makes me, or fordoes me quite.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber: Desdemona in bed asleep. A Light burning.

Enter Othello.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—

Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—

It is the cause. — Yet I'll not shed her blood;

Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,

And smooth as monumental alabaster.

[Takes off his Sword.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.

Put out the light, and then put out the light;

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister, I can again thy former light restore, Should I repent me:—but once put out thine,
Des. No, by my life and soul;
Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,
Take heed of perjury; thou’rt on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath,
Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong conception,
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov’d Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur’d woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak’st me call, what I intend to do,—
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;
I never gave it him.—Send for him hither,
And let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess’d.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—us’d thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He’ll not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp’d.

Honest Iago hath ta’en order for’t.

Des. My fear interprets then,—What, is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray’d, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep’st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,
There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late.
[He smothers her.

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho! my lord! my lord!

Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead! not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—
So, so.

Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who’s there?

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes;—’tis Emilia:—by and by.—She’s dead.
’Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio’s death;
The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?
Still as the grave. Shall she come in? Were’t good?

I think, she stirs again:—No.—What’s the best?
If she come in, she’ll sure speak to my wife:
My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no wife:
O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon; and that the affrighted globe
Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you I may speak with you,
O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia:—

Soft,—by and by,—Let me the curtains draw—
Where art thou? What’s the matter with thee now?

[Unlocks the Door.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. O, good my lord, yonder’s foul murder done.

Oth. What? now?

Emil. But now, my lord!

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;
She comes moro near the earth than she was wont;
And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill’d a young Venetian, Call’d—Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill’d

And Cassio kill’d?

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill’d.

Oth. Not Cassio kill’d? Then murder’s out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder’d!

Emil. Alas! what ery is that?
Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady’s voice:—
Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!
Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O, who hath done This deed?
Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:
Commend me to my kind lord; O, farewell. [Dies.
Oth. Why, how should she be murder’d?
Emil. Alas, who knows?
Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.
Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She’s, like a liar, gone to burning hell;
’Twas I that kill’d her.
Emil. O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil!
Oth. She turn’d to folly, and she was a whore.
Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false; O, she was heavenly true!
Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else.
O, I were damn’d beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity; Thy husband knew it all.
Emil. My husband?
Oth. Thy husband.
Emil. That she was false to wedlock?
Oth. Ay, with Cassio.
Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I’d not have sold her for it.
Emil. My husband?
Oth. What needs this iterance,68 woman? I say, thy husband.
Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks with love!—
My husband say, that she was false?
Oth. He, woman;
I say, thy husband; Dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.
Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart;
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.
Oth. Ha!
Emil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Than thou wast worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were best.
Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dot!—
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I’ll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives:—Help! help! ho!
help!
The Moor has kill’d my mistress; Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter!—How now, general?
Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done
well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter?
Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be’st a man:
He says, thou told’st him that his wife was false:
I know, thou didst not, thou art not such a villain;
Speak, for my heart is full.
Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no
more
Than what he found himself was apt and true.
Emil. But did you ever tell’ him, she was false?
Iago. I did.
Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie:—
She false with Cassio!—Did you say with Cassio?
Iago. With Cassio, mistress; Go to, charm your tongue.
Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak;
My mistress here lies murder’d in her bed.
All. O heavens forend!
Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.
Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.
Gra. ’Tis a strange truth.
Mon. O monstrous act!
Emil. Villany, villany, villany!—
I think upon ’t,—I think,—I smell’t;—O villany!
I thought so then;67—I’ll kill myself for grief.—
O villany, villany!
Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home.
Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak;
’Tis proper I obey him, but not now:—
Perchance, Iago, I will ne’er go home.
Oth. O! O! O! [Hanging over his wife.
Emil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar;
For thou hast kill’d the sweetest innocent,
That ere did lift up eye.
Oth. O, she was foul!— [Rising.
I scarce did know you, uncle: There lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp’d:
I know, this act shows horrible and grim.
ACT V.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Scene II.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father’s dead;
Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

Oth. ’Tis pitiful: but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed; Cassio confess’d it:
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognition and pledge of love
Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand;
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. ’Twill out, ’twill out:—I hold my peace, sir? no;
No, I will speak as liberal as the air;
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I will speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not.

[IAGO OFFERS TO STAB HIS WIFE.

Fye!]

Gra. Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak’st of.
I found by fortune, and did give my husband;
For often, with a solemn earnestness,
More than, indeed, belonged to such a trifle,
He begg’d of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore!

Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas; I found it,
And I did give’t my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest.

Emil. By heaven, I do not; I do not, gentlemen: O mur’d’rous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife.

[IAGO STABS EMIL, THEN RUNS OUT.

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,
But what serve for the thunder?—Precious villain!

Gra. The woman falls; sure, he has kill’d his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay; O, lay me by my mistress’ side!

Gra. He’s gone, but his wife’s kill’d.

Mon. ’Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,
Which I have here recover’d from the Moor:
Come, guard the door without; let him not pass,
But kill him rather; I’ll after that same villain,
For ’tis a damned slave. [Exeunt Mon. and Gra.

Oth. I am not valiant neither,
But every puny whipster gets my sword:
—But why should honour outlive honesty?
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And die in music:—“ Willow, willow, willow.”—
Moor, she was chaste; she lov’d thee, cruel Moor;
So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;
So speaking as I think, I die,—I die. [Dies.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber,
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook’s temper:—
O, here it is:—Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear;
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me,
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain
Upon a soldier’s thigh: I have seen the day,
That, with this little arm, and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your step:—But, O vain boast!
Who can control his fate? ’tis not so now.—
Be not afraid, though you do see no weapon’d
Here is my journey’s end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
Do you go back disdain’d? ’tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello’s breast,
And he retires;—Where should Othello go?—
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr’d wench! Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,
This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl? Even like thy chastity.—
O cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!—
O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead?
Dead? O! O! O!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO, CARRIED IN A CHAIR, AND OFFICERS, WITH IAGO, PRISONER.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That’s he, that was Othello; here I am.
Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet;—but that's a fable:

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Oth. wounds Iago.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee live;

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello, that was once so good,

Fall'n in the practice of a cursed slave,

What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:

An honourable murderer, if you will;

For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villany:

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray you, demand that demi-devil,

Why he hath thus ensnarl'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: What you know, you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What? not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,

Which, as I think, you know not: Here is a letter,

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;

And here, another: the one of them imports

The death of Cassio to be undertook

By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish, and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,

Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain;

But that, belike, Iago in the interim

Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious catiff!—

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief

That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber:

And he himself confess'd, but even now,

That there he dropp'd it, for a special purpose,

Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter,—

How he upbraids Iago, that he made him

Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came

That I was cast: And even but now he spake,

After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him,

Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us;

Your power and your command is taken off,

And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,—

If there be any cunning cruelty,

That can torment him much, and hold him long,

It shall be his: You shall close prisoner rest,

Till that the nature of your fault be known

To the Venetian state:—Come, bring him away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go.

I have done the state some service, and they know it;

No more of that:—I pray you, in your letters,

When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,

Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak

Of one, that lov'd not wisely, but too well;

Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one, whose hand,

Like the base Júdean, threw a pearl away,

Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose sub'd

eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees.

Their medicinal gum: Set you down this:

And say, besides,—that in Aleppo once,

Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk,

Beat a Venetian, and traduce'd the state,

I took by the throat the circumcised dog,

And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All, that's spoke, is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee:—No way but this, [Falling upon Des. killing myself, to die upon a kiss.

Dier. Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon;

For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog,

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!

Look on the tragic loading of this bed; [To Iago.

This is thy work: the object poisons sight;—

Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house,

And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,

For they succeed to you.—To you, lord governor,

Remains the censure of this hellish villain;

The time, the place, the torture,—O enforce it!

Myself will straight aboard; and, to the state,

This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

[Exeunt.
NOTES TO OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

1. Evades them with a bombast circumstance.
That is, with ostentations circumlocution. In Mas-singer's Picture, we have the word circumstance used in the same sense:—
And therefore without circumstance to the point.
2. A fellow almost damned in a fair wife.
This line has puzzled the commentators of Shakspere; Cassio is unmarried, and not, therefore, damned by an unequal or improper alliance. Mr. Steevens ventures the suggestion that Iago alludes to a report that Cassio should marry Bianca, the courtezan, and infers that Cassio was almost drawn into and damned by such a connection. Mr. Tyrwhitt's explanation, though it has been much objected to, seems certainly ingenious and reasonable. "I am inclined to believe," he says, "that the true reading here is,—
A fellow almost damned in a fair life:
And that Shakspere alludes to the judgment denounced in the gospel against those of whom all men speak well. The character of Cassio is certainly such as would be very likely to draw upon him all the perils of this denunciation, literally understood. Well-bred, easy, sociable, good-natured; with abilities enough to make him agreeable and useful, but not sufficient to excite the envy of his equals, or to alarm the jealousy of his superiors. It may be observed, too, that Shakspeare has thought it proper to make Iago, in several other passages, bear his testimony to the amiable qualities of his rival."
3. Typed consul, i.e. robed counsellors.
4. This counter-easter.
Iago has previously called Cassio "a great arithmetician," this is a further allusion to the same idea, as sums were anciently reckoned up with counters.
5. Not by the old gradation.
Not by the gradual and just rise, according to merit, after the ancient practice.
6. Whip me such honest knaves.
Knave is here used for servant, but with a mixture of contempt.
7. What a full fortune doth the thick-lips owe.
This line is sometimes quoted to show that the poet gave Othello all the features of a negro; but this is not intended, Roderigo merely speaks of his successful rival thus, in contempt.

8. My house is not a grange.
Grange is commonly used to signify a lone house standing distant from other habitations, consequently,
a place where outrage or robbery might easily be committed; but, strictly speaking, it is the farm of a monastery, where the religious deposited their corn.
9. At this odd-even and dull watch of the night.
An uncouth and careless expression, but odd-even probably meant between twelve at night and one in the morning. In Macbeth is a similar, though less ambiguous expression, when, in answer to the inquiry, "What is the night?" the lady answers:—
Almost at odds with morning, which is which.
10. In an extravagant and wheeling stranger.
In is used in the sense of to, and extravagant in its Latin signification for wandering. Wheeling bears a similar sense, signifying moving in circles, unprofitable action, motion without progression.
11. ——— A voice potential,
As double as the duke's.
From Thomas's History of Italy, 4to, 1560, it appears to have been a popular, though false opinion, that the Duke of Venice had two voices or two votes in the ballot, on state matters; but double and single, in some senses, signified strong and weak. When Macbeth speaks of his "single state of man," he means his weak and nervous state of mind. As double as the duke's, may, therefore, only mean as influential as the duke's.
12. May speak, unbonneted.
To speak unbonneted, is to speak with the cap off, which is directly opposite to the poet's meaning. Mr.
Theobald says:—"Othello means to say that his birth and services set him upon such a rank, that he may speak to a senator of Venice with his hat on; i.e., without showing any marks of deference or inequality.
I am therefore of opinion that Shakspere wrote:—
"May speak, and, bonneted, &c."
13. Unhoused, i.e. free from domestic cares.
Mr. Theobald substitutes pageants for pagans; but the word is, doubtless, correct as it stands. Brabantio uses the word in contempt of Othello and his compexion, and implies, that if such actions are permitted, the highest offices of the state will be usurped by slaves and heathens.
15. Composition, i.e., consistency, agreement.
NOTES TO OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

18 But that it stands not in such warlike brace.
That is, not in such a state of defence. To arm, was called to brace on the armour.

17 Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you.
It may seem strange that the Venetians should have employed a foreigner, especially a Moor, to command their army; but it was part of the policy of that government never to entrust the command of an army to a native, for fear it might encourage him to any ambitious attempt on the sovereignty.

15 Send for the lady to the Sagittary.
The Sagittary means the fictitious creature so called—that is, an animal compounded of man and horse, and armed with a bow and quiver. The Sagittary here was probably the sign of some well-known house of entertainment.

19 And portance in my travel's history.
Pope adopted the reading of the old edition, which is—

And with it all my travel's history.
But all the others read—and portance—which appears to mean conduct. I told her of my being sold to slavery, and how I conducted myself while in that state.

23 The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads Do grow beneath their shoulders.
Sir Walter Raleigh, in his Description of Guiana, published in 1596, a work which, from its being the topic of general conversation at the time, there is little doubt but that Shakspere had read, thus alludes to these supposed monstrosities:—"Next unto the Arvi are two rivers, Atosca and Caora, and on that branch which is called Caora are a nation of people, whose heads appear not above their shoulders; which, though it may be thought a mere fable, yet, for my own part, I am resolved it is true, because every child in the province of Arrimaia and Canuri affirme the same. They are called Ewaipanoma: they are reported to have eyes in their shoulders, and their mouths in the middle of their breasts, and that a long traine of hair growth backward, betwene their shoulders."

21 But not intuitively.
This is the reading of the eldest quarto; the first folio has instinctively; the second, distinctively. The old word, which is significant with attentively, was sometimes used by contemporary authors.

22 Let me speak like yourself.
That is, let me speak to you as you would reason with yourself in your cooler moments, when judgment is not disturbed by passion.

20 To stubber the gloss of your new fortunes.
To stubber is an inelegant and obsolete word, meaning to do imperfectly, to neglect or obscure.

24 Agnize, i.e., acknowledge, or avow.

22 My downright violence and storm of fortune.
That is, breach of common rules and obligations. The old quarto has—seern of fortune.

26 My speculative and active instruments.
Speculative instruments are the eyes; and active instruments, the hands and feet.

27 I have looked on the world for four times seven years.
"From this passage," says Dr. Johnson, "Iago's age seems to be ascertained; and it corresponds with the account in the novel on which Othello is founded, where he is described as a young, handsome man. The French translator of Shakspeare is, however, of opinion, that Iago here only speaks of those years of his life in which he had looked on the world with an eye of observation. But it would be difficult to assign a reason why he should mention the precise term of twenty-eight years, or to account for his knowing so accurately when his understanding arrived at maturity, and the operation of his sagacity, and his observations on mankind commenced."

29 Defeat thy favour with an usurped beard.
That is, change thy appearance, or disguise thyself, by putting on an artificial beard.

28 As lusieus as locusts.
At Tonquin locusts are considered a great delicacy not only by the poor but by the rich, and are sold in the market as larks and quails are in Europe. By the Levitical law, four sorts of them are permitted to be eaten. Mr. Steevens is, however, of opinion that it is the fruit of the locust tree which is here alluded to, a long black pod, that contains the seeds, among which there is a very sweet lusious juice, of much the same consistency as fresh honey.

30 Therefore my hopes not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.
Dr. Johnson says he cannot understand these lines, and purposes to read,

Stand bold, not sure.
But the meaning is intelligible,—Cassio's hopes not being sick to death, he is bold in a belief of their recovery. His hopes are not destroyed by despondency.

31 She never yet was foolish that was fair.
"The law," says Dr. Johnson, "makes the power of cohabitation a proof that a man is not a natural; therefore, since the most foolish woman, if pretty, may have a child, no pretty woman is ever foolish."

32 A most profane and liberal counsellor.
A wicked and licentious adviser.

33 All offices are open, and there is full liberty of feasting.
That is, all rooms, or places, in the castle, at which refreshments are prepared, or served out.
A twigsen bottle.

A twigsen bottle is a bottle covered with wicker-work. The quarto reads a wickered bottle.

Lead him off.

These words were, doubtless, originally but a marginal direction in the prompter's book, which, by negligence, have been incorporated with the text.

Cast in his mood, i.e. discharged in his anger.

Probal, a graceless contraction of probable.

She's framed as fruitful As the free elements.

She is as liberal as the elements, out of which all things are produced.

Then put your pipes into your bag, for I'll away.

This is probably a corruption, as his presence was neither desired nor cared for. Sir T. Hanmer reads— and he away.

Full of poise, i.e. of weight.

Excellent wretch.

Wretch, as applied to a woman, is not a mere term of fondness, but, says Johnson, "it expresses the utmost degree of amiableness, joined with an idea, which perhaps all tenderness includes, of feebleness, softness, and want of protection."

To such exsufficate and blown surmises.

Mr. Malone thinks exsufficate means swollen. The sense appears to be, I will not regard any such exaggerated and whispered rumours.

Self-bounty, i.e. inherent generosity.

If I do prove her haggard.

A haggard is a species of wild hawk, but from a passage in Webster's White Devil, it appears that it was a term of reproach sometimes applied to a wanton woman, "Is this your perch, you haggard? fly to the stews."

Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings.

A comparison borrowed from falconry, jesses are short straps of leather tied about the foot of a hawk, by which she is held on the fist.

Even then this forked plague is fated to us.

An allusion to the supposed forked horns of the cuckold.

Give me a living reason.

A reason founded on fact and experience, not on surprise or conjecture. Something more than a probability.

Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

The old quarto gives this line, as well as the two following, and I think rightly, to Iago.

Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done.

Dr. Warburton finely says, that this is an oblique and secret mock at Othello's saying, "Give me the ocular proof."

Unhandsome warrior as I am.

That is, unfair assailant; she believes she had been guilty of an injustice to Othello.

Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some instruction.

The meaning is, this terrible passion that now shakes me, cannot be without a real cause, a fancied jealousy alone could not produce such excitement. It is not words that shake me thus. This passion, which spreads its clouds over me, is the effect of some agency more than the operation of words; it is one of those supernatural notices which men have of unseen calamities.

Noses, ears, and lips.

Othello is imagining to himself the familiarities which he supposed to have passed between Cassio and his wife; the whispering in ears, conjunction of lips, &c.

Unbookish jealousy, i.e. ignorant jealousy.

What! a customer?

A courtesan, one that invites custom.

'Tis such another fitchew.

A fitchew is a pole-cat, which is supposed to be a singularly lewd animal.

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears.

If women's tears could impregnate the earth. By the doctrine of equivocal generation, new animals were supposed producible by new combinations of matter.

Goats and monkeys.

"In this exclamation," says Mr. Malone, "Shakspeare has shown great art. Iago in the first scene, in which he endeavours to awaken his suspicion, being urged to give some evident proof of the guilt of Cassio and Desdemona, tells him it were impossible to have occult demonstration of it, though they should be 'as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys;': these words, we may suppose, still ring in the ears of Othello, who, being now fully convinced of his wife's infidelity, rushes out with this emphatic exclamation—Iago's words were but too true; now, indeed, I am convinced that they are as hot as goats and monkeys."

I have rubb'd this young quat.

There has been much controversy about this passage. Sir T. Hanmer reads quah, a gudgeon, because a man grossly deceived is often called a gudgeon. Mr. Upton reads quail; Dr. Warburton retains kmat, which is found in the early quarto; Mr. Theobald would introduce knot, a small bird of that name, and Dr. Johnson says, that in the midland counties a quat is the term for a pimple.

42 That I bobbed from him.
That is, fooled or cheated him: out of. A bob formerly signified a mock or jeer.

43 No passage, i.e. no passengers.

44 Put out the light, and then put out the light.
Dr. Warburton says this line should be punctuated thus:—

Put out the light, and then—put out the light.
The expression of putting out the light, bringing to mind the effects of the extinction of the light of life, he breaks short, and, with a hesitation very natural in his situation, questions himself about the effects of this metaphorical extinction.

45 A murder which I thought a sacrifice.
This and the two preceding lines are difficult of explanation, one of the elder quartos reads:—thou dost stone thy heart, which, if it is correct, the passage would bear the following meaning:—thou dost harden thy heart, and so force me to send you out of the world in the state of the murdered, without preparation for death, when I intended that thy punishment should have been a sacrifice atoning for thy crime. If this alteration is inadmissible, we must accept the following interpretation of the passage:—Thou hast hardened my heart by this obstinate denial of thy guilt, and makest me kill thee with the rage of a murderer, when I thought to have sacrificed thee with the calmness of a priest striking a victim.

46 It is too late.
In the elder quarto, after this speech of Othello, Desdemona thrice repeats the name of the Almighty. "As this," says Mr. Steevens, "must be supposed to have been uttered while she is yet struggling with death, I think an editor may be excused from inserting such a circumstance of supererogatory horror, especially as it is found in but one of the ancient copies."

47 Iterance, thus the folio; the quarto reads, iteration.
48 I thought so then.
That is, at the time when Iago had snatched the handkerchief from her hand.

49 That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed.
This is a passage which seems to imply that a longer space of time is comprised in the action of this play, than the scenes include. A jealous person, however, will exaggerate all he speaks or thinks of, and might use a thousand for a much less number, only to give weight to his censure; nor would it have answered any purpose to have made Othello a little nearer or further off from truth in his calculation. Othello may also suppose that Desdemona had been guilty of criminal familiarity with Cassio before her marriage.

50 I look down towards his feet.
To see if, according to the vulgar opinion respecting the devil, his feet were cloven.

H. T.
King Lear.

PARENTAL affection is the most noble and least selfish feeling of our nature, and the wanton outrage of it by monstrous ingratitude would not unnaturally suggest itself to a poet as a fit subject for a great drama; and Shakspere, in working out this idea, has produced the most harrowing and painful tragedy extant.

Lear is an incorporation of two distinct stories, that of Gloster and his sons (which is an episode not strictly connected with the lotage and death of the aged monarch) is borrowed from The pitifull State and Storie of the Papilagonyan unkinde King, and his kind Son, in the second book of Sir Philip Sidney’s Arcadia, a work which there is sufficient evidence to prove that Shakspere had read, if even he could have been supposed ignorant of a production so much celebrity. That of the aged monarch himself, and his unnatural children, was built upon a relation of the circumstance in Holinhed’s Chronicle, who, in his turn, copied Geoffrey of Monmouth, who says that Lear was the eldest son of Bladud, that he governed his country for sixty years, and died about eight hundred years before the birth of Christ. Shakspere, though he doubtless read the Chronicle history, probably derived the incidents more immediately from a previous play on the same subject, entitled, The True Chronicle History of King Lear and his Three Daughters, Gonerill, Ragen, and Cordella, which play, although it was republished the same year when Shakspere produced his Lear, appears to have been laid aside in favour of our own poet’s later and infinitely superior production. There is also an historical bailad printed without date, and contained in Percy’s Reliques of Antient English Poetry, which Dr. Johnson considered might have supplied Shakspere with that part of his fable relating to the king and the ingratitude of his children, but it possesses no particular merit, and it is even doubted whether it was not subsequent to the play, and founded upon it, rather than that it furnished incidents to the poet. The story, however, seems to have been a traditional and popular one, and therefore open both to the ballad-maker and the dramatist.

Shakspere’s play was produced in 1605, or, according to Mr. Douce, in 1604, when the poet was in the very midsummer of existence, and the full maturity of his strength; when his powers of observation had been confirmed by experience; and the spirit of poetry, having gone beyond the beautiful, had ascended to the sublime; for of this tragedy it may be justly said, that the genius of antiquity bows before it, and moderns gaze upon it with awe. It contains so many strongly-drawn characters, so much worldly wisdom, and so many passages of an exquisite and sublime poetry, that it would seem as if the bard had, in the production of it, attempted to dazzle and confuse the minds of men with floods of mental beauty. The listening mind pants breathless after the fiery muse of the poet, and conception stands trembling and aghast. Yet it is not without its errors; Mr. Coleridge has thought it necessary to apologize for the improbability of the first scene, which he excuses merely because he says “it was an old story rooted in the popular faith.” Beautiful as the character of Cordelia afterwards appears, she does not attract us at the first; her answer to her father is cold and unpleasing; her reiterated nothing sniffs of the obstinacy of her parent’s nature, but she is, perhaps, influenced by a disgust at the hypocrical pretensions and fulsome adulations of her sisters.

Most critics have landed the poet for his construction of this tragedy, and the subtlety he has evinced in weaving the two plots together; indeed, assimilating them to each other; but—heresy as it may be—I could have spared the episode of Gloucester and Edmund; it draws our attention too much from the passionate sublimity of Lear, on whom the mind is so concentrated, that we are apt to become indifferent when he is not present or referred to. The incident of tearing out the eyes of the aged Duke, and thrusting him forth with the yet bleeding sockets, to wander in darkness and misery, is the only unmitigatedly repulsive scene in all Shakspere's works, (omitting Titus Andronicus, the authenticity of which is considered doubtful,) an action the relating of which in its revolting detail is productive rather of sickness and disgust than of tragic interest. Such is the horror of this savage cruelty that it wrings from the wretched sufferer a doubt of the justice and mercy of the universal providence, and he utters that dark and fearful expression:—

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport.

The character of Lear is grand in the extreme; the choleric yet affectionate old king, jealous of his dignity, brooking no insult, rash and impetuous, blind to every thing but momentary feeling, and heedless of all results—casts from his bosom his only affectionate child, and bestows his kingdom upon his two treacherous daughters, whose fiendish ingratitude rob him of the little which he had reserved to himself, and drive him forth to meet the midnight storm, and expose his white head to the "oak-cleaving thunderbolts"; "he wanders about in his pathless way until his mind is disturbed, and the impetuous, dishonoured king, and broken-hearted father, becomes by degrees mad, from dwelling too intently on the monstrous ingratitude of his children. He is at length rescued from the frightful destitution and misery to which he had been abandoned; but it is too late; the blow has been inflicted; the shock was too great to permit of his recovery, and, as Schlegel eloquently observes, " all that now remains to him of life is the capability of loving and suffering beyond measure."

Some critics, amongst whom was Doctor Johnson, contended that the termination was too tragical for endurance, and that poetical justice was violated by the ultimate death of Lear and his daughter Cordelia; the sublime tragedy of Shakspere was therefore banished from the stage, and Tate's corrupt version, in which the scenes are most unnecessarily transposed, altered, and interspersed with silly bombast, and vapid puerility, was substituted in its stead; Lear was saved, and Cordelia retired with victory and happiness. A modern critic in allusion to this, exclaims: "a happy ending!—as if the living martyrdom that he had gone through, the flaying of his feelings alive, did not make a fair dismissal from the stage of life the only decorous thing for him. If he is to live and be happy after, if he could sustain this world's burden after, why all this pudding and preparation? why torment us with all this unnecessary sympathy? As if the childish pleasure of getting his gilt robes and sceptre again could tempt him to act over again his misused station, as if at his years and with his experience, anything was left but to die."

Tate also cut out of his adaptation of Shakspere's tragedy the character of the Fool; which was much the same as if some modern dauber should paint out the sunlight from a landscape of Claude's. We feel more than a common interest for this jester on account of his strong attachment to Lear and his family; he is also a great favourite of the aged king, is a wise counsellor, and, though a bitter satirist, is faithful to the old man through all his persecutions, and is hanged at last for his adherence to the cause of his deposed master. He never forgets his character; reverse of fortune makes him satirical, but never serious; he talks with a purpose, and strives to arouse the old monarch to re-assert his rank and condition, and enforce the respect due to it. The fourth scene in the third act is extremely grand, the real madness of Lear, the assumed madness of Edgar, and the quaint pithy sayings of the Fool, make a strange and almost startling picture; the very idea of bringing such characters together is a fine one, and would scarcely have occurred to any other author. The assumed insanity of Edgar is grandly contrasted with the real mental disorder of Lear. The latter never loses sight of the real causes of his misfortunes; when Edgar first enters, personating the bedlamite, the aged king exclaims in tones of pity—

What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?
Could'st thou save nothing? Did'st thou give them all?
And when the Fool asks him whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman? with a vivid sense of his own rashness, he answers "a king, a king!" But Edgar never alludes to the cause of his supposed madness, never forgets that he has a part to play, and the poet, with an exquisite observance of nature, makes him in his anxiety to preserve his disguise rather over-act the part; he is too learned; we see something of the gentleman through all the rags and mouthing of the assumed idiot. He is familiar with quaint traditions and odd tales of fiends and witches, which the real wandering idiot would never have thought of. Lear in the disorder of his mind is struck with the strange disparity in human fortunes and sufferings; he had been somewhat despotic in his sanity, but he turns reformer in his madness and babbles about the abuses of authority.

Kent is a very noble character, in every respect faultless; his love for his royal master endears him to us, while his rough energy and bluntness of speech claim our admiration. He is a plain truth-teller either to king or peasant, a quaint humorist, a lover of justice and liberty, who sacrifices his rank and his estate rather than flatter the rash monarch in his course of angry injustice. His excuse for his boldness of speech also is admirable, "To plainness honour's bound, when majesty stoops to folly."

Of the bastard Edmund, the poet Coleridge says finely, "it is a profound moral, that shame will naturally generate guilt, the oppressed will be vindictive." Shakspere seems not unfrequently to rough-hew a character in one play which he matures and perfects in another; thus Birón reappears as Benedick, and Edmund as Iago. Shakspere, who has made Edmund a man of acute intellect, has no doubt through him expressed his own opinion of the follies of astrological studies.

No where has Shakspere drawn characters so alike as the two unnatural daughters of Lear; both selfish, ambitious, and overbearing, both guilty of the blackest ingratitude to their aged father, and even seeking his life; both, by a natural sequence, false to their husbands, both attached to the same paramour, and both dying by violence and in despair.

Shakspere always vindicates the justice of God's providence; tyrants live hated and in fear, and die unpitied and in blood. The crafty perish by craft; the murderous and the treacherous live in a hell on earth; the wicked are heaven's instruments against themselves; and nature is eternally at war with sin. Thus with Regan and Goneril, they lead a life of conjunctive wickedness, carry on a partnership of devilry, and then growing jealous each of the other, Goneril poisons Regan, and then stabs herself.

Shakspere's philosophy is a stern one, he is an impressive preacher of the doctrine of compensation—compensation to all, and for all deeds—evil for evil, good for good. Edgar, though a pagan, recognises this in these lines,

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to scourge us,

And the dying villain Edmund admits its truth, and exclaims,

The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

We can never escape this, it is a law of our being which we cannot evade or shake off; if in any way we disturb another's peace we murder our own. It has been said, the dice of God are always loaded, there are no chance casts, and this doctrine our Shakspere never loses sight of, it is indeed wonderfully prominent in Lear, and the aged monarch himself, much as we sympathise with him, is but suffering the punishment, a dreadful one it is true, for his unjust partiality to his elder daughters and his passionate and cruel desertion of his youngest child.

King Lear.

ACT I

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King Lear's Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloster, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed, that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed; and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came somewhat suddenly into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again:—The king is coming.

[Trumpets sound within.

Enter Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Goneril, Regan, Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloster.

Glo. I shall, my liege. [Exeunt Glo. and Edm.

Lear. Mean'time we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there.—Know, that we have divided,

In three, our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent
To shake all cares and business from our age;

Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany,

We have this hour a constant will to publish

Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife

May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love,

Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,

And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my daughters,

(Since now we will devest us, both of rule,

Interest of territory, cares of state,)

Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?

That we our largest bounty may extend

Where merit doth most challenge it.—Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I

Do love you more than words can wield the matter,

Dearer than eye-sight, space and liberty;

Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;

No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour:

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found.

A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable;

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,

We make thee lady: To thine and Albany's issue

Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter,

Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

141
Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart I find, she names my very deed of love; Only she comes too short,—that I profess Myself an enemy to all other joys, Which the most precious square of sense possesses; And find, I am alone felicitate In your dear highness' love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia! [Aside. And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's More richer than my tongue. Lear. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever, Remain this ample third of their fair kingdom; No less in space, validity, and pleasure, Than that confirm'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy, Although the last, not least; to whose young love The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy, Strive to be interest'd; what can you say, to draw A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak. Cor. Nothing, my lord. Lear. Nothing? Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing can come of nothing: speak again. Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty According to my bond; nor more, nor less. Lear. How, how, Cordelia? mend your speech a little, Lest it may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord, You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I Return those duties back as are right fit, Obev you, love you, and most honour you. Why have my sisters husbands, if they say, They love you, all? Haply, when I shall wed, That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry Half my love with him, half my care, and duty: Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters, To love my father all.

Lear. But goes this with thy heart? Cor. Ay, good my lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender? Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so,—Thy truth then be thy dower: For, by the sacred radiance of the sun; The mysteries of Hecate, and the night; By all the operations of the orbs, From whom we do exist, and cease to be; Here I disclaim all my paternal care, Propinuity and property of blood,

And as a stranger to my heart and me Hold thee, from this,^4 for ever. The barbarous Scythian, Or he that makes his generation mesees To gorge his appetite,^6 shall to my bosom Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd, As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—Lear. Peace, Kent: Come not between the dragon and his wrath: I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my sight!—[To Cor. So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her!—Call France;—Who stirs? Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany, With my two daughters' dowers digest this third: Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her. I do invest you jointly with my power, Pre-eminence, and all the large effects That troop with majesty.—Ourselves, by monthly course, With reservation of an hundred knights, By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode Make with you by due turns. Only we still retain The name, and all the additions to a king; The sway, Revenue, execution of the rest, Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm, This coronet part between you. [Giving the Crown. Kent. Royal Lear, Whom I have ever honour'd as my king, Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd, As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade The region of my heart: be Kent unmannerly, When Lear is mad. What would'st thou do, old man? Think'st thou, that duty shall have dread to speak, When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound,

When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy bound, And, in thy best consideration, cheek This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment, Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least; Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound Reverb no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more. Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.
Lear. Out of my sight!
Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now, by Apollo,—
Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.
Lear. O vassal! miscreant!
[Laying his Hand on his Sword.
Kent. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift;
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.
Lear. Hear me, recreant!
On thine allegiance hear me!—
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
(Which we durst never yet,) and, with strain'd pride,
To come betwixt our sentence and our power;
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,)
Our potency make good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee, for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world?
And, on the sixth, to turn thy hated back
Upon our kingdom: if, on the tenth day following,
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death: Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.
Kent. Fare thee well, king: since thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.—
The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,
[To Cor.
That justly think'st, and last most rightly said!—
And your large speeches may your deeds approve,
[To Reg. and Gon.
That good effects may spring from words of love.—
Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu;
He'll shape his old course in a country new. [Exit.
Re-enter Gloster; with France, Burgundy, and Attendants.
Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.
Lear. My lord of Burgundy,
We first address towards you, who with this king
Hath rival'd for our daughter; What, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?
Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.
Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us, we did hold her so;
But now her price is fall'n: Sir, there she stands;
If aught within that little, seeming substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure piece'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.
Bur. I know no answer.
Lear. Sir,
Will you, with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriend, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her, or leave her?
Bur. Pardon me, royal sir
Electon makes not up on such conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,
[To France.
I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you
To avert your liking a more worthier way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
Almost to acknowledge hers.
France. This is most strange!
That she, that even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour! Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall into taint: which to believe of her,
Must be a faith, that reason without miracle
Could never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,
(If for I want that glib and oily art,
To speak and purpose not; since what I well intend I'll do 't before I speak,) that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unequal action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour:
But even for want of that, for which I am richer;
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
Hath lost me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou
Hadst not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better.
France. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature,
Which often leaves the history unspoken,
That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love is not love,
When it is mingled with respects; that stand
Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear,
Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.
Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.
Bur. I am sorry then, you have so lost a father,
That you must lose a husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.
France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;
Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful, I take up what 's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'tis strange, that from their cold'st neglect
My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance
Is queen of us, of ours; and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of wat'rish Burgundy
Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.—
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou leastest here, a better where to find.
Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine;
for we
Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again:—Therefore be gone,
Without our grace, our love, our benison.—
Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Bur., Corn., Alb.,
Glo., and Attend.
France. Bid farewell to your sisters.
Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;
And, like a sister, am most loath to call Your faults, as they are nam'd. Use well our father:
To your professed bosoms, 10 I commit him;
But yet, alas! stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So farewell to you both.
Gon. Prescribe not us our duties.
Reg. Let your study
Be, to content your lord; who hath receiv'd you
At fortune's alms. You have obedience seanted,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides;
Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!
France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt France and Cor.
Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say, of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think, our father will hence to-night.
Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.
Gon. You see how full of changes his age is;
the observation we have made of it hath not been little:
he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off, appears too grossly.
Reg. 'Tis the infinity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.
Gon. The best and sourest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, 11 but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that inflam and choleric years bring with them.
Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.
Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: If our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.
Reg. We shall further think of it.
Gon. We must do something, and 'tis the heat.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloster's Castle.

Enter Edmund, with a Letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound: Wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of custom; and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines
Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base?
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us
With base? with baseness? bastardy? base? base?
Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take
More composition and fierce quality,
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops,
Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund, As to the legitimate: Fine word,—legitimate! Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:— Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

_Enter Gloster._

_Glo._ Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his power! Confid'n to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad!—Edmund! How now? what news?
_Edm._ So please your lordship, none.

_Putting up the Letter._

_Glo._ Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?
_Edm._ I know no news, my lord.
_Glo._ What paper were you reading?
_Edm._ Nothing, my lord.
_Glo._ No? What needed then that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.
_Edm._ I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your over-looking.
_Glo._ Give me the letter, sir.
_Edm._ I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.
_Glo._ Let's see, let's see.
_Edm._ I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrought this but as an essay or taste of his virtue.
_Glo._ [Reads.] This policy, and reverence of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother.

_Humph.—Conspiracy!—"Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half his revenue,"—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in?—When came this to you? Who brought it?
_Edm._ It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?
_Edm._ If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.
_Glo._ It is his.
_Edm._ It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.
_Glo._ Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?
_Edm._ Never, my lord: But I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.
_Glo._ O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him:—Abominable villain!—Where is he?
_Edm._ I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.
_Glo._ Think you so?
_Edm._ If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

_Glo._ He cannot be such a monster.
_Edm._ Nor is not, sure.
_Glo._ To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom: I would unstate my own wisdom, to be in a due resolution.14
_Edm._ I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

_Glo._ These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off; brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction:
there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully:—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty!—Strange! strange!

[Exit.

Edm. This is the excellent folly of the world! that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour,) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of whore-master man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail; and my nativity was under area major; so that it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o'Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of, succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, mutiny breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word, or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him; and at my entreaty, forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heart of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: Pray you, go; there's my key:—If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; go armed; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: Pray you, go away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business,—

[Exit Edm.

A credulous father, and a brother noble, Whose nature is so far from doing harms, That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty My practices ride easy!—I see the business.— Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit: All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneral and Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night! he wrongs me; every hour He flashes into one gross crime or other, That set us all at odds: I'll not endure it: His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us On every trifle:—When he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him; say, I am sick:— If you come slack of former services, You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Stew. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horns within.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question:
If he dislike it, let him to my sister, Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,
Not to be over-rul'd. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities,
That he hath given away!—Now, by my life,
Old fools are babes again; and must be us'd
With checks, as flatteries,—when they are seen abus'd.
Remember what I have said.

Stew. Very well, madam.

gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows
so:
I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,
That I may speak:—I'll write straight to my sister,
To hold my very course:—Prepare for dinner.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Hall in the same.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech diffuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness.—Now, banish'd
Kent,
If thou can'st serve where thou dost stand con-
demn'd,
(So may it come!) thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter Lear, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go, get it ready. [Exit an Attend.] How now, what art
you?
Kent. A man, sir;

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldest thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem;
to serve him truly, that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight, when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.16
Lear. What art thou?
Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.
Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldest thou?

Kent. Service.
Lear. Who wouldest thou serve?
Kent. You.
Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—
Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call thither my fool.—

Re-enter Steward.

O, sir, sir, come you thither: Who am I, sir?

Stew. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father! my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Stew. I am none of this, my lord; I beseech you, pardon me.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal?

[Striking him.]

Stew. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither; you base foot-ball player.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away; I'll teach you differences; away, away: If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but away: go to; Have you wisdom? so.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service.

[Giving Kent Money.]

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too;—Hero's my coxcomb.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave? how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why? For taking one's part that is out of favour: Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: There, take my coxcomb: Why, this fellow has banished two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb. — How now, nuncle? Would I had two coxcombs, and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcomb myself: There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog that must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when Lady, the brach, may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

148

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:—

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou knowest,
Set less than thou showest;
Leave thy drink and thy store,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

Lear. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unsee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for 't: Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.[To Kent.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord, that counsel'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me,—
Or do thou for him stand:
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on 't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou closest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou hest thine ass on thy back over the dirt: Thou hast'lt little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

Fools had never less grace in a year;
For wise men are grown foppish;
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so aspish.
Lear. Were you not wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?
Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother: for when thou gavest them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches,
Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing.
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And so the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie.
Lear. If ye lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.
Fool. I marvel, what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'll have me whipped for lying; and, sometimes, I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing in the middle. Here comes one o'the parings.

Enter Goneril.
Lear. How now, daughter? what makes that frontlet on? Methinks, you are too much of late i'the frown.
Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou had'st no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing.—Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face [To Gon.] bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum.
He that keeps nor crust nor crumb,
Weary of all, shall want some.—
That's a shaeld peaseodd. [Pointing to Lear.
Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licensed fool,
But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth
In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir,
I had thought, by making this well known unto you,
To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,
By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance; which if you should, the fault
Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep;
Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.
Fool. For you trow, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had its head bit off by its young.
So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?
Gon. Come, sir, I would, you would make use of that good wisdom whereof I know you are fraught; and put away these dispositions, which of late transform you from what you rightly are.
Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?—Whoop, Jug! I love thee.
Lear. Does any here know me?—Why this is ot Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus?
Where is his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or is his discernings are lethargic.—Sleeping or waking?—
Ha! sure 'tis not so.—Who is it that can tell me who I am?—Lear's shadow? I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had dughters.—
Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.
Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?
Gon. Come, sir;
This admiration is much o'the favour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright:
As you are old and reverend, you should be wise:
Here do you keep a hundred knights and 'squires;
Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd, and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners,
Shows like a riotous inn; epicurism and lust
Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel,
Than a grae'd palace. The shame itself doth speak
For instant remedy: Be then desir'd
By her, that else will take the thing she begs
A little to disquaintify your train;
And the remainder, that shall still depend,
To be such men as may besort your age,
And know themselves and you.
Lear. Darkness and devils!—
Saddle my horses; call my train together.—
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee;
Yet have I left a daughter.
Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble
Make servants of their betters.

Enter Albany.
Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—O, sir, are you come?
Is it your will? [To Alb.] Speak, sir.—Prepare my horses.
Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster[125]
Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.
Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To Gon.

149
My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know;
And in the most exact regard support
The worship of their name.—O most small fault,
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!
Which, like an engine, wrenched my frame of nature
From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in,
[Striking his head.]
And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go, my people.
Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath mov'd you.
Lear. It may be so, my lord.—Hear, nature, hear;
Dear goddess, hear! Suspend thy purpose, if Thou didst intend to make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a thousand natur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!—Away, away! [Exit.
Alb. Now, gods, that we adore, whereof comes this?
Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers, at a clap!
Within a fortnight?
Alb. What's the matter, sir?
Lear. I'll tell thee;—Life and death! I am asham'd
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus:
[To Gon.
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them.—Blasts and fogs upon thee!
The untented woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee!—Old fond eyes,
BewEEP this cause again, I'll pluck you out;
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay.—Ha! is it come to this?

Let it be so:—Yet have I left a daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy woful visage. Thou shalt find,
That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant thee.

[Exeunt Lear, Kent, and Attend.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?
Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneral,
To the great love I bear you,—
Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho!
You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.
[To the Fool.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry, and take the fool with thee.
A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter;
So the fool follows after. [Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel:—A hundred knights!
'Tis politic, and safe, to let him keep
At point, a hundred knights. Yes, that on every dream,
Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may engage his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!—
Alb. Well, you may fear too far.
Gon. Safer than trust:
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart:
What he hath uttered, I have writ my sister;
If she sustains him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd the unfitness.—How now, Oswald?

Enter Steward.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?
Stew. Ay, madam.
Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:
Inform her full of my particular fear;
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone;
And hasten your return. [Exit Stew.] No, no, my
lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom,
Than praise'd for harmful mildness.
Alb. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell;
Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
Scene V.—Court before the same.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters: acquaint my daughter no farther with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter: If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.

Fool. If a man’s brains were in his heels, were’t not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I pr’ythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she’s as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, my boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell, why one’s nose stands i’ the middle of his face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep his eyes on either side his nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong. [Exit.

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Scene I.—A Court within the castle of the Earl of Gloster.

Enter Edmund and Caius meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Caius.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I; ’Pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, ’twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business! My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act:—Briefness and fortune, work!—Brother, a word;—descend;—Brother, I say;
Enter Edgar.

My father watches:—O sir, fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid; You have now the good advantage of the night:— Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall? He's coming hither; now, i' the night, i' the haste, And Regan with him; Have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany? Advise yourself.30

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.
Edm. I hear my father coming,—Pardon me:— In cunning I must draw my sword upon you:— Draw: Seem to defend yourself: Now quit you well.
Yield:—come before my father;—Light, ho, here!— Fly, brother!—Torches! torches!—So, farewell.— [Exit Edg.

Some blood drawn on me would begot opinion [Wounds his arm.

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards
Do more than this in sport.—Father! father!
Stop, stop! No help?

Enter Gloster, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?
Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand his auspicious mistress:—

Glo. But where is he?
Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?
Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—
Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after.—[Exit Serv.
By no means,—what?
Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;
But that I told him, the revenging gods
'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;
Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to the father;—Sir, in fine,
Seeing how loathly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion
With his prepared sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, lane'd mine arm:
But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Fall suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far:

Not in this land shall he remain uncought;
And found—Despatch.—The noble duke my master,
My worthy arch of patron, comes to-night:
By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he, which finds him, shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;
He, that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him: He replied,
"Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposals
Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,
(As this I would; ay, though thou did'st produce
My very character,) I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it."

Glo. Strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter?—I never got him.

[Trumpets within.

Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes:—
All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape;
The duke must grant me that; besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend? since I came hither,
(Which I can call but now,) I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?

Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!

Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life?

He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?

Glo. O, lady, lady, shame would have it hid!

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights
That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam: It is too bad, too bad.—
Edm. Yes, madam, he was.

Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill affected;
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the waste and spoil of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cautions,
That, if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.—
Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice; and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glo. Ay, my good lord, he is.

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please.—For you, Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours;
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit you.—

Reg. Thus out of season; threading dark-ey'd night.

Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poise,
Wherein we must have use of your advice:—
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several messengers
From hence attend despatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,
Which craves the instant use.

Glo. Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter Kent and Steward, severally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend: Art of the house?

Kent. Ay.

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I' the mire.

Stew. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why, then I care not for thee.
ACT II.

KING LEAR.

SCENE II.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter, or a painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Stew. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd,

At suit of his grey beard,—

Kent. Thou whorson zed! thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Pence, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger has a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword,

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords atwain

Which are too intrinsie t'unloose: smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebels;

Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;

Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon heaks

With every gale and vary of their masters,

As knowing nought, like dogs, but following.—

A plague upon your epileptic visage!

Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?

Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,

I'd drive ye caekling home to Cænlot.

Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fell you out?

Say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,

Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's his offence?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, or his, or hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain;

I have seen better faces in my time,

Than stands on any shoulder that I see

Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow,

Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness; and constrains the garb,

Quite from his nature: He cannot flatter, he!

An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth:

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.

These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness

Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,

Than twenty silly ducking observants,

That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,

Under the allowance of your grand aspect,

Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire

On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer:

he that beguiled you, in a plain accent, was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to it.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Stew. Never any:

It pleas'd the king his master, very late,

To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;

When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,

Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of man,

That worthy'd him, got praises of the king

For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;

And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,

Drew on me here.

Kent. None of these rogues, and cowards,

But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks, ho!

You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend barrgart,

We'll teach you—

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:

Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;

On whose employment I was sent to you:

You shall do small respect, show too bold malice Against the grace and person of my master,

Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks:

As I've life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,

You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.

[Stocks brought out.

Corn. This is a fellow of the same colour

Our sister speaks of:—Come, bring away the stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:

His fault is much, and the good king his master Will check him for 't: your purpos'd low correction Is such, as basest and contemned 'st wretches,
For pilferings and most common trespasses,
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill,
That he's so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—

[Kent is put in the Stocks.

Come, my good lord; away.

[Gent. Kent. Pray, do not, sir: I have watch'd, and travell'd hard;
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:
Give you good morrow!

Glo. The duke's to blame in this; 'twill be ill taken.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw!
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm sun!
Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may
Peruse this letter!—Nothing almost sees miracles,
But misery;—I know, 'tis from Cordelia;
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscure course; and shall find time
From this enormous state,—seeking to give Loses their remedies:—All weary and o'er-watch'd,
Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shamefull lodging.

Fortune, good night; smile once more; turn thy wheel!

[He sleeps.

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And, by the happy hollow of a tree,
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking. While I may scape,
I will preserve myself: and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That every penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth;
Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
And I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a recking post,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Goneril his mistress, salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,
(Being the very fellow that of late
Display'd so saucily against your highness,
Having more man than wit about me, drew;
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries:
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.
Fathers, that wear rags,
Do make their children blind;
But fathers, that bear bags,
Shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.—
But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours for thy daughters, as thou can'st tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart!

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below!—Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not;
Stay here. [Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?

Fool. An thou hast been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hast well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring in the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty, but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after.
When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,
Will pack, when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.
But I will tarry; the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly:
The knife turns fool, that runs away;
The fool no knife, perdy.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter Lear, with Gloster.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary?
They have travell'd hard to night? Mere fetches;
The images of revolt and dying off!
Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord,
You know the fiery quality of the duke
How unremovable and fix'd he is
In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!—
Fiery? what quality? Why, Gloster, Gloster,
I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall, and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them
so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall;
the dear father
Would with his daughter speak, commands her service:
Are they inform'd of this?—My breath and blood!—
Fiery? the fiery duke?—Tell the hot duke, that—
No, but not yet:—may be, he is not well:
Infirmitie doth still neglect all office,
Whereunto our health is bound; we are not ourselves,
When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind
To suffer with the body: I'll forbear;
And am fallen out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit
For the sound man.—Death on my state! wherefore

[Looking on Kent.

Should he sit here? This act persuades me,
That this remotion of the duke and her
Is practice only. Give me my servant forth:
Go, tell the duke and his wife, I'd speak with them,
Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear me,
Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloucester, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.
Corn. Hail to your grace!
[Exit Cornwall.]

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.
Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason
I have to think so: if thou should'st not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepulch'ring an adultress.—O, are you free?

[To Kent.]

Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan,
Thy sister's naught: O Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here,—
[Points to his heart.]
I can scarce speak to thee; thou 'rt not believe,
Of how deprav'd a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience; I have hope,
You less know how to value her desert,
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?
Reg. I cannot think, my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation: If, sir, perchance,
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!
Reg. O, sir, you are old;
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be rul'd, and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better than you yourself: Therefore, I pray you,
That to our sister you do make return;
Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but mark how this becomes the house:
"Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg," [Kneeling.
That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food."

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:
Return you to my sister.

Lear. Never, Regan:
She hath abated me of half my train;
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue,
Most serpent-like, upon the very heart:
All the stor'd vengeances of heaven fall
On her ingratitude! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fie, fie, fie!
Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd vultures, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!

Reg. O the blest gods!
So will you wish on me, when the rash mood's on.
Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse;
Thy tender-heated nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness; her eyes are fierce but thine
Do comfort, and not burn: 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o'the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.
[Trumpets within.]

Lear. Who put my man i'the stocks?
Corn. What trumpet's that?

Enter Steward.

Reg. I know't, my sister's: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.—Is your lady come?
Lear. This is a slave, whose easy-borrowed pride
Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows:—
Out, varlet, from my sight!
Corn. What means your grace?
Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou did'st not know of it.—Who comes here? O heavens,

Enter Goneril.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Mako it your cause; send down, and take my part!—
Art not ashamed to look upon this beard?—[To Goner
O, Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?
All’s not offence, that indiscretion finds,
And dotage terms so.
Lear. O, sides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?—How came my man i’ the stocks?
Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own disorders
Deserv’d much less advancement.
Lear. You! did you?—
Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me;
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.
Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismissed?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o’ the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,—
Necessity’s sharp pinch!—Return with her?
Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life afoot.—Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and suppert
To this detested groom. [Looking on the Steward.
Gon. At your choice, sir.
Lear. I pr’ythee, daughter, do not make me mad;
I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell;
We’ll no more meet, no more see one another:—
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;
Or, rather, a disease that’s in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I’ll not chide thee;
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:
Mend, whon thou can’st; be better; at thy leisure:
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I, and my hundred knights.
Reg. Not altogether so, sir;
I look’d not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome: Give ear, sir, to my sister;
For those that mingle reason with your passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.
Lear. Is this well spoken now?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: What, fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many? sith that both charge and danger
Speak ’gainst so great a number? How, in one house,
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? ’Tis hard; almost impossible.
Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance
From those that she calls servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc’d to slack you,
We could control them: If you will come to me,
(For now I spy a danger,) I entreat you
To bring but five and twenty; to no more
Will I give place, or notice.
Lear. I gave you all—
Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositories;
But kept a reservation to be follow’d
With such a number: What, must I come to you
With five and twenty, Regan? said you so?
Reg. And speak it again, my lord; no more with me.
Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour’d,
When others are more wicked; not being the worst,
Stands in some rank of praise:—I’ll go with thee;
[To Gon.
Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty,
And thou art twice her love.
Gon. Hear me, my lord;
What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man’s life is cheap as beast’s: thou art a lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear’st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm.—But, for true need,—
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need! 40
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!
If it be you that stir these daughters’ hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger!
O, let not women’s weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man’s cheeks!—No, you unnatural hags,
I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall—I will do such things, —
ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.
A Storm is heard, with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who’s here, beside foul weather?
Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.
Kent. I know you; Where’s the king?
Gent. Contending with the fretful element:
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters ’bove the main,
That things might change, or cease: tears his white hair;

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.

This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch, 41

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?
Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-just
His heart-struck injuries.

Glo. The king is in high rage.
Corn. Whither is he going?
Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither.
Corn. ’Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.
Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.
Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak winds
Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about
There’s scarce a bush.

Reg. O, sir, to wilful men,
The injuries, that they themselves procure,
Must be their schoolmasters: Shut up your doors;
He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear abus’d, wisdom bids fear.
Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; ’tis a wild night;
My Regan counsels well: come out o’the storm.

[Exit.

ACT III.
SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath. Storm continues.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
You cataracts, and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench’d our steeples, drown’d the cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt couriers to oak-cleaving thunder-bolts,
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thun-der,
Strike flat the thick rotundity o’ the world!
Crack nature’s moulds, all germens spill at once,
That make ingratitude man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o’ door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters’ blessing; here’s a night pities neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyfull! Spit, fire! spout, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, you clements, with unkindness,
I never gave you kingdom, call’d you children,
You owe me no subscription; why then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis’d old man:—
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That have with two pernicious daughters join’d
Your high-engender’d battles, ’gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! ’tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put his head in,
has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house,
Before the head has any.
The head and he shall loose;—
So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry woe,
And turn his sleep to wake

—For there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience,
I will say nothing.

Kent. Who’s there?

Fool. Marry, here’s grace, and a cod-piece that’s a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love
night,
Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves: Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man’s nature cannot carry
The affliction, nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother o’er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwhipp’d of justice: Hide thee, thou bloody hand;
Thou perjur’d, and thou similar man of virtue
That art incestuous: Cailtiff, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming
Hast practis’d on man’s life!—Close pent-up guiltis,
Rive your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace.—I am a man,
More sin’d against, than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed!
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a novel;
Some friendship will it lend you ’gainst the tempest
Repose you there: while I to this hard house,
More hard than is the stone whereof’ tis rais’d;
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in,) return, and force
Their scented courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.—
Come on, my boy: How dost, my boy? Art cold?
I am cold myself.—Where is this straw, my fellow?
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel,
Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

_Fool._ He that has a little tiny wit,—
With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—
Must make content with his fortunes fit;
For the rain it raineth every day.

Lear: True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exit Lear and Kent.
_Fool._ This is a brave night to cool a courtzan.
—I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:
When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors
When every case in law is right;
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor cutpurses come not to throns;
When usurers tell their gold i'the field;
And bawds and whores do churches build;—
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion.
Then comes the time, who lives to see 't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.
This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

_Enter Gloster and Edmund._

_Glo._ Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, treat for him, nor in any way sustain him.

_Edm._ Most savage, and unnatural!

_Glo._ Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night;—'tis dangerous to be spoken;—I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful.

_Edm._ This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke
Immediately know; and of that letter too:—
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all:
The younger rises, when the old doth fall. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

_Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool._

_Kent._ Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter.
The tyranny of the open night 's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.
_Lear._ Let me alone.
_Kent._ Good my lord, enter here.
_Lear._ Wilt break my heart?
_Kent._ I 'd rather break mine own: Good my lord, enter.
_Lear._ Thou think'st 'tis much, that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear
But if thy flight lay toward the raging seas,
Thou'dst meet the bear i'the mouth. When the mind's free,
The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Savo what beats there.—Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to 't?—But I will punish home:—
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on; I will endure:—
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,—
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that,—
_Kent._ Good my lord, enter here.

_Lear._ Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease;
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in:
In, boy; go first. [To the Fool.] You houseless poverty,—
Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.
[Fool goes in.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bido the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en

_T._

_X._
Tooth little care of this! Take physic, pomp; Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel; That thou may'st shake the superflux to them, And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the harvest.

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.

Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there? the straw?

Come forth.

[Enter EDGAR, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!— Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.—

Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch'd bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor:—Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold.—O, do de, do de, do de—Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes: There could I have him now,—and there,—and there,—and there again, and there.

[Storm continues

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Could'st thou save nothing? Did'st thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdu'd nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.— Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?

Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on pillicock's-hill;—

Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend: Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array: Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramoured the Turk: False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; Hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to women: Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from leaders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says suum, mun, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, my boy, sessa; let him trot by.

[Storm still continues

Lear. Why, thou were better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well: Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume:—Ha! here's three of us are sophisticated!—Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—Off, off, you lendings:—Come; unbutton here.—

[Removing his Clothes.

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contented; this is a naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest of his body cold.—Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Saint Witiold footed thrice the wold;
He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her truth plight,
And, aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!
KENT. How fares your grace?

Enter GLOSTER, with a Torch.

LEAR. What's he?

KENT. Who's there? What is't you seek?

GLOSTER. What are you there? Your names?

EDGAR. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-nag, and the water;
that in the fury of his heart, when the soul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantele of the standing pool; who is whipped from tythynge to tythynge, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

But mice, and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower:—Peace, Smolkyn; peace, thou fiend!

GLOSTER. What hast thy grace no better company?

EDGAR. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;

MODORICUS. He's call'd, and Machan.

GLOSTER. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so deleterious that it doth hate what gets it.

EDGAR. Poor Tom's a-cold.

GLOSTER. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
To obey in all your daughter's hard commands:
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you;
Yet have I ventured to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

LEAR. First let me talk with this philosopher:—

What is the cause of thunder?

KENT. Good my lord, take his offer;

Go into the house.

LEAR. I'll talk a word with this same learned

Theban:—

What is your study?

EDGAR. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

LEAR. Let me ask you one word in private.

KENT. Impunctuality you once more to go, my lord,

His wits begin to unsettle.

GLOSTER. Can't thou blame him?

His daughters seek his death:—Ah, that good

KENT!—

He said it would be thus:—Poor banish'd man!—

Thou say'st, the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend,

I am almost mad myself: I had a son,

Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life,

But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend,—

No father his son dearer: true to tell thee,

[Storm continues.

The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your grace,—

LEAR. O, cry you mercy,

Noble philosopher, your company.

EDGAR. Tom's a-cold.

GLOSTER. In, fellow, there, to the hovel: keep thee warm.

LEAR. Come, let's in all.

KENT. This way, my lord.

LEAR. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher.

LEAR. Good my lord, sooth him; let him take the follow.

GLOSTER. Take him you on.

KENT. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

LEAR. Come, good Athenian.

GLOSTER. No words, no words.

Hush.

EDGAR. Child Rowland to the dark tower came,

His word was still,—Fie, foh, and furn,

I smell the blood of a British man.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

CORN. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

EDMUND. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

CORN. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death;

but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself.

EDMUND. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

CORN. Go with me to the duchess

EDMUND. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

CORN. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

EDMUND. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicious more fully.—I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

163
ACT III.

KING LEAR.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm-house, adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, FOOL, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully: I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can; I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience:—The gods reward your kindness!

[Exit Glo.

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me, Nero is an angel in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the fiend.

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son: for he's a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits

Come hizzing in upon them:—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign him straight:—

Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;—

[To Edg.

Thou, sapient sir, sit here. [To the Fool.]—Now, you she foxes!—

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares!—

Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy to me:18

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdence cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel! I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd:

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first:—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou rob'd man of justice, take thy place;—

[To Edg.

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool.

Bench by his side:—You are of the commission, Sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest, or wak'est thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress; Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made of.—Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now,

That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much,

They'll mar my counterfieting.

[Aside.

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them:—

Avault, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, grey-hound, mongrel grim,

Hound, or spaniel, brach, or lym;

Or bobtail tike, or trundle-tail;

Tom will make them weep and wail

For, with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de do. Sessa. Come, march to wakes and fairs, and market towns:—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomiize Regan, see what breeds about her heart: Is there any cause in nature, that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be changed.

[To Edg.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: So, so, so: We’ll go to supper i’ the morning: So, so, so.

_Fool._ And I’ll go to bed at noon

_Re-enter_ Gloster.

_Glo._ Come hither, friend: Where is the king my master?

_Kent._ Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

_Glo._ Good friend, I pr’ythee take him in thy arms,
I have o’er-heard a plot of death upon him:
There is a litter ready; lay him in ’t,
And drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet
Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master:
If thou should’st daily half an hour, his life,
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured loss: Take up, take up;
And follow me, that will to some provision
Give thee quick conduct.

_Kent._ Oppress’d nature sleeps:—
This rest might yet have balm’d thy broken senses,
Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master;
Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.
_Glo._ Come, come, away.
[Exeunt Kent, Glo., and the Fool, bearing off the King.

_Edy._ When we our betters see bearing our woes,
We scarce think our miseries our foes.
Who alone suffers, suffers most i’ the mind;
Leaving free things, and happy shows, behind;
But then the mind much sufferance doth o’er-skip,
When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that, which makes me bend, makes the king bow;
He chided, as I father’d!—Tom, away:
Mark the high noises; and thyself beware,
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,
In thy just proof, repeals, and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe scape the king!
Lurk, lurk. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—A Room in Gloster’s Castle.

_Enter_ Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

_Corn._ Post speedily to my lord your husband.
Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your host;
With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Cor. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Cor. And what confederacy have you with the traitors
Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king?

Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos'd.

Cor. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Glo. Where hast thou sent the king?
Cor. Wherefore to Dover? Let him first answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.
The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endure'd, would have buoy'd up,
And quench'd the stilled fires: yet, poor old heart,
He hop the heavens to rain.
If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern time, Thou should'st have said, "Good porter, turn the key;"
All cruel else subscrib'd:—But I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Cor. See it shall thou never:—Fellows, hold
the chair:—

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

[Glo. is held down in his Chair, while Cor.
plucks out one of his Eyes, and sets his Foot on it.

Glo. He, that will think to live till he be old,
Give me some help:—O cruel! O ye gods!

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Cor. If you see vengeance,

Serv. Hold your hand, my lord:
I have serv'd you ever since I was a child;
But better service have I never done you,
Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog?

Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel: What do you mean?

Cor. My villain! [Draws, and runs at him.

Serv. Nay, then come on, and take the chance of anger.

[Draws. They fight. Cor. is wounded.

Reg. Give me thy sword.—[To another Serv.
A peasant stand up thus;

[Snatch'd a Sword, comes behind, and许多 him.

Serv. O, I am slain!—My lord, you have one eye left
To see some mischief on him:—O! [Dies.

Cor. Lest it see more, prevent it:—Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

[Tears out Gloster's other Eye, and throws it on the Ground.

Glo. All dark and comfortless.—Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!

Glo. Thou call'st on him that hates thee: it was he
That made the overture of thy treasons to us;
Who is too good to pity thee.

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemned. Thine still contemned and flatter'd. To be worst, The lowest, and most deserted thing of fortune, Stands still in expectation, lives not in fear: The lamentable change is from the best; The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then, Thou unsubstantial air, that I embrace! The wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst, Owes nothing to thy blasts.—But who comes here?—

Enter Gloster, led by an old Man.

My father, poorly led?—World, world, O world! But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee, Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these four-score years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone: Thy comforts can do me no good at all, Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes; I stumbled when I saw: Full oft 'tis seen, Our mean securces us; and our mere defects Prove our commodities.—Ah, dear son Edgar, The food of thy abused father's wrath! Might I but live to see thee in my touch, I'd say, I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now? Who's there?

Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, “I am at the worst?" I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom, [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: The worst is not, So long as we can say, "This is the worst." Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg. I' the last night's storm I such a fellow saw; Which made me think a man a worm: My son Came then into my mind; and yet my mind Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since: As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods; They kill us for their sport.

Edg. How should this be? Bad is the trade must play the fool to sorrow, Ang'ring itself and others. [Aside.]—Bless thee, master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone: If, for my sake, Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain, I' the way to Dover, do it for ancient love; And bring some covering for this naked soul, Whom I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he's mad.

Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind. Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure; Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parrel that I have,

Come on't what will. [Exit.

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.—I cannot daub it further. [Aside.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way, and footpath. Poor Tom hath been seared out of his good wits: Bless the good man from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidient; Hobididdancer, prince of dizziness; Mahu, of stealing; Mode, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier.—Heavens, deal so still! Let the superfluous, and lust-defiled man, That saries your ordinance, that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;
A woman's services are due; my fool
Usurps my bed.
Stew. Madam, here comes my lord.

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.
Alb. O Goneril! You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Bows in your face.—I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contains its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will slaver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.
Gon. No more; the text is foolish.
Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
Fulks savour but themselves. What have you done?
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you maddened
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offscources,
'Twill come,
Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st,
Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?
France spreads his banners in our noiseless land,
With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sit'st still, and cry'st,
"Alack! why does he so?"

Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid, as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones:—Howe'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!
Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?
Mess. O, my good lord, the duke of Cornwall's dead:
Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.
Alb. Gloster's eyes!
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
Oppos'd against the act, heeding his sword
To his great master; who, theret' enrag'd,
Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead:
But not without that harmful stroke, which since
Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justiciers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O, poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye!
Mess. This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

Gent. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fanc'y pluck
Upon my hateful life: Another way,
The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer.

[Exit.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?
Mess. Come with my lady hither.
Alb. He is not here.
Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.
Alb. Knows he the wickedness?
Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him;
And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment
Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king,
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend;
Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The French Camp, near Dover.

Enter Kent, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of; which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,

That his personal return was most requir'd.

And necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The mariscal of France, monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage; patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better day: Those happy smiles,
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief, sorrow
Would be a rarity most belov'd, if all
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Gent. 'Faith, once or twice, she heav'd the name of "father"

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;

Cried, "Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ladies! sisters!

Kent! father! sisters! What? i' the storm? i' the night?

Let pity not be believ'd!"—There she shook

The holy water from her heavenly eyes,

And glamour moisten'd: then away she started

To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and mate could not beget

Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir; the poor distress'd Lear is i' the town:

Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means

Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights

169
To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things sting
His mind so venomously, that burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!
Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?
Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot.
Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,
And leave you to attend him: some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;
When I am known, right, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Tent.

Enter Cordelia, Physician, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he; why, he was met even now
As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds,
With harlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Dandel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.—

What can man's wisdom do,
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remediate,
In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for him;
Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Madam, news;
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands
In expectation of them.—O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France
My mourning, and important tears, hath pitied.
No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right:
Soon may I hear, and see him!

[Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Regan and Steward.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
Stew. Ay, madam.
Reg. In person there?

Stew. Madam, with much ado:
Your sister is the better soldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?
Stew. No, madam.
Reg. What might import my sister's letter to
him?
Stew. I know not, lady.
Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being out,
To let him live; where he arrives, he moves
All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to despatch
His nighted life; moreover, to descry
The strength o' the enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.
Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us;
The ways are dangerous.

Stew. I may not, madam;
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.
Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Something—I know not what:—I'll love thee much,
Let me unseal the letter.

Stew. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know, your lady does not love her husband;
I am sure of that: and, at her late being here,
She gave strange odes. and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund: I know, you are of her bosom.
Stew. I, madam?
Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know it:
Therefore, I do advise you, take this note:
My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd;
And more convenient is he for my hand,
Than for your lady's:—You may gather more.
If you do find him, pray you, give him this;
And when your mistress hears thus much from you,
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her.
So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Proferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Stew. 'Would I could meet him, madam! I would show
What party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter Gloster, and Edgar, dressed like a Peasant.

Glo. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now: look how we labour.
Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.
Edg. Harsh, do you hear the sea?
Glo. No, truly.
Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.
Glo. So may it be, indeed:
Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.
Edg. You are much deceiv'd; in nothing am I chang'd,
But in my garments.
Glo. Methinks, you are better spoken.
Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place:—stand still.—How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows, andoughs, that wing the midway air,
Shoar scarce so gross as beetles: Half way down
Hangs one that gathers sapphire; dreadful trade!
Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head:
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and you' tall anchoring bark,
Diminish'd to her coak; her coak, a buoy
Almost too small for sight: The marmuring surge,
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high:—I'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.
Glo. Set me where you stand.
Edg. Give me your hand: You are now within a foot
Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.69
Glo. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: Fairies, and gods,
Prosper it with thee! Go thon further off;
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.
Edg. Now fare you well, good sir. [Seems to go
Glo. With all my heart
Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair,
Is done to earo it.
Glo. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce; and, in your sights,
Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fail
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,
My self, and lofted part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—
Now, fellow, fare thee well.

[He leaps, and falls along.

Edg. Gone, sir? farewell.—
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself
Yields to the theft: Had he been where he thought,
By this, had thought been past.—Alive, or dead?
Ho, you sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak!
Thus might he pass indeed:—Yet he revives:
What are you, sir?
Glo. Away, and let me die.
Edg. Had'st thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating,
Thou had'st shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost breathe;
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art
Sound.
Ten masts at each make not the altitude,
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell;
Thy life's a miracle: Speak yet again.
Glo. But have I fallen, or no?
Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn:
Look up a-height;—the shrill-gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.
Glo. Alack, I have no eyes.—
Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When misery could becalme the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.
Edg. Give me your arm:
Up:—So;—How is 't? Feel you your legs? You stand.
Glo. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that
Which parted from you?
Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his eyes
Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,
Horns whelk'd, and wav'd like the enraged sea; 61
It was some fiend: Therefore, thou happy father, Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear Affliction, till it do cry out itself,
"Enough, enough," and, "die." That thing you speak of,
I took it for a man: often 'twould say,
"The fiend, the fiend!" he led me to that place.

Edy. Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here?

Enter Lear, fantastical dressed up with Flowers.
The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining;
I am the king himself.

Edy. O thou side-piercing sight!
Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—
There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: 62 draw me a clothier's yard.—Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace;—this piece of toasted cheese will do't.—There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant.—Bring up the brown hills.—O, well flown, bird!—i'the clout, i'the clout: hewgh!—Give the word.

Edy. Sweet marjoram.
Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.
Lear. Ha! Goneril!—with a white beard! 63—
They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say "ay," and "no," to every thing I said!—Ay and no too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie;
I am not age-proof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember:
Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes
I pardon that man's life: What was thy cause?—
"Adultery."—
Thou shalt not die: Die for adultery! No:
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.
Let copulation thrive, for Gloster's bastard son

Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.
To 't, luxury, fell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—
Behold you' simpering dame,
Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;
The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, 64 goes to 't
With a more riotous appetite.
Down from the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above:
But to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath all is the fiends; there's hell, there's darkness,
there is the sulphurous pit, burning, sealding, stench, consumption;—Fie, fie, fie! pah; pah!
Give me an ounce of eivet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know
me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squinty at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge:
mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edy. I would not take this from report;—it is,
And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light:
Yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears:
see how you' justice rails upon you' simple thief.
Hark, in thine ear: Change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief!—
Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the ear?
There thou might'st behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.—
Thou rascal bawd, hold thy bloody hand:
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;
Thou botly lust' st to use her in that kind
ACT IV.

KING LEAR.

For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozenor.
Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes, and fur'red gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold,
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks:
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.
None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able 'em:
Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now, now, now:
Pull off my boots:—harder, harder; so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd!
Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloster:
Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air,
We wawl, and cry:—I will preach to thee; mark me.

Glo. Alack, alack the day!
Lear. When we are born, we cry, that we are come
To this great stage of fools:—This a good block?

It were a delicate stratagem, to show
A troop of horse with felt: I'll put it in proof;
And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants,

Gent. O, here he is; lay hand upon him.—Sir,
Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even
The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well;
You shall have ransome. Let me have a surgeon,
I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing,
Lear. No seconds? All myself?
Why, this would make a man, a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—
Lear. I will die bravely, like a bridegroom:
What?
I will be jovial; come, come; I am a king,
My master, know you that?

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sn, sn, sn, sn.

[Exit, running; Attend. follow.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch;
Past speaking of in a king!—Thou hast one daughter,
Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: What's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears that,
Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favour,
How near's the other army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main des Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,
Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;
Let not my worser spirit tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame by fortune's blows;
Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo. Heartly thanks:
The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
To raise my fortunes,—Thou old unhappy traitor,
Briefly thyself remember:—The sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to it. [Eno. oppose.

Stew. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence;
Lest that the infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without vurther casion.

Stew. Let go, slave, or thou diest.
SCENE VII.—A tent in the French Camp. LEAR on a bed, asleep; Physician, Gentleman, and Others, attending.

Enter Cordelia and Kent.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live, and work,
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg’d, madam, is o’erpaid.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp’d, but so.

Cor. Be better suited. These weeds are memories of those worser hours;
I pr’ythee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet to be known, shortens my made intent:
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be it so, my good lord.—How does the king?

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untun’d and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your majesty,
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern’d by your knowledge, and proceed
I the sway of your own will. Is he array’d?

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Phys. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess

And woe, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves.

Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I’ll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.]
Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challenge'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be exposed against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch (poor perdu!
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; And wast thou fain, poor father,
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
'Tis wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.
Phys. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.
Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?
Lear. You do me wrong, to take me out o' the grave:
Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a spirit, I know; When did you die?
Cor. Still, still, far wide!
Phys. He's scarce awake; let him alone awhile.
Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?—
Fair day-light?
I am mightily abus'd.68—I should even die with pity,
To see another thus.—I know not what to say.—
I will not swear, these are my hands:—let's see;
I feel this pin prick. 'Would I were assur'd
Of my condition.
Cor. O, look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me:—
No, sir, you must not kneel.
Lear. Pray, do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward; and, to deal plainly,
I fear, I am not in my perfect mind.
 Methinks, I should know you, and know this man;
Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night: Do not laugh at me;
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.
Cor. And so I am, I am.
Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, 'faith. I pray, weep not:
If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know, you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:
You have some cause, they have not.
Cor. No cause, no cause.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.
Lear. Do not abuse me.
Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,
You see, is cur'd in him: and yet it is danger
To make him o'er the time he has lost.
Desire him to go in; trouble him no more,
Till further settling.
Cor. Will 't please your highness walk?
Lear. You must bear with me:
Pray now, forget and forgive: I am old, and foolish.
[Exeunt Lear, Cor., Phys., and Attend.
Gent. Holds it true, sir,
That the duke of Cornwall was so slain?
Kent. Most certain, sir.
Gent. Who is conductor of his people?
Kent. As 'tis said,
The bastard son of Gloster.
Gent. They say, Edgar,
His banish'd son, is with the earl of Kent
In Germany.
Kent. Report is changeable.
'Tis time to look about; the powers o' the kingdom
Approach apace.
Gent. The arbitrement is like to be a bloody
Pare you well, sir.
Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought,
Or well, or ill, as this day's battle's fought. [Exit.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, Edmund, Regan, Officers, Soldiers, and Others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold;
Or, whether since he is advis’d by aught
To change the course: He’s full of alteration,
And self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who goes out.]

Reg. Our sister’s man is certainly miscarried.
Edm. ’Tis to be doubted, madam.
Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me,—but truly,—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?
Edm. In honour’d love.
Reg. But have you never found my brother’s way
To the foreclosed place?
Edm. That thought abuses you.
Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct
And bosom’d with her, as far as we call hers.
Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.
Reg. I never shall endure her: Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.
Edm. Fear me not:
She, and the duke her husband,———

Enter Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister
Should loosen him and me. [Aside.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be met.—
Sir, this I hear,—The king is come to his daughter,
With others, whom the rigour of our state
Fore’d to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us as France invades our land,
Not bolds the king; with others, whom I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.
Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.
Reg. Why is this reason’d?
Gon. Combine together ’gainst the enemy:
For these domestic and particular broils
Are not to question here.

Alb. Let us then determine
With the ancient of war on our proceedings.
Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you’ll go with us?
Gon. No.
Reg. ’Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.
Gon. O, ho, I know the riddle: [Aside.] I will go.

As they are going out, enter Edgar, disguised.

Edg. If e’er your grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I’ll overtake you.—Speak.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I see,
I can produce a champion, that will prove
What is avouched there: If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I’ll appear again. [Exit.

Alb. Why, fare thee well; I will o’erlook thy paper.

Re-enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy’s in view, draw up your powers.
Here is the guess of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery;—but your haste
Is now urg’d on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;
Each jealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy’d,
If both remain alive: To take the widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril;
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we’ll use
His countenance for the battle; which being done,
Let her, who would be rid of him, devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,—
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon: for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.
SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarums within. Enter, with Drum and Colours, Lear, Cordelia, and their Forces; and exexut.

Enter Edgar and Gloster.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree For your good host; pray that the right may thrive:
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.
Glo. Grace go with you, sir! [Exit Edg.]

Alarums; afterwards a Retreat. Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Away, old man, give me thy hand, away;
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en:
Give me thy hand, come on.
Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.
Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all: Come on.
Glo. And that’s true too. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in Conquest, with Drum and Colours, Edmund; Lear and Cordelia, as prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard;
Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.
Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incurred the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune’s frown.—
Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?
Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let’s away to prison:
We two alone will sing like birds i’ the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I’ll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness: So we’ll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news; and we’ll talk with them too,—
Who loses, and who wins; who’s in, who’s out;—
And take upon us the mystery of things,
As if we were God’s spies: And we’ll wear out,
In a walled prison, packs and seals of great ones
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.
Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?
He, that parts us, shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence, like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
The goujers shall devour them, flesh and all,
 Ere they shall make us weep: we’ll see them starve first.
Come. [Exeunt Lear and Cor., guarded.
Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note; [Giving a Paper.] go, follow them to prison:
One step I have advanc’d thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes: Know thou this,—that men
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword:—Thy great employment
Will not bear question; either say, thou ‘tis don't,
Or thrive by other means.
Qff. I’ll do’t, my lord.
Edm. About it; and write happy, when thou hast done.
Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so,
As I have set it down.
Qff. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oats;
If it be man’s work, I will do it. [Exit Off.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Generil, Regan,
Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,
And fortune led you well: You have the captives
Who were the opposites of this day’s strife:
We do require them of you; so to use them,
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.
Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard;
Whose age has charmed in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress’d lances in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen;
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time,
We sweat, and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend;
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are cured
By those that feel their sharpness:—
The question of Cordelia, and her father,
Requires a fitter pace.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks, our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere ye had spoke so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your advancement.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Gon. Holla, holla!
That eye, that told you so, look'd but a-squint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach.—General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine:
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

[To Edm.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason:—Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,
This gilded serpent: [Pointing to Gon.]—for your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster:—Let the trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person,
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge; [Throwing down a Glove]
I'll prove it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here prochained thee.

Reg. Sick, O, sick!

Gon. If not, I'll ne'er trust poison.

[Aside.

Edm. There's my exchange: [Throwing down a Glove] what in the world he is
That names me traitor, villain-like he lies:
Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,
On him, on you, (who not?) I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho, a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. This sickness grows upon me.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.

[Exit Reg., Edm.

Come hither, herald.—Let the trumpet sound,—
And read out this.

Off. Sound, trumpet.

[Trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

If any man of quality, or degree, within the lists of the army, will maintain upon Edmund, supposed earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet: He is bold in his defence.

Edm. Sound.

[1st Trumpet.

Her. Again.

[2nd Trumpet.

Her. Again.

[3rd Trumpet.

[Trumpet answers within.

Enter Edgar, armed, preceded by a Trumpet.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost;
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn, and canker-bite:
Yet am I noble, as the adversary
I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary?
Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself;—What say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword;
That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession: I protest,—
Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor:
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince;
And, from the extremest upward of thy head,
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, "No,"
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak, Thouliest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some 'say' of breeding breathes,
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;
Which, (for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,)
This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets, speak.

[Alarums. They fight. Edm. falls.

Alb. O save him, save him!]

Gon. This is mere practice, Gloster:
By the law of arms, thou wast not bound to answer
An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it.—Hold, sir:—
Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil:—
No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.

[Give the Letter to Edm.]

Gon. Say, if I do; the laws are mine, not thine:
Who shall arraign me for 't?

Alb. Most monstrous!
Know'st thou this paper?

Gon. Ask me not what I know.

[Exit Gon.]

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her.

[To an Officer, who goes out.]

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have I done;
And more, much more: the time will bring it out;
'Tis past, and so am I: But what art thou,
That hast this fortune on me? If thou art noble,
I do forgive thee.

Edy. Let's exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;
If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to scourge us:
The dark and vicious place where thee he got,
Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true;
The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought, thy very gait did prophecy
A royal nobleness:—I must embrace thee;
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee, or thy father!

Edy. Worthy prince,
I know it well.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?

How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edy. By nursing them, my lord.—List a brief tale;—

And, when 'tis told, O, that my heart would burst!—
The bloody proclamation to escape,
That follow'd me so near, (O our lives' sweetness
That with the pain of death we'd hourly die,
Rather than die at once!) taught me to shift
Into a mad-man's rags; to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;
Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: But his flaw'd heart, (Alack, too weak the conflict to support!)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good: but speak you on;
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Edy. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too-much, would make much more,
And top extremity.
Whilst I was big in clamour, came there a man,
Who having seen me in my worst estate,
Slun'd my abhor'sd society; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father:
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd: which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack: Twice then the trumpet sounded,
And there I left him trance'd.

Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody Knife.

Gent. Help! help! O help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;

It came even from the heart of—

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both; all three
Now marry in an instant.

Alb. Produce their bodies, be they alive or dead!—

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,

Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gent.

Enter Kent.

Edg. Here comes Kent, sir.

Alb. O! it is he? The time will not allow the compliment,

Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night;

Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?—

See'st thou this object, Kent?

[The Bodies of Gon. and Reg. are brought in.

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd;

The one the other poison'd for my sake,

And after slew herself.

Edm. Even so.—Cover their faces.

Edg. I pant for life:—Some good I mean to do,

Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—

Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ

Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:—

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O, run—

Edg. To who, my lord?—Who has the office? send Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on; take my sword,

Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit Edg.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and

To lay the blame upon her own despair,

That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile. [Edm. is borne off.

Enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms; Edgar, Officer, and Others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O, you are men of stones;

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so

That heaven's vault should crack:—O, she is gone for ever!—

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;

She's dead as earth:—Lend me a looking-glass;

If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,

Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror? 273

Alb. Fall, and cease! 24

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,

It is a chance that does redeem all sorrow

That ever I have felt.

Kent. O my good master! [Kneeling.

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!

I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for ever!—

Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha!

What is 't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft,

Gentle, and low; an excellent thing in woman:—

I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow? I have seen the day, with my good biting faultion

I would have made them skip: I am old now,

And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you?

Mine eyes are none o' the best:—I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,

One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight: Are you not Kent?

Kent. The same:

Your servant Kent: Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;

He'll strike, and quickly too:—He's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man;—

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of difference and decay,

Have followed your sad steps.
ACT V.
KING LEAR.

Leav. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else; all’s cheerless, dark, and deadly.—Your eldest daughters have foredoom’d themselves, And desperately are dead.
Leav. Ay, so I think.
Alb. He knows not what he says; and vain it is That we present us to him.
Edg. Very bootless.

Enter an Officer.
Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.
Alb. That’s but a trifle here.—You lords, and noble friends, know our intent. What comfort to this great decay may come, Shall be applied: For us we will resign, During the life of this old majesty, To him our absolute power:—You, to your rights; [To Edg. and Kent.
With boot, and such addition as your honours Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste The wages of their virtue, and all foes The cup of their deserving.—O, see, see!
Lear. And my poor fool is hanged! No, no, no, life:
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, And thou no breath at all? O, thou wilt come no more,

Never, never, never, never, never!—
Pray you, undo this button: Thank you, sir.—
Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—her lips,—
Look there, look there!—[He dies.
Edg. Ho fain’s!—My lord, my lord,—
Kent. Break, heart; I pr’ythee, break!’
Edg. Look up, my lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he hates him,
That would upon the rack of this tough world Stretch him out longer.
Edg. O, he is gone, indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endured so long: He but usurp’d his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence.—Our present business
Is general woe. Friends of my soul, you twain [To Kent and Edg.
Rule in this realm, and the gird state sustain.
Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;
My master calls, and I must not say, no. 78
Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we, that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead March.
NOTES TO KING LEAR.

1 Being so proper, i.e. handsome.

2 We shall express our darker purpose.

Darker is here used as more secret, and not in its usual sense of sinister.

3 Which the most precious square of sense possesses.

Square of sense is full compass or comprehension of the senses.

4 Than that confirm'd on Goneril.

The folio reads conferred, which is certainly a better word. We confer a gift on, but we confirm it to him.

5 Hold thee from this.

That is, from this time for ever.

6 Or he that makes his generation messes

To gorge his appetite.

He that is so unnatural as to feed upon his own children.

7 To shield thee from diseases of the world.

The folio reads disasters, but Mr. Malone thinks diseases to be the correct word, as it was anciently used for the slighter inconveniences, troubles, or distresses of the world.

8 That little seeming substance.

Seeming is specious, deceitful.

9 —— Love is not love

When it is mingled with respects.

That is, when it is mingled with cautious and prudent considerations.

10 To your professed bosoms.

Thus all the old copies, but Pope reads professing bosoms; certainly a more appropriate word, though the text is not inconsistent with the peculiar phraseology of our poet.

11 The imperfections of long-engrafted condition.

That is, of failings confirmed by long habit.

12 Subscrib'd his power.

That is, he has transferred his power by subscribing a deed to that effect.

13 —— All this is done

Upon the gad!

Upon the whim, upon the sudden suggestions of caprice. Done suddenly.

14 I would unstall myself, to be in a due resolution.

I would give my estate to be convinced either of his guilt or his innocence.

15 And to eat no fish.

Shakspeare gives to all ages and countries the customs of his own; in his time for a man to say he "ate no fish," was equivalent to saying that he was a protestant, and a friend to the government.

16 Which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity.

That is, as an over-jealous exertion of attention on my part, a punctilious jealousy resulting from a scrupulous watchfulness of his own dignity.

17 Since my young lady's going away into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

"The Fool," says Coleridge, "is no comic buffoon to make the groundlings laugh,—no forced condescension of Shakspeare's genius to the taste of his audience. Accordingly, the poet prepares for his introduction, which he never does with any of his common clowns and fools, by bringing him into living connection with the pathos of the play.'

18 Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'll catch cold shortly.

If you do not fawn upon the most powerful, you will be turned out of doors and risk catching cold from the inclemency of the weather.

19 When lady the brach.

Brach is a bitch of the hunting kind, and lady is a common name for a hound. Thus, Hotspur says,

I had rather hear lady, my brach, bow in Irish.

20 Learn more than thou trovest.

To true is an old word signifying to believe.

21 If I had a monopoly out they would have part on't.

A satire on the avarice of the courtiers of Shakspeare's time, who lent their assistance in obtaining patents, on agreement of their receiving a share of its profits. So, in Decker's Match Me in London, 1631, "Give him a court loaf, stop his mouth with a monopoly."

22 So out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

This line is, no doubt, a fragment of some old song; Sir Joshua Reynolds says, that though the Fools of the time from whom Shakspeare copied his, "were licensed to say anything, it was still necessary, to prevent giving offence, that everything they said should have a play-

182 ful air: we may suppose, therefore, that they had a custom of taking off the edge of too sharp a speech, by covering it hastily with the end of an old song, or any glib nonsense that came into the mind. I know no other way of accounting for the incoherent words with which Shaksper often finishes this fool’s speeches.”

23 Whoop Jug! I love thee.
This also, as Mr. Steevens says, is a quotation from the burden of an old song.

24 And the remainder that shall still depend.
That shall still depend upon you, continue in your service.

25 Than the sea-monster!
Mr. Upton says, that by the sea-monster is meant the Hippopotamus, the hieroglyphical symbol of inviety and ingratitude.

26 Cudent tears, i.e. falling tears.
The repenting king is musing on Cordelia.

27 I did her wrong.

28 Unless things be cut shorter.
“This idle couplet,” says Mr. Steevens, “is apparently addressed to the females present at the performance of the play; and, not improbably, crept into the playhouse copy from the mouth of some buffoon actor, who ‘spoke more than was set down for him.’”

29 And I have one thing, of a queasy question.
That is, something of a delicate, unsettled, and suspicious nature.

30 Advise yourself; i.e. consider, recollect yourself.

31 My worthy arch.
That is, worthy chief; the word is now only used in conjunction with some other, as arch-angel, arch-duke.

32 Though thou didst produce
My very character.
Though you produced my own handwriting against me.

33 A lily-liver'd action-taking knave.
That is, a cowardly fellow, who, if beaten, would bring an action for the assault, instead of resenting it like a man of courage.

34 Barbermonger, i.e. a fop, a finical fellow.
Thou wharon zed: thou unnecessary letter.
Zed was, I believe, a cant name for eunuch.

35 I’d drive ye etchling home to Camelot.
In Somersetshire, near Camelot, are many large moors where great quantities of geese are bred.

36 Lunatic bans, i.e. lunatic curses.

37 Meiny, i.e. people.

38 O, how this mother.
Lear affects to pass off the swelling of his heart, which arises from indignation and grief, for the disease commonly called the mother, or hysterica passio, which was regarded as not peculiar to women.

40 Give me that patience, patience I need.
The repetition of the word patience, which encumbers the metre, was, no doubt, an error of the printers of the copy copies.

41 This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would howch.
The cub-drawn bear, is the she-bear sucked dry by her cubs; the storm was such, that even hunger and natural affection could not induce the animal to go forth in it.

42 Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks!
Shaksper was here, doubtless, thinking of the common representations of the winds, which he might have found in many books of his own time, of faces with cheeks violently distended by the act of blowing.

43 Court holy-water.
Court holy-water is defined by Ray, in his Proverbial
Phrases, to mean fair words, flattering speeches.

44 Wore gloves in my cap.
That is, his mistress’s favours, according to the fashion of the times. It was anciently the custom to wear gloves in the hat on three different occasions, viz.:—as the favourite of a mistress, the memorial of a friend, and as a mark to be challenged by an enemy.

45 Gives the web and the pin.
The web and the pin were vulgar names for certain diseases of the eye.

46 And, arount thee, &c.
Dr. Warburton says that we should arrange this verse thus:—

Saint Withold fooed threee the wold,
He met the night-marc, and her name told,
Bid her aiglit, and her troth plight,
And arount thee, witch, arount thee right.

The meaning is, that St. Withold, in traversing the wold, or downs, met the nightmare, who, having told her name, he obliged her to slight from those persons whom she rides, and plight her troth to do no more mischief.

47 A horse’s health.
We should read heels—trust not a horse’s heels; health in this sentence, has little or no meaning.

48 Come o’er the bourn, Bessy, to me.
Both the quartos and the folio read—o’er the broome
The correction was supplied by Mr. Steevens. A bourn, in the north, signifies a rivulet, or brook.

49 His corky arms, i.e., his dry, withered arms.
NOTES TO KING LEAR.

50 My villain.
Villain is here used in its original sense of servant.
51 Yet better thus, and known to be contemned.
This line is obscure. Should it not be—unknown to be contemned.
52 I cannot dumb it further.
That is, I cannot dissemble or disguise myself further.
50 Who since possesses chamber-maid's and waiting-women.
Shakspeare has, in this play, several times alluded to a work published in 1603, and at that time the subject of general conversation. It was called, A Declaration of egregious Popish Impositions, to withdraw her Majesty's Subjects from their Allegiance, &c. The substance of it was this:—While the Spaniards were preparing their arms against England, the Jesuits were busy to promote it by making converts; and one method which they employed was to dispossess pretended demo- nias, by which artifice they made several hundred converts among the common people. The principal farce of this kind was acted in the family of one Mr. Edmund Pevkham, where three chamber-maid's came into the priests' hands for curo. But the discipline was so long and severe, that the plot was discovered, and the contrivers of it very justly punished. The devils mentioned in the text are the names of those who were made to act in this farce upon the chamber-maid's and waiting-women, and they were generally so ridiculously named, that Dr. Harsnet, the author of the report, says, "you mistake them for the names of tapsters and jugglers."

54 She that herself will slice and disbranch
From her material sap.
That is, she who alienates, or rudely tears herself from the bonds of affection and duty, will wither and perish like a branch separated from that sap which supplies it with nourishment, and gives life to the matter of which it is composed.

55 Thou changed and self-cover'd thing.
This line has no very clear meaning as it stands, though Mr. Malone says, "The poet, I think, means—thou who hast put a covering on thyself, which nature did not give thee. The covering which Albany means is, the semblance and appearance of a fiend." But I rather incline to the following conjectural reading:—
Thou chang'd and self-converted thing.

56 Let pity not be believed!
Let it not be supposed that such a thing as pity exists, since such things can be acted.
57 Crown'd with rank fumiter.
Fumitory. By the old herbalists written fumittery.
58 She gave strange ciwils.
Ciwyle is from the French—a cast, or significant glance of the eye.

59 ——— For all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.
There would have been no danger in leaping upright, that is, perpendicularly erect, if such a leap were possible; for he would, of course, fall on the same spot. The sense requires that we should read outright.

60 From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.
Shakspeare has here used the word bourn to signify hill or cliff; but its common signification is a brook.

61 Horns whelk'd and wave'd like the enlarded sea.
Whelk'd signifies varied with protuberances, according to Mr. Steevens; but Mr. Malone says it means twisted, convolved, after the manner of the shell of the weal, or whilkw. The enlarded sea may be the troubled and uneven sea; but the folio reads enraged sea.

62 That follow handles his bow like a crow-keeper.
Pope, in his last edition, reads cow-keeper, but it would seem that crow-keeper was the proper word, as in some counties they still call a stuffed figure set up in a field, to keep the birds from the corn, a cow-keeper, as well as a scare-crow.

63 Ha! Goneril!—with a white beard!
Thus the folio; the quarto reads—"Ha! Goneril; ha! I legan," &c. This latter reading has been adopted by several editors, as the sense then appears to be improved; but we are not to look for sense and connexion in the abrupt utterances of madness.

64 The fitchew, nor the soiled horse.
The fitchew is another name for the pole-cat; a soiled horse is a horse that has been fed with hay and corn in the stable during the winter, and is turned out in the spring to take the first flush of grass. This makes him full of strength and spirit.

65 This is a good block.
This obscure passage, of which I fear no satisfactory explanation can be given, Mr. Steevens endeavours to elucidate thus:—"Upon the King's saying I will preach to thee, the poet seems to have meant him to pull off his hat, and keep turning it and feeling it, in the attitude of one of the preachers of those times, (whom I have seen represented in ancient prints,) till the idea of felt, which the good hat or block was made of, raises the stratagem in his brain of shoewing a troop of horse, with a substance soft as that which he held, and moulded between his hands. This makes him start from his preachment." To this, however, it may be objected that Lear is always, and I think correctly so, introduced bareheaded, and he is previously described as wandering about,— Crown'd with rank fumiter, and farrow weeds.

66 Keep out, cho vor'ye,
That is, I warn you. Edgar counterfeits the western dialect.
Be better suited.
That is, be better dressed, give up this disguise.

I am mightily abused.
That is, strangely deceived by appearances; in a mist of uncertainty.

That were the most, if he should husband you.
If he was your husband, you could say no more.

O save him, save him.
All the copies attribute this speech to Albany, but Mr. Theobald gives it, with great propriety, to Goneril.

O! it is he.
The folio reads, and with more propriety, is this he?

Enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms.
According to the old historians, Cordelia retired with victory from the battle, and replaced her aged father upon the throne; but in a subsequent one, fought after the death of the old king, she was defeated by the sons of Goneril and Regan, and, being taken, died in prison; or, according to Geoffrey of Monmouth, there destroyed herself. The poet found this in history, and was therefore willing to precipitate her death, which he knew had happened but a few years after.

Is this the promised end
Or image of that horror?

By the promised end, is not meant the conclusion which their affairs seemed to promise, but the end of the world. Kent, contemplating the terrible and unnatural events of the tragedy, inquires whether they are but heralds of the final destruction of all things, to which Edgar adds—or only a resemblance of that horror.

Fall and cease.
Albany seeing that Cordelia is dead, and feeling the misery to which Lear must survive, when the wretched father is aware of it, exclaimed spontaneously—fall and die at once, rather than linger in thy misery.

Nor man else.
The sense is,—no, neither am I welcome or any other man. All's cheerless, dark, and deadly.

And my poor fool is hang'd.
Mr. Steevens says that this is an expression of tenderness for his dead Cordelia, not for his fool, as some have thought, as poor fool was in the age of Shakspeare an expression of endearment. "That the thoughts of a father," he continues, "in the bitterest of all moments, while his favourite child lay dead in his arms, should recur to the anti who had formerly diverted him, has somewhat in it that I cannot reconcile to the idea of genuine sorrow and despair." Sir Joshua Reynolds, however, maintains the other side of the question, and says: "I confess, I am one of those who have thought that Lear means his fool, and not Cordelia. If he means Cordelia, then, what I have always considered as a beauty, is of the same kind as the accidental stroke of the pencil that produced the foam. Lear's affectionate remembrance of the fool in this place, I used to think, was one of those strokes of genius, or of nature, which are so often found in Shakspeare, and in him only. Lear appears to have a particular affection for this fool, whose fidelity in attending him, and endeavouring to divert his distress, seems to deserve all his kindness. 'Poor fool and knave,' says he, in the midst of the thunder-storm, 'I have one part in my heart that's sorry yet for thee.' It does not, therefore, appear to me to be allowing too much consequence to the fool, in making Lear bestow a thought on him, even when in still greater distress. Lear is represented as a good-natured, passionate, and rather weak old man; it is the old age of a cookered spoilt boy. There is no impropriety in giving to such a character those tender domestic affections, which would ill become a more heroic character, such as Othello, Macbeth, or Richard III."

The meaning of this line has been much debated, Mr. Malone coinciding with the view of it taken by Mr. Steevens.

Break heart: I pr'ythee, break.
This line is in the quarto given to Lear, but I think erroneously.

My master calls and I must not say no.
Some have supposed Kent to expire on the delivery of these words, and the second folio has the word dyes in the margin, at the end of the speech; but such an incident would be a very abrupt ending of the stout-hearted Kent; and his language is that of a despairing rather than a dying man. The old copies contain no marginal direction.
SCHLEGEL, in his consideration of this tragedy, rises in his enthusiasm from the critic to the poet, and eloquently exclaims:—"All that is most intoxicating in the odour of a southern spring, all that is languishing in the song of the nightingale, or voluptuous in the first opening of the rose, all alike breathe forth from this poem." But the touching story of the young and unfortunate lovers was not invented by Shakspere; he has told it beautifully, indeed, but it had been long popular in England, and a play upon that subject held possession of our stage before the appearance of his tragedy.

There has been considerable discussion which it is needless to investigate (as it merely relates to the choice of but slender probabilities), concerning the date of this play; but I will accept the chronology of Mr. Malone, and refer it to the year 1595. It is one of our poet's earliest productions, and derives a more than ordinary degree of interest from the highly credible supposition that it was his first effort in tragedy.

The story is to be found in Paynter's Palace of Pleasure, a work which Shakspere had read; but he seems to be indebted for his materials rather to Arthur Brooke's poem of The Tragical History of Romeus and Juliet, written first in Italien by Bondell, and now in English by Ar. Br. In the preface to this poem, published in 1562, Brooke mentions a play which he had seen upon the subject, and, according to his judgment, one of no mean merit, from which also it is probable that Shakspere derived some assistance. "I saw the same argument lately set forth on stage with more commendation, than I can looke for; (being there much better set forth than I have or can doe) yet the same matter penned as it is, may serve to lyke good effect, if the readers do brynghe with them lyke good mindes to consider it, which hath the more encoraged me to publishe it suche as it is." There was, therefore, a play on this subject upon the stage thirty years before the appearance of Shakspere's Romeo and Juliet, but it appears to have been permitted to sink into utter oblivion, and will, perhaps, never be discovered.

As it is, however, evident that Shakspere was largely indebted to Brooke for the materials of this tragedy, and as the poem is of considerable merit, it may be interesting to relate the few facts which have been ascertained concerning him. He was the author of many pieces in "divers kindes of styel;" this poem seems to be but one of several, of it he says:

\begin{align*}
\text{The elset of them loe} & \\
\text{I offer to the stake; my youthfull woorke,} & \\
\text{Which one reprocheful mouth might overthrowe;} & \\
\text{The rest, unlickt as yet, a whyle shall lurke,} & \\
\text{Tyll Tyme gave strength, to meeke and match in figh} & \\
\text{With Stauncher's whelps. Then shal they tell of stryfe} & \\
\text{Of noble tryumphes, and decedes of martial might;} & \\ \text{And shal give rules of chast and honest lyfe.} & \end{align*}

From this poem also we learn that he was unmarried, and in some introductory verses to a work published in 1563, called An Agreement of sundry places of Scripture, collected by Arthur Brooke, we are told that the author had perished by shipwreck. In a collection of epitaphes, &c., 1567, by George
The poet has been censured for making Juliet Romeo's second love, and Garrick, in his adaptation of the play, cut out all allusion to Rosaline, whom Romeo first loves, with as much earnestness, and even more extravagance than that which he displays in his subsequent passion for Juliet. But his love for Rosaline was a mere creation of fancy, the feverish excitement of a nature, to which love was a necessity; in her he worshipped an ideal of his own warm imagination, which painted her as an angel amongst women. Shakspeare also indulges a gentle satire on the too positive convictions of youth. Romeo declares his unalterable fidelity to Rosaline, and trusts that when his eyes admit that they have seen her equal, his tears will turn to fire, and burn the "transparent heretics;" and yet, in one brief hour from this time, even at the first glance, he transfers his love to Juliet. But we can easily forgive this fickleness; we feel angry at the haughty Rosaline, who "hath forsworn to love," for her cold rejection of the passionate affection of Romeo, and pleased that he has found one who receives and returns his passion. His poetic and fervent affection deserves the love which the generous Juliet bestows upon him; and how tender, how devoted, how utterly unselfish is her passion; how modestly beautiful and delicate is her apology for the immediate confession of it.

Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face; Else would a maiden blush repute my cheek, For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night, Fair would I dwell on form; fair, fair deny What I have spoke. But farewell compliment!

There is no affected coyness, no frigid conventionality in her demeanour; she is a child of nature yielding to the sweet impulses of a first love, and proclaiming her passion to the object of it with the unrestrained sincerity of an innocent and confiding spirit. Her impatience for the arrival of her husband on the evening of their nuptials has been censured as inconsistent with a becoming modesty, and not to be reconciled with the natural timidity of a young maiden, even of Juliet's warm and impetuous nature. Mr. Huzlitt has finely answered this objection; he says—"Such critics do not perceive that the feelings of the heart sanctify, without disguising, the impulses of nature. Without refinement themselves, they confound modesty with hypocrisy.” How admirably also does Shakspeare provide for every improbable circumstance, and not only takes away their improbability, but renders them highly consistent and natural; thus when Juliet drinks the potion which is to consign her, a living woman, to a loathsome tomb, she is made to work upon her own imagination by a vivid picture of the horrors of her incarceration in the vault where the festering remains of all her “buried ancestors are packed,” and at length swallows the potion in a paroxysm of terror.

The naturalness of the incident is also heightened by the first introduction of the Friar gathering medicinal herbs, and descending upon their nature and properties. It is likely that he who was so well acquainted with the uses of “baleful weeds and precious juic’d flowers” would employ them to carry out a difficult and dangerous stratagem. Shakspeare seldom omits an opportunity for the utterance of any instructive truth or moral maxim; he was the educator of his audiences, and it gives us a higher opinion of the playwright of his time to know that they were pleased with the introduction of severe moral truths into their amusements. The language of this Friar is full of them; how fine is the reflection which crosses his mind when going forth in the early dawn to gather his medicinal herbs, and how naturally it arises out of the situation:—

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but, strained from that fair use,
Revolts from true birth, stunting on abuse.

Mercutio is one of Shakspeare’s peculiarities, one of the favourite children of his sportive fancy, bred in the sunshine of his finely balanced mind. The mercurial and brilliant nature of the Veronese gentleman is full of that natural gladness, that “overflow of youthful life, wafted on over the laughing waves of pleasure and prosperity,” which few authors besides Shakspeare impart to their creations. Well might Dr. Johnson say that his comedy seems to be instinct.

It may certainly be wished that the language given to Mercutio was less coarse and sensual than it frequently is, but this licentiousness of conversation is consistent with the probable humour of a man in the summer of life, in perfect health, and devoid of all anxiety; and, however repugnant to modern ideas of delicacy and gentlemanly breeding, is perhaps a picture of the discourse of the young nobles and gallants of Shakspeare’s own time.

An instance of our poet’s power of strongly delineating a character in a few lines, is to be seen in his introduction of the poor apothecary, who is as original a conception, and during his brief scene, wins upon the sympathy of the audience, as much as the hero of the story himself.

This, like most of our poet’s tragedies, preaches a stern moral, it shews like a beacon-fire, to warn the young from un sanctioned love and idolatrous passion. Shakspeare probably intended to punish the lovers for the deception they both practise upon indulgent parents, while the parents are, through their children, scourged for their vain feuds and unreasonable hatred. The young die after the first brief hour of joy, the old live on, childless and desolate, to repent the blind malignity which has wrecked the happiness of them all.

SCENE—During the first four Acts at Verona; in the fifth at Mantua.
Romeo and Juliet.

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd pitious overthrows
Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, armed with Swords and Bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o'my word, we'll not carry coals.
Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.
Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.
Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.
Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.
Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.
Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.
Gre. To move, is—to stir; and to be valiant, is—to stand to it: therefore, if thou art moved, thou run'st away.
Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.
Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.
Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.
Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.
Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant:

when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.
Gre. The heads of the maids?
Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maid-enheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.
Gre. They must take it in sense, that feel it.
Sam. Mo they shall feel, while I am able to stand: and, 'tis known, I am a pretty piece of flesh.
Gre. 'Tis well, thou art not fish; if thou hast, thou hast been Poor John.

Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Enter Abram and Balthasar.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.
Gre. How? turn thy back, and run?
Sam. Fear me not.
Gre. No, marry: I fear thee!
Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.
Gre. I will frown, as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.
Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.
Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.
ACT I.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

SCENE I

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. Is the law on our side, if I say—ny?
Gre. No.
Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.
Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?
Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.
Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.
Abr. No better.
Sam. Well, sir.

Enter Benvolio, at a Distance.

Gre. Say—better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.
Sam. Yes, better, sir.
Abr. You lie.
Sam. Draw, if you be men. —Gregory, remember thy swashing blow.
[They fight.
Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; you know not what you do. [Beats down their Swords.

Enter Tybalt.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?
Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.
Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword, or manage it to part these men with me.
Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word,
As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
Have at thee, coward.
[They fight.

Enter several Partizans of both Houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with Clubs.

1st Cit. Clubs, bills, and partizans! strike! beat them down!
Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET, in his Gown; and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this? —Give me my long sword, ho!
La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?
Cap. My sword, I say!—Old Montague is come, and flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain, Capulet,—Hold me not, let me go.
La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—
Will they not hear?—what ho! you men, you beasts,—
That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins,
On pain of torture, from those bloody hands
Throw your mis-temper'd weapons to the ground,
And hear the sentence of your moved prince.—
Three civil braves, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet, and Montague,
Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave beaming ornaments,
To wield old partizans, in hands as old,
Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate:
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time, all the rest depart away:
You, Capulet, shall go along with me;
And, Montague, come you this afternoon,
To know our further pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.
Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

[Exeunt Prin., and Attend.; Cap., La. Cap.,
Tyn., Cit., and Serv.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?—
Speak, nephew, were you by, when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,
And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:
I drew to part them; in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;
Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn;
While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo! —saw you him
To-day?
Right glad I am, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipping'd sun
Peep'd forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;
Where,—underneath the grove of sycamore,
That westward rooteth from the city's side,—
So early walking did I see your son:
Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own,—
That most are busied when they are most alone,— Purs'd my humour, not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you imprompted him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends:
But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself— I will not say, how true—
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter Romeo, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes: So please you, step aside;
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would, thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt Mon. and Lady.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But now struck nine.

Rom. Ah me! sad hours seem long.

Ben. Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Rom. It was:—What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Ben. Not having that, which, having, makes them short.

Rom. In love?

Ben. Out—

Rom. Of love?

Ben. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Rom. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!

Where shall we dine?—O me!—What stray was here?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:—
Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing, of nothing first create!
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!—
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.5

Grievous of mine own lie heavy in my breast;
Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest
With more of thine: this love, that thou hast shown,
Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs:
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes:
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A chocking gull, and a preserving sweet.
Farewell, my coz. [Going.

Ben. Soft, I will go along;
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who she is you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?

Ben. Groan? why, no;
But sadly tell me, who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will:—
Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!—
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good marks-man!—And she's fair

I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss: she'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow, she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives unarm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:
O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.
Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste?
Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;
For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love; and, in that vow,
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.
Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.
Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.
Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.
Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more:
These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;
He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What douh her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget.
Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. And Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.
Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis, you liv'd at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?
Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before
My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.
Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.
Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.
The earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.
This night I hold an old accustomed feast,
Wherein I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you, among the store,

One more, most welcome, makes my number more.
At my poor house, look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven light:
Such comfort, as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparel'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house; here all, all see,
And like her most, whose merit most shall be:
Such, amongst view of many, mine, being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me;—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out,
Whose names are written there, [Gives a Paper.] and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.
[Exeunt Cap. and Par.

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here? It is written—that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned:—In good time.

Enter Benyollo and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning;
One desperate grief curseth another's languish:
Takethou somenew infection to thy eye,
Andthepoisonoftheoldwilldie.
Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what, I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is:
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipp'd, and tormented; and—Good-e'en, good fellow.
Serv. God gi' good e'en.—I pray sir, can you read?
Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.
Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book:
But I pray, can you read any thing you see?
Rom. Ay, if I know the letters, and the language.
Serv. Ye say honestly; Rest you merry!
Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read.

Signior Martino, and his wife and daughters; Country
Anselme, and his beauteous sisters; The lady widow of Vitru-vio; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces; Mercutio, and his brother Valentine; Mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; My fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio, and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio, and the lively Helena.

A fair assembly; [Gives back the Note.] Whither should they come?

Serv. Up.
Rom. Whither?
Serv. To supper; to our house.
Rom. Whose house?
Serv. My master's.
Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.
Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry. [Exit.

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st;
With all the admired beauties of Verona:
Go thither; and, with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.
Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!

And these,—who, often drown'd, could never die,—
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars!
One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match, since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,
Herself poised with herself in either eye:
But in those crystal scales, let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid.
That I will show you, shining at this feast,
And she shall scent show well, that now shows best.
Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,
But to rejoice in splendid of mine own. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her further to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead,—at twelve year old,—
I bade her come. —What, lamb! what, lady-bird!—
God forbid! where's this girl? —what, Juliet!

Enter Juliet.

Jul. How now, who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

La. Cap. This is the matter:—Nurse, give leave awhile,
We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again;
I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel.
Thou know'st, my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. 'Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen,

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,
And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,—

She is not fourteen: How long is it now
To Lammas-tide?

La. Cap. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,
Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen.
Susan and she,—God rest all Christian souls!—
Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God;
She was too good for me: But, as I said,
On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen,
That shall she, marry; I remember it well,
'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;
And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,—
Of all the days of the year, upon that day:
For I had then laid wormwood to my dung,
Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall,
My lord and you were then at Mantua:—
Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple
Of my dung, and felt it bitter, pretty fool!
To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dung.
Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need, I trow,
To bid me trudge.
And since that time it is eleven years:
For then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood,
She could have run and waddled all about.
For even the day before, she broke her brow:
And then my husband—God be with his soul!
'A was a merry man:—took up the child:
"Yea," quoth he, "dost thou fall upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backward, when thou hast more wit;
Wilt thou not, Jule?" and, by my holy dam,
The pretty wretch left crying, and said—"Ay!
"To see how, a jest shall come about!
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it; "Wilt thou not, Jule?"
quoth he:
And, pretty fool, it stinted, and said—"Ay.

La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam; Yet I cannot choose but laugh,
To think it should leave crying, and say—"Ay:—"
And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone;
A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly.

"Yea," quoth my husband, "fall'st upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward, when thou com'st to age;
Wilt thou not, Jule?" it stilled, and said—"Ay."

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd:
And I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very theme
I came to talk of:—Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,
I'd say, thou hast suck'd wisdom from thy tent.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now; younger than you,
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count,
I was your mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus then, in brief;—
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man,
As all the world—Why, he's a man of wax.

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast:
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,
And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;
Examine every married lineament,
And see how one another lends content;
And what obscure'd in this fair volume lies,
Find written in the margin of his eyes.

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
To beautify him, only lacks a cover:
The fish lives in the sea; and 'tis much pride,
For fair without the fair within to hide:
That book in many eyes doth share the glory,
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story;
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less? nay, bigger; women grow by men.

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move:
But no more deep will I endart mine eye,
Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serc. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and every thing in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee.—Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six Maskers, Torch-Bearers, and Others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
Or shall we we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such proximity?
We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance:
But, let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch,—I am not for this ambling;
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes,
With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead,
So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too soro encircled with his shaft
To soar with his light feathers; and so bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:
Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden love;
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boist'rous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;
Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down.—
Give me a case to put my visage in:

[Putting on a Mask.

A visor for a visor!—what care I,
What curious eye doth quote deformities?
Here are the beetle-brows, shall blush for me.

195
Act L.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner in,
But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels;¹⁰
For I am proverb’d with a grandsire phrase,— I’ll be a candle-holder, and look on,—
The game was ne’er so fair, and I am done.¹¹

Mer. Tut! dun’s the mouse, the constable’s own word.¹²

If thou art dun, we’ll draw thee from the mire³³
Of this (save reverence) love, wherein thou stick’st
Up to the ears.—Come, we burn day-light, ho.¹⁴

Rom. Nay, that’s not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay
We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
Take our good meaning; for our judgment sits
Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well, in going to this mask;
But ’tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed, asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see, queen Mab hath been with you.

She is the fairies’ midwife;³⁵ and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies¹
Athwart men’s noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners’ legs;
The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
The traces, of the smallest spider’s web;
The collars, of the moonshine’s wat’ry beams:
Her whip, of cricket’s bone; the lash, of film:
Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick’d from the lazy finger of a maid:
Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
Time out of mind the fairies’ coach-makers.
And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers’ brains, and then they dream of love:
On courtiers’ knees, that dream on court’st’s straight:
O’er lawyers’ fingers, who straight dream on fees:
O’er ladies’ lips, who straight on kisses dream;
Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,
Because their breaths with sweet-meats tainted are.

Sometimes she gallops o’er a courtier’s nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit:
And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig’s tail,
Tickling a parson’s nose as ‘a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice:
Sometimes she driveth o’er a soldier’s neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscades, Spanish blades;
Of health’s five fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear; at which he starts, and wakes;
And, being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab,
That plats the names of horses in the night;
And bakes the elf-locks in foul shlutish hairs.
Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learners them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage.
This, this is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace.

Thou talk’st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams;
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind, who woe’s
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger’d, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind, you talk of, blows us from ourselves;
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early; for my mind misgives,
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night’s revels; and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos’d in my breast,
By some vile forfeit untimely death:
But He, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail!—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.¹⁷

Scene V.—A Hall in Capulet’s House

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1st Serv. Where’s Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! be scrape a trencher!

2nd Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men’s hands, and they unwashed too,
’tis a foul thing.
Mr. P. Richings of Philadelphia as Mercutio

MER. O then I see Queen Mab hath been with you.

ROMEO AND JULIET
Act I, Sc. 4
1st Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate:—good thou, save me a piece of marchpane, and as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell.—Antony! and Poppan!

2nd Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

1st Serv. You are looked for, and called for, asked for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2nd Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.

Enter Capulet, &c. with the Guests, and the Maskers.

Cap. Gentlemen, welcome! ladies that have their toes
Unplagued with corns, will have a bout with you:—
Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all
Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty, she,
I'll swear, hath corns; Am I come near you now?
You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day,
That I have worn a visor; and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please;—'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone;
You are welcome, gentlemen!—Come, musicians, play.
A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls.

[Music plays, and they dance. More light, ye knaves; and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.—
Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet;
For you and I are past our dancing days:
How long is't now, since last yourself and I
Were in a mask?

2nd Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.

1st Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much:
'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

2nd Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder, sir; His son is thirty.

1st Cap. Will you tell me that?
His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!
Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiope's ear:
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!
So shows a snowy dove troping with crows,
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,
And, touching hers, make happy my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now? forsake it, sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague:—
Fetch me my rapier, boy:—What! dares the slave
Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

1st Cap. Why, how now kinsman? wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1st Cap. Young Romeo is't?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

1st Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone,
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all this town,
Here in my house, do him disparagement:
Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will; the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
An ill-becoming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest;
I'll not endure him.

1st Cap. He shall be endur'd;
What, Goodman boy!—I say, he shall;—Go to;—
Am I the master here, or you? go to.
You'll not endure him!—God shall mend my soul—
You'll make a mutiny among my guests!
You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

1st Cap. Go to, go to,
You are a saucy boy:—Is 't so, indeed?—
This trick may chance to seath you;—I know what.
You must contrive me! marry, 'tis time—
Well said, my hearts:—You are a prince; go: Be quiet, or—More light, more light, for shame!—
I'll make you quiet; What!—Cheerly, my hearts.

Tyb. Patience perforce with willful choleric meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting.
ACT I. ROMEO AND JULIET. SCENE V.

I will withdraw: but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall. [Exit. Rom. If I profane with my unworthy hand
This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this,—
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this;
For saints have hands that pilgrims hands do touch,
And palm to palm is holy palmers’ kiss.
Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?
Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.
Rom. O then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.
Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayer’s sake.
Rom. Then move not, while my prayer’s effect I take.
Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg’d.
[Exeunt.]

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.
Is it e’en so? Why, then I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:
More torches here!—Come on, then let’s to bed.
Ah, sirrah, [To 2nd Cap.] by my fay, it waxes late;
I’ll to my rest. [Exeunt all but Jul. and Nurse.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is you gentleman?
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.
Jul. What’s he, that now is going out of door?
Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.
Jul. What’s he, that follows there, that would not dance?
Nurse. I know not.
Jul. Go, ask his name:—if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.
Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
The only son of your great enemy.
Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.
Nurse. What’s this? what’s this?
Jul. A rhyme I learn’d even now
Of one I danc’d withal. [One calls within, Juliet. Nurse. Anon, anon:
Come, let’s away; the strangers all are gone.
[Exeunt.]}

Enter Chorus. Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir;
That fair, which love groan’d for, and would die,
With tender Juliet match’d, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is belov’d, and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
But to his foe suppos’d he must complain,
And she steal love’s sweet bait from fearful hooks:
Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
And she has much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-beloved any where:
But passion lends them power, time means to meet,
Tempering extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit.
ACT II.

SCENE I. — An open Place, adjoining Capulet's Garden.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart is here? Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

[He climbs the Wall, and leaps down within it.

Enter Benvolio, and Mercutio

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise; And, on my life, hath stolen him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall;

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too. — Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover! Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh, Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied; Cry but — Ah me! couple but — love and dove; Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word, One nick-name for her purblind son and heir, Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim, When king Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid. — He heareth not, stirreth not, he moveth not; The ape is dead, and I must conjure him. — I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes, By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip, By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh, And the demesnes that there adjacent lie, That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him; 'twould anger him To raise a spirit in his mistress' eireo Of some strange nature, letting it there stand Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down; That were some spite: my invocation Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name, I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among those trees, To be consort'd with the humorous night. Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark. Now will he sit under a medlar tree, And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit, As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone. — Romeo, good night; — I'll to my truckle-bed;

This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep: Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain To seek him here, that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Capulet's Garden.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound. — [Jul. appears above, at a window. But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks! It is the east, and Juliet is the sun! — Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, Who is already sick and pale with grief, That thou her maid art far more fair than she Be not her maid, since she is envious; Her vestal livery is but sick and green, And none but fools do wear it; cast it off. — It is my lady; O, it is my love: O, that she knew she were! — She speaks, yet she says nothing; What of that? Her eye discourses, I will answer it. — I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks: Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven, Having some business, do entreat her eyes To twinkle in their spheres till they return What if her eyes were there, they in her head? The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars, As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven Would through the airy region stream so bright, That birds would sing, and think it were not night. See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand! O, that I were a glove upon that hand, That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!

Rom. She speaks: —

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art As glorious to this night, as is the day To my poor heart, now hidden in the shade, As is a winged messenger of heaven Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him, When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds, And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo? Deny thy father, and refuse thy name:
Eomeo, although it be but thy name, that is my enemy;—
Thou art thyself though, not a Montague. What's Montague? 'Tis nor hand, nor foot, nor arm, nor face, nor any other part Belonging to a man. O, be some other name! What's in a name? that which we call a rose, By any other name would smell as sweet; So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd, Retain that dear perfection which he owes, Without that title:—Romeo, duff thy name; And for that name, which is no part of thee, Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word: Call me but love, and I'll be new baptized; Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night, So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name I know not how to tell thee who I am: My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself, Because it is an enemy to thee; Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred words Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound; Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How canst thou hither, tell me? and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb; And the place death, considering who thou art, If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls; For stony limits cannot hold love out: And what love can do, that dares love attempt; Therefore thy kinsmen are no lot to me. If they do see thee, they will murder thee. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye, Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet, And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. If I would not for the world, they saw thee here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight; And, but thou love me, let them find me here: My life were better ended by their hate Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to inquire; He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes. I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea, I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st, the mask of night is on my face; Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek, For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night. Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny What I have spoke; But farewell compliment! Dost thou love me? I know, thou wilt say—Ay; And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries, They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo, If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully: Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won, I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay, So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world. In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond; And therefore thou may'st think my 'haviour light: But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange. I should have been more strange, I must confess. But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was ware, My true love's passion: therefore pardon me; And not impute this yielding to light love, Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear, That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon That monthly changes in her circled orb, Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all; Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self, Which is the god of my idolatry, And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in thee, I have no joy of this contract to-night: It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden; Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be, Ere one can say—It lightens. Sweet, good night! This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath, May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet. Good night, good night! as sweet repose and rest Come to thy heart, as that within my breast.

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?
Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?
Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.
Jul. I gave thee mine before thou did'st request it: And yet I would it were to give again.
Rom. Would'st thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?
Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have:
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.
I hear some noise within; Dear love, adieu!
Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.
Rom. O blessed blessed night! I am afraid,
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet, above.
Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night, indeed.
If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world:
Nurse. [Within.] Madam.
Jul. I come, anon:—But if thou mean'st not well,
I do beseech thee,—
Nurse. [Within.] Madam.
Jul. By and by I come:—
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:
To-morrow will I send.
Rom. So thrive my soul,—
Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit.
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.
Love goes toward love, as school-boys from their books;
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

[Retiring slowly.
Re-enter Juliet, above.
Jul. Hiss! Romeo, his!—O, for a falconer's voice,
To lure this tassel-gentle back again!
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the crape where echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine
With repetition of my Romeo's name.
Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name;
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!
Jul. Romeo!
Rom. My sweet!
Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?
Rom. At the hour of nine.
Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till then.
I have forgot why I did call thee back.
Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.
Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Rememb'ring how I love thy company.
Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this.
Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone:
And yet no further than a wanton's bird;
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.
Rom. I would, I were thy bird.
Jul. Sweet, so would I:
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say—good night, till it be morrow.

[Exit.
Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!—
'Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell;
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.
Enter Friar Laurence, with a Basket.
Fri. The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning night,
Checkering the eastern clouds with streaks of light;
And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's wheels:
Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this osier cage of ours,
With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
What is her burying grave, that is her womb:

act ii. romeo and juliet. scene iii.
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural bosom find;
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace, that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but, strain’d from that fair use,
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse;
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometime’s by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence, and med’cine power:
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part;
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will;
And, where the worser is predominant,
Ful! soon the ranker death eats up that plant.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Good morrow, father!
Fri. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?—
Young son, it argues a distemper’d head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man’s eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unrest’d brain
Doth conjur his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:
Therefore thy carliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-rous’d by some distemp’rature;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-applied.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.
Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline.

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name’s woe.
Fri. That’s my good son: But where hast thou been then?
Rom. I’ll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
That’s by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;
Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart’s dear love is set,
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin’d, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage: When, and where, and how,
We met, we woo’d, and made exchange of vow;
I’ll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us this day.

Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!
Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men’s love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash’d thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears:
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash’d off yet:
If e’er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;
And art thou chang’d? pronounce this sentence then—

Women may fall, when there’s no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid’st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad’st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave, To lay one in, another out have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I love now,
Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. O, she knew well, Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come go with me,
In one respect I’ll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households’ rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely, and slow; they stumble, that run fast.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?—
Came he not home to-night?
Ben. Not to his father’s; I spoke with his man.
MR. WILLIAM FARREN AS ROMEO,
AND
MR. HOSKINS AS MERCUTIO

MER. Signor F. take care there is a Friend in Italy in your French shop.

ROMEO & JULIET.
Mercutio. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wenche, that Rosaline,
Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Benvolio. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mercutio. A challenge, on my life.

Benvolio. Romeo will answer it.

Mercutio. Any man, that can write, may answer a letter.

Benvolio. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Mercutio. Alas poor Romeo, he is already dead!
stabbed with a white wenches black eye; shot through the ear with a love song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt shaft; And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Benvolio. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mercutio. More than prince of cats, I can tell you.
O, he is the courageous captain of compliments.
He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist;
a gentleman of the very first house.—of the first and second cause: Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!—

Benvolio. The what?

Mercutio. The pox of such antick, lisping, affecting futasticoes; these new tuners of accents!—
By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man!—a very good whore!"—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-moy'ers, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bones, their bones!

Enter Romeo.

Benvolio. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mercutio. Without his roc, like a dried herring:—O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura, to his lady was but a kitchen-wench;—marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose.—Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slip. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Romeo. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mercutio. The slip, sir, the slip; Can you not conceive?

Romeo. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and, in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mercutio. That's as much as to say—such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hands.

Romeo. Meaning—to court'sy.

Mercutio. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Romeo. A most courteous exposition.

Mercutio. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Romeo. Pink for flower.

Mercutio. Right.

Romeo. Why, then is my pump well flowered.

Mercutio. Well said: Follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Romeo. O single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mercutio. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits fail.

Romeo. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.

Mercutio. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase,
I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: Was I with you there for the goose?

Romeo. Thou wast never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the goose?

Mercutio. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Romeo. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mercutio. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Romeo. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mercutio. O, here's a wit of cheverel, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Romeo. I stretch it out for that word—broad:
which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide
a broad goose.

Mercutio. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this driveling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his baublo in a hole.

Benvolio. Stop there, stop there.

Mercutio. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Benvolio. Thou would'st else have made thy tale large.

Mercutio. O, thou art deceived, I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my 203 tale: and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

_Rom._ Here's goodly gear!

_Enter Nurse and Peter._

_Mer._ A sail, a sail, a sail!

_Ben._ Two, two; a shirt, and a smock.

_Nurse._ Peter!

_Peter._ Anon?

_Nurse._ My fan, Peter.

_Mer._ Pr'ythee, do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer of the two.

_Nurse._ God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

_Mer._ God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

_Nurse._ Is it good den?

_Mer._ 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

_Nurse._ Out upon you! what a man are you?

_Rom._ One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar.

_Nurse._ By my troth, it is well said;—For himself to mar, quoth 'a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

_Rom._ I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for 'taint of a worse.

_Nurse._ You say well.

_Mer._ Yea, is the worst well? very well too, I' faith; wisely, wisely.

_Nurse._ If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

_Ben._ She will indite him to some supper.

_Mer._ A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

_Rom._ What hast thou found?

_Mer._ No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and no hare ere it be spent.

_An old hare hoar,
And an old hare hoar,
Is very good meat in Lent:
But a hare that is hoar,
Is too much for a score,
When it hoars ere it be spent._

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

_Rom._ I will follow you.

_Mer._ Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, lady, lady, lady. [Exit Nurse and Ben.]

_Nurse._ Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

_Rom._ A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.

_Nurse._ An 's speak anything against me, I'll take him down an 's are lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his frit-gills; I am none of his skin-smates._[32]—And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

_Pet._ I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

_Nurse._ Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

_Rom._ Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

_Nurse._ Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, lord, she will be a joyful woman.

_Rom._ What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

_Nurse._ I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

_Rom._ Bid her devise some means to come to shrift

This afternoon;
And there she shall at friar Laurence' cell
Be shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.

_Nurse._ No, truly, sir; not a penny.

_Rom._ Go to; I say, you shall.

_Nurse._ This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

_Rom._ And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:
Within this hour my man shall be with thee;
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair; Which to the high top-gallant of my joy Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell!—Be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.

Farewell!—Commend me to thy mistress.

_Nurse._ Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you, sir.

_Rom._ What say'st thou, my dear nurse?
ACT II.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

SCENE V.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse;
In half an hour she promis’d to return.
If she had been, she could not meet him:—that’s not so.—
O, she is lame! love’s heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun’s beams.

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you not hear him say—
Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee; my man’s as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, lord!—when ’twas a little prating thing,—O,—there’s a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay kayak aboard; but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the proper man; but, I’ll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the varsal world. Both not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, moeck! that’s the dog’s name. R. is for the dog. No; I know it begins with some other letter: and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit. Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

Pet. Anon?
Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before. [Exit. Nurse.

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Pet.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look’st thou sad?
Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou sham’st the music of sweet news
By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am a weary, give me leave awhile;
Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had!

Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I thy news:
Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesus, What hasto? can you not stay awhile?
Do you not see, that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me—that thou art out of breath?
The excuse, that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;
Say either, and I’ll stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, Is it good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice;
You know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man’s, yet his leg excels all men’s; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy,—but, I’ll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wench; serve God.—What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this did I know before;
What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I?
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back o’ t’ other side,—O, my back, my back!—
Beshrew your heart, for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I’faith, I am sorry that thou art not well;
Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous:—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is within
Where should she be? How oddly thou repli’st?
“Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?”

Nurse. O, God’s lady dear!
Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;
ACT III.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire; The day is hot, the Capulets abroad, And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl; For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows, that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, "God send me no need of thee!" and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, when, indeed! there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes; What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg, for quarrelling.

Romeo. Thy Jack like thee?

Merc. Here's such a coil;—Come, what says Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to friar Laurence' cell, There stays a husband to make you a wife: Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks, They'll be in scarlet straight at any news. Hie you to church; I must another way, To fetch a ladder, by the which your love Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark: I am the drudge, and toil in your delight; But you shall bear the burden soon at night. Go, I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune!—honest nurse, farewell.

Enter Juliet.

Juliet. Here comes the lady:—O, so light a foot Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint: A lover may bestride the gossamers That idle in the wanton summer air, And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Rom. Amen, even to the most holy confessor.

Fri. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words, Brags of his substance, not of ornament: They are but beggars that can count their worth; But my true love is grown to such excess, I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. Come, come with me, and we will make short work; For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone, Till holy church incorporate two in one. [Exeunt.
Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old ribband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

_Ben._ An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

_Mer._ The fee-simple? O simple!

_Enter Tybalt, and Others._

_Ben._ By my head, here come the Capulets.

_Mer._ By my heel, I care not.

_Tyb._ Follow me close, for I will speak to them.—Gentlemen, good den: a word with one of you.

_Mer._ And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

_Tyb._ You will find me apt enough to that, sir, if you will give me occasion.

_Mer._ Could you not take some occasion without giving?

_Tyb._ Mercutio, thou consortest with Romeo,—

_Mer._ Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort!

_Ben._ We talk here in the public haunt of men: Either withdraw into some private place, or reason coldly of your grievances, or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

_Mer._ Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze; I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

_Enter Romeo._

_Tyb._ Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man.

_Mer._ But I'll be hanged, sir, if he wear your livery: Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower; Your worship, in that sense, may call him—man.

_Tyb._ Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford No better term than this—Thou art a villain.

_Rom._ Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee Doth much excuse the appertaining rage To such a greeting:—Villain am I none; Therefore farewell; I see, thou know'st me not.

_Tyb._ Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me; therefore turn, and draw.

_Rom._ I do protest, I never injur'd thee; But love thee better than thou canst devise,

_Tyb._ Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

_Mer._ O calm, dishonourable, vile submission! A la stocata carries it away. [Draws.]

_Tyb._ Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

_Mer._ What would'st thou have with me?

_Tyb._ Good king of cats, nothing, but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilferer by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

_Tyb._ I am for you. [Drawing.]

_Rom._ Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

_Mer._ Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.]

_Rom._ Draw, Benvolio; Beat down their weapons:—Gentlemen, for shame Forbear this outrage;—Tybalt,—Mercutio— The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying In Verona streets:—cold, Tybalt;—good Mercutio. [Execut Tyb. and his Partizans.]

_Mer._ I am hurt:—

_A plague o' both the houses!—I am sped:—

_Is he gone, and hath nothing?_

_Ben._ What, art thou hurt?

_Mer._ Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough.—Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.]

_Rom._ Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

_Mer._ No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world:— A plague o' both your houses!—'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!—Why, the devil, came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

_Rom._ I thought all for the best.

_Mer._ Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both your houses! They have made worm's meat of me:

_I have it, and soundly too;—Your houses!_

[Execut Mer. and Ben.]

_Rom._ This gentleman, the prince's near ally, My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman,—O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.
Re-enter Benvolio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead;
That gallant spirit hath aspired to the clouds,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.
Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;
This but begins the woe, others must end.

Re-enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.
Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain!
Away to heaven, respective lenity,
And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!—
Now, Tybalt, take the "villain" back again,
That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul
Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep company;
Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,
Shalt with him hence.
Rom. This shall determine that.
[They fight; Tyb. falls.

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!
The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:—
Stand not amazed;—the prince will doom thee death,
If thou art taken:—hence!—be gone!—away!
Rom. O! I am fortune's fool!
Ben. Why dost thou stay?
[Exit Rom.

Enter Citizens, &c.

1st Cit. Which way ran he, that kill'd Mercutio?
Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?
Ben. There lies that Tybalt.
1st Cit. Up, sir, go with me;
I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; Montague, Capulet, their Wives, and Others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?
Ben. O noble prince, I can discover all
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl;
There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's child!
Unhappy sight! ah me, the blood is spil'd
Of my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true,
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.—
O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?
Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;
Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink
How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure:—All this—uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,—
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he yields
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast;
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
"Hold, friends! friends, part!" and, swifter than his tongue,
His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled:
But by-and-by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning; for, ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain;
And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly;
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague,
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life:
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's friend;
His fault concludes but, what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And, for that offence,
Immediately we do exile him hence;
I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a bleeding;
But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine:
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses,
Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.]
MISS VANDENHOFF AS JULIET.

JUL. Give me my Romeo, and when he shall die
Take him and cut him up in little stars
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with stars.
And pay so wreaths to the grave of love.

ROMEO AND JULIET
SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter JULIET.

JUL. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phlebus' mansion; such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night
That run-away's eyes may wink; and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of, and unseen!—
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties: or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night.—Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenheads:
Hood my unnam'd blood-bating in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown bold,
Think true love acted, simple modesty.
Come, night!—Come, Romeo! come, thou day in night!
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.—
Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd night,
Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.—
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoyed: So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse, with Cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue, that speaks
But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly eloquence.—
Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there, the cords,
That Romeo bade thee fetch?

NURSE. Ay, ay, the cords. [Throes them down.

JUL. Ah me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands?

NURSE. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!
We are undone, lady, we are undone!—
Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

NURSE. There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in me; all perjur'd

JUL. Can heaven be so envious?

NURSE. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot:—O Romeo! Romeo!—
Who ever would have thought it?—Romeo!—

JUL. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,
And that bare vowel I shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer, I.
If he be slain, say—I; or if not, no:
Brief sounds determine of my weal, or woe.

NURSE. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,—
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore blood;—I swooned at the sight.

JUL. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes! n'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!—

NURSE. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!—
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

JUL. What storm is this, that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd? and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-liev'd cousin, and my dearer lord?—
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
For who is living, if those two are gone?

NURSE. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banish'd.

JUL. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?

NURSE. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

JUL. O serpent heart, bid with a flow'ring face!
Did ever daguer heart keep so fair a care?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! woolish-ravening lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!—
O, nature! what hast thou to do in hell,
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?—
Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!

NURSE. There's no trust,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—
Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua vitae:—
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.
Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Bliister'd be thy tongue,
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Soe monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?—
But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband;
Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband:
All this is comfort; Wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's death,
That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;
But, O! it presseth to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
"Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;"
That—"banished," that one word—"banished,"
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts.57 Tybalt's death
Was whine enough, if it had ended there:
Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,—
Why follow'd not, when she said—Tybalt's dead,
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?58
But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
"Romeo is banished,"—to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead:—"Romeo is banished,—"
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe sound.—

Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse:
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.

Take up those cords:—Poor ropes, you are beguil'd,
Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd:
He made you for a highway to my bed;
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed;
And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo
To comfort you:—I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence' cell.

Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell.

[Execute.

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Romeo.

Fri. Romeo, come forth: come forth, thou fearful man;
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom?

Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—death:
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say—banishment.

Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banish'd;
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.
Hence-banish'd is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death:—then banishment
Is death mis-term'd: calling death—banishment,
Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
 Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,
Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment:
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,
Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not.—More validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet’s hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banished:
Fies may do this, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.
And sayst thou yet, that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix’d, no sharp-ground
knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne’er so mean,
But—banished—to kill me? banished?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess’d,
To mangle me with that word—banishment?
Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.
Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.
Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;
Adversity’s sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.
Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince’s doom;
It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.
Fri. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.
Rom. How should they, when wise men have no eyes?
Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.
Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:
Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might’st thou speak, then might’st thou tear
thy hair,
And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.
Fri. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself. [Knocking within.
Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick goans,
Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes.
[Knocking.
Fri. Hark, how they knock!—Who’s there?—
Romeo, ariso;
Thou wilt be taken:—Stay a while:—stand up;
[Knocking.
Run to my study:—By and by:—God’s will
What wilfulness is this?—I come, I come.
[Knocking.
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what’s your will?
Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;
I come from lady Juliet.
Fri. Welcome then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady’s lord, where’s Romeo?
Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.
Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress’ case,
Just in her case!
Fri. O woeful sympathy!
Piteous predicament!
Nurse. Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubber-
ing:—
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:
For Juliet’s sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?
Rom. Nurse!
Nurse. Ah, sir! ah, sir!—Well, death’s the end of all.
Rom. Spak’st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Dost she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain’d the childhood of our joy
With blood remov’d but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal’d lady to our cancell’d love?
Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;
And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.
Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name’s cursed hand
Murder’d her kinsman.—O tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.
Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out, thou art;
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:
Unseemly woman, in a seeming man!
Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir: Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!
Fri. Go hence: Good night; and here stands all your state;—

Either be gone before the watch be set, Or by the break of day disgust'd from hence: Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man, And he shall signify from time to time Every good hap to you, that chances here: Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good night.
Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me, It were a grief, so brief to part with thee: Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily, That we have had no time to move our daughter: Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly, And so did I;—Well, we were born to die.— 'Tis very late, she 'll not come down to-night: I promise you, but for your company, I would have been a-bed an hour ago.
Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo: Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow; To-night she 's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender Of my child's love: I think, she will be rul'd In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not. Giv'the you to her ere you go to bed; Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love; And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next— But, soft; What day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday? ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon, O' Thursday let it be;—o' Thursday, tell her, She shall be married to this noble earl:— Will you be ready? do you like this haste? We 'll keep no great ado;—a friend, or two: For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late, It may be thought we held him carelessly, Being our kinsman, if we revel much; Therefore we 'll have some half a dozen friends, And there an end. But what say you to Thursday? Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.
CHARLOTTE AND SUSAN CUMMINS AS ROMEO AND JULIET.
Cap. Well, get you gone:—O' Thursday be it then:
Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.—
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me, it is so very late, that we
May call it early by-and-by:—Good night.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Juliet’s Chamber.

Enter Romeo and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That piares’d the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night’s candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops;
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. You light is not day-light, I know it, I:
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet, thou need’st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta’en, let me be put to death;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I’ll say, you grey is not the morning’s eye,
’Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia’s brow;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vanity heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay, than will to go;—
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so,—
How is ’t, my soul? let’s talk, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, bie hence, be gone away;
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change eyes;
O, now I would they had chang’d voices too:
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light?—more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse?
La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death, As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him. Jul. What villain, madam? La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo. Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder; God pardon him! I do, with all my heart; And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart. La. Cap. That is, because the traitor murderer lives. Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.

'Wou'd none but I might venge my cousin's death! La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not: Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua, Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,— That shall bestow on him so sure a draught, That he shall soon keep Tybalt company: And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied. Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied With Romeo, till I behold him—dead— Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd:— Madam, if you could find out but a man To bear a poison, I would temper it; That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof, Soon sleep in quiet.—O, how my heart abhors To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him,— To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him! La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man. But now I'll tell thee joyful tiding, girl. Jul. And joy comes well in such a needful time: What are they, I beseech thy ladyship? La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child; One, who, to put thee from thy heaviness, Hath sort'd out a sudden day of joy, That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for. Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that? La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn, The gallant, young, and noble gentleman, The county Paris, at Saint Peter's church, Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride. Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter too, He shall not make me there a joyful bride. I wonder at this haste; that I must wed Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo. I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam, I will not marry yet! and, when I do, I swear, It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate, Rather than Paris:—These are news indeed! La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself, And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew; But for the sunset of my brother's son, It rains downright.— How now? a conduit, girl? what, still in tears? Evermore showering? In one little body Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind: For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea, Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is, Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs; Who,—raging with thy tears, and they with them,— Without a sudden calm, will overset Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife? Have you deliver'd to her our decree? La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks. I would, the fool were married to her grave! Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife. How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks? Is she not proud? doth she not count her bless'd, Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom? Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have: Proud can I never be of what I hate; But thankful even for hate, that is meant love. Cap. How now! how now, chop-logic! What is this? Proud,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you not;— And yet not proud;—Mistress minion, you, Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds, But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next, To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church, Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage! You tallow face! La. Cap. Fie, fie! what are you mad? Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees, Hear me with patience but to speak a word. Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch! I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thursday, Or never after look me in the face: Speak not, reply not, do not answer me; My fingers itch.—Wife we scarce thought us bless'd,
That God had sent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her, hilding!

\[Nurse.\] God in heaven bless her!—
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

\[Cap.\] And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,
Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

\[Nurse.\] I speak no treason.

\[Cap.\] O, God ye good den!\n\[Nurse.\] May not one speak?

\[Cap.\] Peace, you mumbling fool!
Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

\[La Cap.\] You are too hot.
\[Cap.\] God's bread! it makes me mad; Day, night, late, early,
At home, abroad, alone, in company,
Waking, or sleeping, still my care hath been
To have her match'd: and having now provided
A gentleman of princely parentage,
Of fair demeanors, youthful, and nobly train'd,
Stuff'd (as they say,) with honourable parts,
Proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man,—
And then to have a wretched puling fool,
A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer—"I'll not wed,—I cannot love,
I am too young,—I pray you, pardon me;"—
But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you:
Grace where you will, you shall not house with me;
Look to 't, think on 't, I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:
An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;
An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i' the streets,
For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust to 't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn. [Exit.

\[Jul.\] Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

\[La Cap.\] Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word;
Do as thou wilt for I have done with thee. [Exit.

\[Jul.\] O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth?—comfort me, counsel me.—
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!—
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.

\[Nurse.\] 'Faith, here 'tis: Romeo
Is banished; and all the world to nothing,
That he dares no'er come back to challenge you;
Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
O, he's a lovely gentleman!
Romeo's a dishout to him; an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye;\nAs Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

\[Jul.\] Speakest thou from thy heart?

\[Nurse.\] From my soul too;
Or else beshrew them both.

\[Jul.\] Amen!

\[Nurse.\] To what?

\[Jul.\] Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.
Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence' cell,
To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

\[Nurse.\] Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.

[Exit.

\[Jul.\] Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!
Is it more sin—to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to disparage my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor;
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.—
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
If all else fail, myself have power to die.

[Exit.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Friar Laurence’s Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris.

Fri. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.
Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.
Fri. You say, you do not know the lady’s mind;
Uneven is the course, I like it not.
Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt’s death,
And therefore have I little talk’d of love;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous,
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway
And, in his wisdom, hastens our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her tears;
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society:
Now do you know the reason of this haste.
Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow’d. [Aside.
Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter Juliet.

Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife!
Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.
Jul. What must be shall be.
Fri. That’s a certain text.
Par. Come you to make confession to this father?
Jul. To answer that, were to confess to you.
Par. Do not deny to him, that you love me.
Jul. I will confess to you, that I love him.
Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love me.
Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price,
Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.
Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus’d with tears.
Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;
For it was bad enough, before their spite.
Par. Thou wrong’st it, more than tears, with that report.
Jul. That is no slander, sir, that is a truth;
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander’d it.
Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—

—or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter,
now:—
My lord, we must entreat the time alone.
Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!—
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:
Till then, adieu! and keep this holy kiss.

Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so,
Come weep with me; Past hope, past cure, past help!

Fri. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief;
It strains me past the compass of my wits:
I hear thou must, and nothing must I prorogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear’st of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I’ll help it presently.

God join’d my heart and Romeo’s, thou our hands
And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal’d,
Shall be the label to another deed,
Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both:
Therefore, out of thy long-experience’d time,
Give me some present counsel; or, behold,
Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire; arbitrating that
Which the commission of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
If what thou speakest speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope,
Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry county Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to shun thyself;
Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop’st with death himself to escape from it;
And, if thou darest, I’ll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears;
SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet’s House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and Servant.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.—

[Exit Serv.

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2nd Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I’ll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2nd Serv. Marry, sir, ’tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he, that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.—

[Exit Serv.

We shall be much unfurnish’d for this time.—What, is my daughter gone to friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:

A peevish self-will’d harlotry it is.

Enter Juliet.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shift with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn’d me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition
To you, and your behests; and am enjoin’d
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,
And beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech you! Henceforward I am ever rule’d by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this;
I’ll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence’ cell;
And gave him what becom’d love: I might,
Not stepping o’er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on’t; this is well,—stand up:

This as it should be.—Let me see the county;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.—
Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,
To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her:—we’ll to church

[Exeunt Jul. and Nurse.

La Cap. We shall be short in our provision;
’Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife: Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her; I'll not to bed to-night; let me alone; I'll play the housewife for this once.—What, ho!— They are all forth: Well, I will walk myself To county Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow: my heart is wond'rous light, Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—But, gentle nurse, I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night; For I have need of many orisons To move the heavens to smile upon my state, Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What, are you busy? do you need my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries As are behoveful for our state to-morrow: So please you, let me now be left alone, And let the nurse this night sit up with you For, I am sure, you have your hands full all, In this so sudden business.

Jul. Farewell!—God knows, when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, That almost freezes up the heat of life; I'll call them back again to comfort me;— Nurse!—What should she do here? My dismal scene I needs must act alone. — Come, phial,— What if this mixture do not work at all? Must I of force be married to the county?— No, no;—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there. — [Laying down a dagger.

What if it be a poison, which the friar Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead; Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd, Because he married me before to Romeo? I fear, it is: and yet, methinks, it should not, For he hath still been tried a holy man: I will not entertain so bad a thought.—

How if, when I am laid into the tomb, I wake before the time that Romeo Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point! Shall I not then be stiled in the vault, To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in, And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes? Or, if I live, is it not very like, The horrible concite of death and night, Together with the terror of the place,— As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, Where, for these many hundred years, the bones Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd; Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth, Lies fest'rering in his shroud; where, as they say, At some hours in the night spirits resort,— Aack, aack! is it not like, that I, So early waking,—what with loathsome smells; And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth, That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;— O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught, Environed with all these hideous fears? And madly play with my forefathers' joints? And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud? And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone, As with a club, dash out my desperate brains? O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body Upon a rapier's point;—Stay, Tybalt, stay!— Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee. — [She throws herself on the Bed.

SCENE IV.—Capulet's Hall.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd; The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock;— Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica; Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go, Get you to bed; 'faith, you'll be sick to-morrow For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; What! I have watch'd ere now All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.
La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;
But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt La. Cap. and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-head, a jealous-head!—Now, fellow,
What's there?

Enter Servants, with Spits, Logs, and Baskets.

1st Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1st Serv.]

Sirrah, fetch drier logs;
Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2nd Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.

Cap. 'Mass, and well said; A merry whoreson man, ha,
Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 'tis day:
The county will be here with music straight,

[Music within.

For so he said he would. I hear him near:—
Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up;
I'll go and chat with Paris:—Hie, make haste,
Make haste! the bridegroom he is come already:
Make haste, I say! [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber; Juliet on the Bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!— Juliet!—
fast, I warrant her, she:
Why, laub!—wha, lady!—he, you sing-a-bed!—
Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—why, bride!—
What, not a word?—you take your pennyworths now;
Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The county Paris hath set up his rest,
That you shall rest but little. God forgive me, (Marry, and amen!) how sound is she asleep!
I needs must wake her:—Madam, madam, madam!
Aye, let the county take you in your bed;
He'll fright you up, 'tis faith.—Will it not be?
What, drest! and in your clothes! and down again!
I must needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady! Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some aqua-vita, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady Capulet

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

La. Cap. O me, O me!—my child, my only life,
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—
Help, help!—call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead; alack the day!

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Cap. Ha! let me see her:—Out, alas! she's cold;
Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Accursed time! unfortunato old man!

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris, with Musicians.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:
O son, the night before thy wedding day
Hath death lain with thy bride:—See, there she lies,

Flower as she was, deflowered by him.

Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded! I will die,
And leave him all; life leaving, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,
And doth it give me such a sight as this?

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most lamentable hour, that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage.

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe! O woful, woful day!
Most lamentable day! most woful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, woful day!
Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!
Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!—
O love! O life! not life, but love in death!
Cup. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!—
Uncomfortable time! why can'st thou now
To murder murder our solemnity?—
O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!—
Dead art thou, dead!—alack! my child is dead;
And, with my child, my joys are buried!
Fri. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep from death;
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was—her promotion;
For 'twas your heaven, she should be advanc'd:
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd,
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O, in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married, that lives married long;
But she's best married, that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church:
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.
Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments, to melancholy bells;
Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.
Fri. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with him;—
And go, sir Paris;—every one prepare.
To follow this fair corse unto her grave:
The heavens do low'r upon you, for some ill;
Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

1st Mus. 'Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.
Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up;
For, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit Nurse.

1st Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, "Heart's ease, heart's case;" O, an you will have me live, play—
"heart's ease."
1st Mus. Why "heart's case?"
Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays —"My heart is full of woe;" O, play me some merry dump, to comfort me.52
2nd Mus. Not a dump wo; 'tis no time to play now.
Pet. You will not then?
Mus. No.
Pet. I will then give it you soundly.
1st Mus. What will you give us?
Pet. No money, on my faith; but the gleek:
I will give you the minstrel.53
1st Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets: I'll re you, I'll fa you; Do you note me?
1st Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.
2nd Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit; I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger:—Answer me like men:
When gripping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music, with her silver sound;

Why, "silver sound?" why, "music with her silver sound?"

What say you, Simon Catling?
1st Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?
2nd Mus. I say—"silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too!—What say you, James Sound-
post?
3rd Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy! you are the singer:
I will say for you. It is—"music with her silver sound," because such fellows as you have seldom gold for sounding:—
Then music with her silver sound,
With speedy help doth lend redress.

[Exit, singing.

1st Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same?
2nd Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

[Exeunt.
ACT V.

SCENE 1.—Mantua.  A Street.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And, all this day, an unaccustomed spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead;
(Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think.)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah, me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter Balthasar.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.
Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill
Her body sleeps in Capels' monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives;
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.
Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,
And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.
Bal. Pardon me, sir, I will not leave you thus:
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.
Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do;
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?
Bal. No, my good lord.
Rom. No matter; Get thee gone,
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.
[Exit Bal.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to night.
Let's see for means:—O, mischief! thou art swift
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!
I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabout he dwells,—whom late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said—
An if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
O, this same thought did but fore-run my need
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?
Rom. Come hither, man.—I see that thou art poor.
Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding geer
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently, as hasty powder'll'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.
Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law
Is death, to any he that utters them.
Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness,
And fear'st to die? famine is in thy checks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.
Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.
Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.
Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men's souls,
Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou may'st not sell:
I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell! buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison; go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

      Enter Friar John.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

      Enter Friar Laurence.

Lau. This same should be the voice of friar John Welcome from Mantua: What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.
John. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,44
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting, that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Lau. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?
John. I could not send it,—here it is again,—
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Lau. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it strait
Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. [Exit.

Lau. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake;
She will beseech me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at her cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb!

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Church-Yard; in it, a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

      Enter Paris, and his Page, bearing Flowers and a Torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: Hence, and stand aloof;—
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,

Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,
(Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves.)
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure.

[Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy bridal bed:
Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain
The perfect model of eternity;
Fair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,
Accept this latest favour at my hands;
That living honour'd thee, and, being dead,
With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb!

[The Boy whistles.

The boy gives warning, something doth approach.
What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies, and true love's rites?
What, with a torch!—muffle me, night, a while.

[Retires.

      Enter Romeo and Balthasar with a Torch,
      Mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.
Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light: Upon thy life I charge thee,
Whatso'er thou hear'st or seeest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is, partly, to behold my lady's face:
But, chiefly, to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring; a ring, that I must use
In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone:—
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs:
The time and my intents are savage-wild;
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—Take thou that:
Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires.

Rom. Thou détective maw, thou womb of death,
ACT V.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

Scene III.

Gorg’d with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,
[Breaking open the Door of the Monument.
And, in despite, I’ll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish’d haughty Montague,
That murder’d my love’s cousin;—with which grief,
It is supposed, the fair creature died,—
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him—[Advances.
Stop thy unhallow’d toil, vile Montague;
Can vengeance be pursu’d further than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these gone;
Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth,
Heap not another sin upon my head,
By urging me to fury:—O, be gone!
By heaven, I love thee better than myself;
For I come hither arm’d against myself:
Stay not, be gone!—live, and hereafter say—
A madman’s mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurings,
And do attach thee as a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy.
[They fight.

Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch.
[Exit Page.

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.]—If thou be merciful,
Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.

Rom. In faith, I will:—Let me peruse this face;—
Mercutio’s kinsman, noble county Paris:—
What said my man, when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think,
He told me, Paris should have married Juliet:
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so?—O, give me thy hand,
One writ with me in sour misfortune’s book!
I’ll bury thee in a triumphant grave,—
A grave? O, no; a lantern, slaughter’d youth,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence;56 full of light.
Death, lie thou there, by a dead man inter’d.56

[Advances Par. in the Monument.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Have they been merry? which their keepers call
A lightning before death: O, how may I
Call this a lightning?—O, my love! my wife!
Death, that hath suck’d the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer’d; beauty’s ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death’s pale flag is not advanced there.—
Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O, what more favour can I do to thee,
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
That unsubstantial death is amorous;
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that, I will still stay with thee,
And never from this palace of dun night
Depart again; here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chamber-maids; O, here
Will I set up my everlasting rest;
And shake the yoke of insipid stars
From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you,
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!—
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Here’s to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true apothecary!
Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.
[Dies.

Enter, at the other end of the Churchyard, Friar Laurence, with a Lantern, Crow, and Spade.

Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves?—Who’s there?
Who is it that consorts, so late, the dead?
Bal. Here’s one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yond’, that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless sculls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capels’ monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there’s my master,
One that you love.

Fri. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.
ACT V.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

SCENE III.

Bal. I dare not, sir: My master knows not, but I am gone hence; And fearfully did menace me with death, If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone:—Fear comes upon me; O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here, I dreamt my master and another fought, And that my master slew him.

Fri. Romeo?— [Advances.

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains The stony entrance of this sepulchre?— What mean these masterless and gory swords To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enters the Monument.

Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord? I do remember well where I should be, And there I am:—Where is my Romeo? [Noise within.

Fri. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep; A greater Power than we can contradict Hath thwarted our intents; come, come away: Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead; And Paris too; come, I'll dispose of thee Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:

Stay not to question, for the watch is coming; Come, go, good Juliet,—[Noise again.] I dare stay no longer. [Exit.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not stay:— What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's hand? Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end:— O churl! drink all; and leave no friendly drop, To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips; Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them, To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him. Thy lips are warm!

1st Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy:—Which way?

Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief. O happy dagger! [Snatching Rom.'s. Dagger. This is thy sheath; [Stabs herself.] there rust, and let me die. [Falls on Rom.'s. Body, and dies.

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

1st Watch. The ground is bloody; Search about the churchyard:

Go, some of you, who e'er you find, attach. [Exeunt some.

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;— And Juliet bleeding; warm, and newly dead, Who here hath lain these two days buried.— Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some others search;— [Exeunt other Watchmen.

We see the ground whereto these woes do lie; But the true ground of all these piteous woes, We cannot without circumstance desery.

Enter some of the Watch, with Balthasar.

2nd Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the churchyard.

1st Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Enter another Watchman, with Friar Laurence.

3rd Watch. Hero is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps: We took this mattock and this spade from him, As he was coming from this churchyard side. 1st Watch. A great suspicion; Stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up, That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

La. Cap. The people in the street cry—Romeo, Some—Juliet, and some—Paris; and all run, With open outcry, toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears?

1st Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris slain; And Romeo dead; and Juliet dead before, Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

1st Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man; With instruments upon them, fit to open These dead men's tombs.
Cap. O, heavens!—O, wife! look how our daughter bleeds!
This dagger hath mista'en,—for, lo! his house
Is empty on the back of Montague,—
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter’s bosom.57

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up,
To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;
Grief of my son’s exile hath stopp’d her breath:
What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is this,
To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;
And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death: Mean time, forbear
And let mishap be slave to patience.—
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus’d.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
And she, there dead, that Romeo’s faithful wife:
I married them; and their stolen marriage day
Was Tybalt’s dooms-day, whose untimely death
Borne’st the new-made bridegroom from this city;
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin’d.
You—to remove that siege of grief from her,— Betroth’d, and would have married her perforce,
To county Paris:—Then comes she to me;
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means
To rid her from this second marriage,
Or, in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor’d by my art,
A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her

The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo,
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow’d grave,
Being the time the potion’s force should cease.
But he which bore my letter, friar John,
Was staid by accident; and yesternight
Return’d my letter back: Then all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred’s vault
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
But, when I came, (some minute ere the time
Of her awakening,) here untimely lay
The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience:
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But (as it seems,) did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy: And, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrifice’d, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.—
Where ’s Romeo’s man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet’s death;
And then in post he came from Mantua,
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father;
And threaten’d me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.—
Where ’s the county’s page, that rais’d the watch?—

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady’s grave;
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
Anon, comes one with light to open the tomb;
And by and by, my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar’s words,
Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes—that he did buy a poison
Of a poor ’pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.—
Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!—
See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!
And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen:—all are punish'd.
Cap. O, brother Montague, give me thy hand:
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.
Mon. But I can give thee more:
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That, while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set,
As that of true and faithful Juliet.
Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity!
Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;
The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head:
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
For never was a story of more woe,
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.]
NOTES TO ROMEO AND JULIET.

Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels.

Before carpets came into use, it was the custom to strew rooms with rushes; the stage also was anciently strewed with rushes; an allusion to this practice is contained in Decker's Gal's Hornbook, 1609: — "On the very rushes where the comedy is to daunce."

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

An allusion to an old proverbial saying, which recommends the reveller to give over or retire when the game is at the best, before fatigue or disgust begin.

Dun's the mouse, is a proverbial phrase which may be met with in many of our old comedies, its exact meaning appears to have been lost; Mr. Malone hazards the following conjecture: — "Dun is the mouse, I know not why, seems to have meant, Peace, be still!" and hence it is said to be the constable's own word, who may be supposed to be employed in apprehending an offender, and afraid of alarming him by any noise.

In the comedy of Patient Grissel, 1603: — "What, Babulo! say you. Heere, master, say I, and then this eye opens; yet don is the mouse, lie still. What, Babulo! says Grissel. Anone, say I, and then this eye looks up, yet done I snug againe."

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire.

An allusion to some old forgotten game which probably gave rise to the proverbial expression, Dun is in the mire, used when a person was at a stand, or in any difficulty. Dun is, no doubt, the name of a horse or ass. In an old collection of satires, epigrams, &c., there is the following allusion to this game: —

At shrou-gerute, venter point, or crosse and pile,
At leaping o'er a Midsummer bone-fier,
Or at the drawing dun out of the mire.

Come, we burn day-light, ho.

An expression of reproof used when candles are lighted in the day-time. Mercutio means they are wasting their torches by burning them in the street, where they are not needed, instead of using them at the ball of the Capulets; as before the invention of chandlereus, all rooms of state were illuminated by flambeaux held in the hands of attendants, and, sometimes, even by the guests themselves.

She is the fairies' midwife.

Queen Mab is styled the fairies' midwife, because it was her supposed custom to steal new-born babies in the night, and to leave others in their place. Her illusions were practised on persons in bed or asleep, for she not only haunted women in child-bed, but is here represented by Shakspeare as the incubus or nightmare. The sense would be more clearly expressed, if we read the fairy midwife.

16 Drawn with a team of little atomies.

Atomie is merely an obsolete term for atom. In Drayton's Nymphidia, there is the following remarkably similar description of Queen Mab's chariot; but it is believed that the Nymphidia was written several years after this tragedy:

Four nimble knots the horses were,
Their harnesses of gossamere,
Fly cranion, her charioteer,
Upon the coach-box getting:
Her charriot of a snail's fine shell,
Which for the colours did excell,
The fair Queen Mab becoming well,
So lively was the limning:
The seat the soft wool of the bee,
The cover (gallantly to see)
The wing of a py'd butterfly,
I trov, 'twas simple trimming:
The wheels compos'd of cricket's bones,
And daintily made for the nonce,
For fear of rattling on the stones,
With thistle down they shod it.

17 Strike drum.

Here adds the folio: "They march about the stage, and serving-men come forth with their napkince." The intention, no doubt, was, that they should quit the stage marching in a frolicsome manner, as Prince Henry and Poina enter the tavern in Eastcheap. See Henry IV., Part I.

18 Remove the court-cupboard.

A court-cupboard was a piece of furniture put to the same use as the modern sideboard. In Monstrous D'Olive, 1606, by Chapman:—"Here shall stand my court-cupboard with its furniture of plate."

19 Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane.

Marchpane was a confection in high esteem in Shakspeare's time. They were of a kind of cake or biscuit made of filberts, almonds, pistachio-nuts, pine-kernels, and sugar of roses, with a small proportion of flour.

20 You are a princox, go.

A princox, is a coxcomb or conceited person.

21 Kissing her.

To kiss a lady was, in Shakspeare's time, merely a form of salutation; an act of courtesy, not of affection.

22 Enter chorus.

This Chorus, which was written since the first edition, is a very superfluous addition. It conduces nothing to the progress of the play, but merely relates what is already known, or what the next scene will show; and the relation contains no moral sentiment or poetical beauty.

23 When King Cophetua he'd the beggar-maid.

An allusion to an old ballad entitled, King Cophetua and the Beggar-maid: it is preserved in the first volume of Percy's Reliques:—

Here you may read, Cophetua,
Though long time fanece-fed,
Compelled by the blinded boy
The beggar for to wed.

24 The humorous night.

Humorous was used by Chapman, Drayton, and other contemporaries of Shakspeare, in the sense of humid.

25 O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night.

Mr. Theobald proposes to read, as glorious to this sight, as the simile is then more consistent; but Dr Johnson objects to the alteration.

26 Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.

Mr. Malone has altered the punctuation of this line, placing the accent after though, instead of after thyself; the meaning then is:—thou art thyself, then, well-disposed to me, and not one of the Montagues, i.e. enemies to my house.

27 No let to me, i.e. no stop or hindrance to me.

28 Is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire?

The word grandsire is, of course, not addressed to Benvolio, but is a whimsical apostrophe to his ancestors.

29 These fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-moi's.

Shakspeare here makes Mercutio ridicule the affected use of French phrases among people of fashion. The poet appears always to have entertained a great contempt for foppery. Dr. Johnson says that the words pardonnez moi, became the language of doubt or hesitation among men of the sword, when the point of honour had grown so delicate, that no other mode of contradiction would be endured.

30 Thisbé, a grey eye or so.

In Shakspeare's time a grey eye was considered very beautiful; but a grey eye undoubtedly meant what we now call a blue eye. Thus, in Venus and Adonis:

Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth.

That is, the windows or lids of her blue eyes, and yet, in the same poem, the eyes of Venus are called grey.

31 There's a French salutation to your French slop.

Slops are large loose trowsers; we must presume that Romeo wore loose trunks, and that Mercutio indulges in a sarcasm at wearing dresses made from French fashions.

32 I am none of his skains-mates.

Skains-mates is supposed to mean cut-throat companions; from skuin, a knife or dagger.
NOTES TO ROMEO AND JULIET.

1. Will you pluck your sword out of his pitcher by the ears?

Pitcher is probably a corruption of pilch, which means a covering or scabbard.

2. How nice the quarrel.

That is, how slight, unimportant, trivial.

3. Say thou but I.

In Shakspeare's time the affirmative particle ay, was usually written I, and here it is necessary to retain the old spelling, in order to preserve the quible.

4. Dove-feather'd raven.

In the old editions:— "Ravenous dove, feather'd raven."

5. That one word—banished,

Hath slain ten thousand Tybalds.

That is, Romeo's banishment affects me more than the loss of ten thousand such relations as Tybalt.

6. Which modern lamentation might have mov'd.

Modern is used by Shakspeare as synonymous with common or slight. It was, probably, in his time, confounded in colloquial language with moderate.

7. My concept'd lady.

The word concealed has reference not to the person, but to the condition of the lady.

8. And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.

That is, torn to pieces with thine own weapons.

That is, a bold offer; I will at once promise you my child's love.

The stage direction in the first edition is, "Enter Romeo and Juliet, at a window." In the second quarto, "Enter Romeo and Juliet afoot." They probably appeared on the balcony or platform which was erected at the back of the old English stage.

11. Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree.

"This," says Mr. Steevens, "is not merely a poetical supposition. It is observed of the nightingale, that if undisturbed, she sits and songs upon the same tree for many weeks together."

12. Some say, the lark and toad'toad change eyes;

O, now I would they had changed voices too!

The toad having very fine eyes, and the lark very ugly ones, gave rise to a common saying that the toad and the lark had changed eyes. Juliet's meaning is, I wish it was the voice of the toad we hear, for it would then be night and you could remain; but as it is the voice of the lark, it denotes morning, and your safety requires that you must leave me. Dr. Johnson says, "this tradition of the toad and lark I have heard expressed in a rustic rhyme:—"

To hear'n I'd fly

But that the toad beguill'd me of mine eye."

13. Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.

The hunts-up was the name of the tune anciently played to awaken the hunters, and to collect them together; a hunts-up also signified a morning song to a new-married couple the day after their marriage, and is here used in that sense. In Drayton's Polyolbion, song 15th,—

But hunts-up to the morn the feather'd sylvans sing. Again in the play of Orlando Furioso,

To play him hunts-up with a point of war,

I'll be his minstrelly with my drum and fife.

14. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.

Dr. Johnson says that Juliet's equivocations are rather too artful for a mind disturbed by the loss of a new lover.

15. Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye.

Sir T. Hammer reads keen for green.

16. Unconstant toy, i.e. caprice, or wavering resolution.

17. Become love, i.e. becoming love.

18. Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica.

"Shakspeare has here," says Mr. Steevens, "imputed to an Italian nobleman and his lady all the petty solitudes of a private house, concerning a provincial entertainment. To such a bustle our author might have been witness at home; but the like anxieties could not well have occurred in the family of Capulet, whose wife, if Angelica be her name, is here directed to perform the office of a housekeeper."

19. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time.

A mouse-hunt is a term used in the midland counties for a weasel, whose intrigues, like those of the cat-kind, are usually carried on during the night. Lady Capulet alludes to her husband's early gayeties. "Cat after kinde, good mouse-hunt," is a proverb in Heywood's Dialogue, 1598.

20. O, play me some merry dump, to comfort me.

A dump was usually a mournful song; in this scene we have—

And doleful dumps the mind oppress.

But as a merry dump is mentioned, some commentators have supposed that dump was a name for any kind of melody. It is probable that Peter, in his blundering way, says, play me some merry sad music; in the same manner as the mechanics' play in A Midsummer Night's Dream, is called merry and tragical! tedious and brief. There is no doubt whatever that dumps meant serious tunes. At the end of The Secretary's Studie by Thomas Gainsford, 1616, is a poem of forty-seven stanzas, called A Durne or Passion. It begins thus,

I cannot sing; for neither have I voyce,
Nor is my minde nor matter musicall;
My barren pen hath neither form nor choyce;
Nor is my tale or talesman comicall.

No money, on my faith; but the gleek: I will give you the minstrel.

To gleek, is to scoff or mock: to give the minstrel is a punning phrase for giving the gleek; minstrels and jesters being anciently called gleekmen or glijmen.

One of our order, to associate me.

When a friar went abroad from his convent, he had a companion assigned by the superior, and they were thus a witness of each other's conduct, and a check upon any impropriety.

This vault a feasting presence.

A feasting presence is a banqueting-room. A presence also denoted any public room that was honoured by royalty. In The Two Noble Gentlemen, by Beaumont and Fletcher, a servant speaking of his master, says:

His chamber hung with nobles like a presence.

Again, in Westward for Smelts, "the king sent for the wounded man into the presence."

Lie thou there, by a dead man interred.

Romeo having resolved on self-destruction, alludes to himself as already dead. This extravagant conceit might have been suggested to Shakspere by Middleton, who in his comedy of Blunt Master Constable, thus expresses the same idea:

The darkest dungeon which spite can devise
To throw this carcasse in, her glorious eyes
Can make as lightsome as the fairest chamber
In Paris Louvre.

This dagger hath mistaken,—for, lo! his house
Is empty on the back of Montague,—
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

This passage is apparently corrupt, for old Capulet is made to say that the house of the dagger (i.e. the seabard,) is both empty on the back of Romeo, and sheathed in his daughter's bosom. If we read, it mis-sheathed, instead of is mis-sheathed, we make the passage intelligible. It appears that the dagger was anciently worn behind the back; in The longer thou livest, the more Fool thou art, 1570:

Thou must wear thy sword by thy side,
And thy dagger handomely at thy backe.

Some shall be pardon'd and some punished.

This line refers to the judgments the prince intended to pronounce on the parties implicated in the tragical event which had just occurred; and in Arthur Brooke's poem we learn that the Nurse was afterwards banished for concealing the marriage, Romeo's servant pardoned because he only obeyed the orders of his master, the poor Apothecary hanged for selling the poison, and the Friar pardoned and permitted to retire to a hermitage two miles from Verona, where:

Fyve years he lived an hermite, and an hermite dyd he dye.

Cymbeline.

Cymbeline appears to have been written in the full strength of our poet's maturity; it is attributed to the year 1605, and supposed to have been composed immediately after King Lear, and just before Macbeth. At such a period of Shakspere's life, he could scarcely give to the world any feeble production, and we consequently find this play to be full of exquisite poetry, and also to contain the sweetest and most tender female character ever drawn, even by his pen. Still there is, in Cymbeline, a singular confusion of times and customs, and the play is full of anachronisms. The rude ancient Britons of the time of Augustus Caesar are pictured as possessing the manners and luxuries of the Elizabethan period. The polished court of Cymbeline is altogether out of place in Britain at such a time—it is an incredibility; so also is the description of Imogen's chamber, with its tapestry of silk and silver so "rarely and exactly wrought;" and the chimney-piece, with its carving of "chaste Diana bathing," its ornaments of silver, and the golden cherubins with which the roof is fretted. Such things were seen in England in Shakspere's time; but were never dreamed of in Augustus Caesar's. In the fifth act also, Posthumus, when condemned to death, is told by his gaoler that "he shall fear no more tavern bills." Schlegel makes a graceful apology for these errors; but it does not greatly mend the matter to argue the poet's faults into beauties. In Shakspere, as a poet and philosopher, we have implicit faith; but very little, as an antiquarian or historian. He has too luxuriant and wild an imagination to be bound by the rigid fetters of historic truth. It may be said that King Lear is equally open to these objections; but Lear is scarcely more than a creature of the poet's imagination, only connected with history by dim and remote traditions; and the time of Cymbeline is one of which we have more ample and far more certain records. It is not worthy of the critic, or honourable to the memory of the illustrious poet, to point out his beauties only, and remain for ever silent respecting the blemishes in his great works; by following such a course, a false school of criticism and feeling is nursed into active being, and the errors of the dead are reproduced in the writings of the living; for men are gradually led to imitate that which they have been taught blindly to reverence. The vision of Posthumus in his prison is not only inconsistent with the rest of the play, but feebly written, and not worthy of the genius of Shakspere. Let those who would accuse me of heresy in this remark, turn to and peruse it at once; it is, however, just to the poet to say, that it has been suspected of being an interpolation by some other hand, and Mr. Collier thinks it possible that the vision is part of some older play upon the same subject, which Shakspere adopted and placed in his production entire.

Our poet's object, however, in writing this play was a noble one; the vindication of the character of woman from the lewd aspersions of thoughtless and unprincipled men. It is not Imogen alone, whom the Italian profligate, Lachino, slanders—it is her whole sex; of his attempt upon her chastity, he says to her husband:—"I durst attempt it against any lady in the world." Impossible as it may appear to pure and innocent minds, men still live who are ignorant and sensual enough to make the same vile boast. Among the pleasure-seeking gallants of that lascivious age, when seduction and duelling were by a large number of that class considered mere venial vices, if not graceful accomplishments, such unbelievers in the purity of woman were, perhaps, not uncommon; and in this play the bard read them a stern reproof from the stage.
Imogen is a personification of woman; woman enthroned in the holy temple of her pure and chaste affections, rejecting the tempter of her honour with the bitterest scorn and loathing, and enduring wrong and suffering with the most touching patience and sweetness. The gentler sex should be always grateful to the memory of our great Shakspere, for his genius did sweet homage to their character; he invests his female creations with all that is most pure and generous in humanity, picturing them, indeed, as beautiful to the eye, but a thousand times more acceptable to the heart. There is a moral dignity about his women, a holy strength of affection, which neither suffering nor death can pervert, that elevates them above the sterner nature of man, placing them on an equality with angels. The adventures of Imogen are like a beautiful romance; her flight after her banished husband, her wretchedness and forlorn condition when informed that he believes her false and has given order for her death; her assumption of boy's attire, in which disguise she wanders among the mountains, at point to perish from hunger; her meeting with her disguised brothers in the cave; her supposed death, and recovery, and finally, her discovery of her repentant husband, and throwing herself, without one reproach, upon his bosom—are all beautifully portrayed. Imogen is, indeed, a pattern of connubial love and chastity.

Posthumus is an irritable and impatient character; his love for Imogen is rather a selfish one, or he would not have been so easily persuaded that she was false; it undergoes some purification in his trouble, and we scarcely sympathise with him until his repentance of his rashness. He then doubts his own worthiness, and feeling that he has wickedly presumed to direct the wrath of Heaven and punish its offenders, exclaims:

Gods! if you
Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never
Had lived to put on this.

A reflection we all might advantageously make, when contemplating revenge for any real or supposed injury.

Iachimo is an unconfirmed villain, as dishonest as Iago, but not so devilish, for he has the grace to repent of his treachery; he tries to compound with his conscience, and satisfy it with Jesuitical sophistries. He is ready to attest the truth of his false assertions with an oath, and does absolutely swear to Posthumus that he had the jewel from the arm of Imogen, which is literally true, but morally a perjury, because he stole the bracelet, and led the husband to suspect that it was given him in the gratification of an infamous affection. Iachimo equivocates; Iago would have had no compunction about the matter, but have sworn to any falsehood, however injurious and diabolical, without mental reservation. Iachimo's confession in the last scene is too wordy and tediously protracted, and the humility of it is scarcely in accordance with his character, as portrayed in the earlier scenes of the play.

These three characters are the principal ones of that group to which the attention is chiefly attracted; Cymbeline, himself, is represented as weak and vacillating—a merc tool of his wicked queen, who says: "I never do him wrong, but he does buy my injuries;" rewards her for them, as if they were benefits: this woman is utterly villainous without any redeeming quality, unless affection for her foolish and unprincipled son be called one; it is seldom that Shakspere draws such characters, for he loves rather to elevate than to depress humanity, and to paint in sunbeams, than to people twilight with forms of darkness. Perhaps she is introduced to bring the sweet character of the pure and loving Imogen into greater prominence, by the power of contrast. The conduct of Cymbeline is unaccountable, save in a timid and wavering mind; having beaten the Romans by accident, he is amazed at his own temerity, and, in the very triumph of victory, makes a peace, and promises to pay to Caesar the tribute which he had gone to war to avoid.

Cloten has been said to be so singular a character, and possessed of qualities so contradictory, that he has been supposed to form an exception to Shakspere's usual integrity in copying from nature.
I cannot see in what particular he is irreconcilable to humanity; he is a knave, a braggart, and a fool in most matters, but that is no reason why he should not possess some shrewd common sense ideas occasionally. Nothing can be happier than his defiance of the Roman ambassador:—"If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute." Quaintly expressed, certainly, but unanswerable as an argument, it is not Cloten’s want of sense, but his outrageous vanity, that makes him ridiculous. He is not half so great a contradiction to himself, as is Polonius, in Hamlet, and yet we can easily understand the peculiarities of that character; the weakness of age consuming the strength of maturity, folly encroaching on wisdom; in Cloten, it is folly consuming common sense. Shakspere requires no justification to the observing mind; few men are either all wisdom or all folly; the writings of the wisest man of whom we have any record, are bitter condemnations of his own actions, eloquent laments for time misspent in voluptuous abandonments. I doubt not that the poet drew Cloten from a living model; singularities, in works of fiction, are generally copied from life—they are flights too bold for most authors to take without precedent. Respecting the character of Cloten, Hazlitt has remarked:—

“that folly is as often owing to a want of proper sentiments, as to a want of understanding.”

In the delineation of the two princes, Guiderius and Arriragus, Shakspere propagates a doctrine which will find many opponents in the present day: he infers that there is an innate royalty of nature, a sovereignty in blood in those born of a kingly stock; and the young princes brought up as simple rusties, and born of a weak uxorious father, are represented as feeling their high birth so strongly, that it impels them to acts of heroism. Belarius says:—

Their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prince it much
Beyond the trick of others.

Their old protector is a courtier, turned hermit from an acute sense of wrong and a consequent disgust of civilized life, and his language is that of one who has seen the world to satiety: he is full of bitter reflections on princes and their courts, where oft a man gains ill report for doing well, and “must court’sey at the censure.” He bears some resemblance to the moralising Jaques, all natural objects suggest to him lofty and religious reflections, and the low-roofed cave which makes him bow as he issues from it to greet the rising sun, instructs him to adore its great Creator. Jaques had been a libertine in his youth, and Belarius is guilty of a dishonourable and wicked revenge, by bringing up the sons of Cymbeline as rustics; the father had injured him, but he had robbed the children of their birthright.

That part of the plot which relates to the adventures of Imogen was suggested to Shakspere by “the tale told in the fishwife of Stand on the Green,” in an old story-book entitled Westward for Smelts, in which the story is given in an English dress, and the original of Imogen is a Mrs. Dorrill, who, in the language of the author, was “a creature most beautifull, so that in her time there were few found that matched her, (none at all that excelled her,) so excellent were the gifts that nature had bestowed on her. In body she was not onely so rare, and unparalled, but also in her gifts of minde; so that this creature it seemed that Grace and Nature strove who should excell each other in their gifts toward her.” This story was in its turn taken from the Decameron of the Italian novelist Bocasio.

According to Holinshed, Cymbeline, or Kimbeline, began his reign in the nineteenth year of that of Augustus Caesar, and the play commences in or about the twenty-fourth year of Cymbeline’s reign, which was the forty-second of that of Augustus, and the sixteenth of the Christian era.

SCENE—Sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Italy.
Cymbeline.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden behind Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1st Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers;
Still seem, as does the king’s.¹

2nd Gent. But what’s the matter?

1st Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom
He purpos’d to his wife’s sole son, (a widow,
That late he married,) hath refer’d herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman: She’s wedded;
Her husband banish’d; she imprison’d: all
Is outward sorrow; though, I think, the king
Be touch’d at very heart.

2nd Gent. None but the king?

1st Gent. He, that hath lost her, too: so is the queen,
That most desir’d the match: But not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king’s looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2nd Gent. And why so?

1st Gent. He that hath miss’d the princess, is a thing
Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her,—alack, good man!—
And therefore banish’d) is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2nd Gent. You speak him far.

1st Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;²
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.

2nd Gent. What’s his name, and birth?

1st Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: His father
Was call’d Sicilius, who did join his honour,
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan;
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
Ho serv’d with glory and admir’d success;
So gain’d the sur-addition, Leonatus;
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars o’ the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which their father
(Then old and fond of issue,) took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas’d
As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus;
Beceds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber:
Puts him to all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as ’twas minister’d; and
In his spring became a harvest: Liv’d in court,
(Which rare it is to do,) most prais’d, most lov’d:
A sample to the youngest; to the more mature,
A glass that feasted them; and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish’d,—her own price
Proclaims how she esteem’d him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read,
What kind of man he is.

2nd Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, ’pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?

1st Gent. His only child.
He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old,
I’ the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stolen; and to this hour, no guess in knowledge
Which way they went.

2nd Gent. How long is this ago?

1st Gent. Some twenty years.

2nd Gent. That a king’s children should be so convey’d!
So slackly guarded! And the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

1st Gent. Howsoe’er ’tis strange,
SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter, After the slander of most step-mothers, Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus, So soon as I can win the offended king, I will be known your advocate: marry, yet The fire of rage is in him; and 'twere good, You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience Your wisom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness, I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:— I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying The pangs of barr'd affections; though the king Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

[Exit Queen.

Imo. O Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband, I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing, (Always reserv'd my holy duty,) what His rage can do on me: You must be gone; And I shall here abide the hourly shot Of angry eyes; not comforted to live, But that there is this jewel in the world, That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress! O, lady, weep no more; lest I give cause To be suspected of more tenderness Than doth become a man! I will remain The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth. My residence in Rome at one Philario's; Who to my father was a friend, to me Known but by letter: thither write, my queen, And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you: If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure:— Yet I'll move him [Aside. To walk this way: I never do him wrong, But he does buy my injuries, to be friends; Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave As long a term as yet we have to live, The loathliness to depart would grow: Adieu

Imo. Nay, stay a little: Were you but riding forth to air yourself, Such parting were too petty. Look here, love This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart; But keep it till you woo another wife, When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another?— You gentle gods, give me but this I have, And sear up my embraces from a next With bonds of death!—Remain thou here [Putting on the Ring. While sense can keep it on? And sweetest, fairest, As I my poor self did exchange for you, To your so infinite loss; so, in our trifles I still win of you: For my sake, wear this; It is a manacle of love; I'll place it Upon this fairest prisoner. [Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.

Imo. O, the gods! When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!

If, after this command, thou frustrate the court With thy unworthiness, thou diest: Away! Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you! And bless the good remainders of the court! I am gone. [Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death More sharp than this.

Cym. O disloyal thing, That should'st repair my youth; thou hastest A year's age on me! I beseech you, sir, Harm not yourself with your vexation; I Am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That might'st have had the sole son of my queen!
CYMBELINE.

ACT I.

Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a puttock. 6
Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; would'st have made my throne
A seat for baseness.
Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.
Cym. O thou vile one!
Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus:
Your bred him as my play-fellow; and he is
A man worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.
Cym. What!—art thou mad!
Imo. Almost, sir: Heaven restore me!—'Would I were
A ne'er-hold'st daughter! and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.

Cym. Thou foolish thing!—
They were again together: you have done
[To the Queen.
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.
Queen. 'Beseech your patience:—Peace,
Dear lady daughter, peace:—Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort
Out of your best advice. 6
Cym. 'Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly!

Enter Pisario.

Queen. Fye!—you must give way:
Here is your servant.—How now, sir? What news?
Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.
Queen. Ha!
No harm, I trust, is done?
Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.
Queen. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.—
To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!—
I would they were in Africk both together;
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back.—Why came you from my master?
Pis. On his command: He would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these notes:
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When it pleas'd you to employ me.
Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,
He will remain so.
Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk a while.
Imo. About some half hour hence,
I pray you, speak with me: you shall, at least,
Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A public Place.

Enter Cloenus, and Two Lords.

1st Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: Where air comes out, air comes in:
there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.
Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it—
Have I hurt him?
2nd Lord. No, faith; not so much as his patience.
[Aside.
1st Lord. Hurt him? his body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.
2nd Lord. His steel was in debt: it went o'the backside the town.
[Aside.
Clo. The villain would not stand me.
2nd Lord. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.
[Aside.
1st Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.
2nd Lord. As many inches as you have oceans:
Puppies!
[Aside.
Clo. I would, they had not come between us.
2nd Lord. So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.
[Aside.
Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!
2nd Lord. If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.
[Aside.
1st Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: She's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.
2nd Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.
[Aside.
Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber: 'Would there had been some hurt done! 237
2nd Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. [Aside.
Clo. You'll go with us?
1st Lord. I'll attend your lordship.
Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.
2nd Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Imogen and Pisania.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' the haven,
And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,
As offer'd mercy is.7 What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis. 'Twas, "his queen, his queen!"

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I!—
And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul still'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou should'st have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;

crack'd them, but
To look upon him; till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisania,
When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,
With his next 'vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him,
How I would think on him, at certain hours,
Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear
The shes of Italy should not betray
Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him,
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
To encounter me with orisons,2 for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father
And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,

Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them despatch'd—

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir: I have seen him in Britain:
he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furished, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own,) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.3

French. And then his banishment:——

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those, that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality.
But how comes it, he is to souporn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life:——

Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman; whom
I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine:
How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o’er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity, you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller: rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others’ experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I offend not to say it is mended,) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. ‘Tis true, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: ’twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation,) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman’s opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her’s our of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her admirer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison,) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Brittany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagone mistress is dead, or she’s outpriz’d by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen, too: so, of your brace of unprizable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier, to convince the honour of my mistress; if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signor, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress: make her go back, even to the yielding; had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare, thereon, pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o’er-values it something: But I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you’re worthy of, by your attempt.

Iach. What’s that?

Post. A repulse: Though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more; a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. ’Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour’s, on the approbation of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserved.

230
Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: But, I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return:—Let there be covenants drawn between us: My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking; I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods it is one:—If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too. If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours:—provided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us:—only, thus far you shall answer. If you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise,) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain; lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve: I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exeunt Post. and Iach.

Fren. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelia.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;
Make haste: who has the note of them?
1st Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch.—[Exeunt Ladies. Now, master doctor; have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleases thy highness, ay: here they are, madam; [Presenting a small Box. But I beseech your grace, (without offence; My conscience bids me ask;) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death;
But, though slow, deadly?

Queen. I do wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question: Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learnt me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so, That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded, (Unless thou think'st me devilish,) is't not meet That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but none human,) To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their act; and by them gather Their several virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.—[Enter Pisario.

Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him [Aside Will I first work: he's for his master, And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisario?— Doctor, your service for this time is ended; Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you madam; But you shall do no harm. [Aside. Queen. Hark thee, a word.—[To Pis.

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think, she has Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature: Those she has, Will stupid and dull the sense awhile: Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and dogs;
Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect; and I the truer, So to be false with her.
Mr. T. Mead as Iachimo.

LACH: All of her, that is out of door, most rich.
And if she be furnished with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird; and I
Have lost the wager.

Cymbeline. Act 4, Sc. 1.
MISS LAURA ADDISON AS IMOGEN.

IMO: So far I read ahead:

But even the very middle of my heart
Is warmed by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
You use it wisely, worthy wife!
These words to God I say, and man—find
In all that I can do.

CYMBELINE
Cymbeline.

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false; A foolish suitor to a wedded lady, Thaat hath her husband banish'd;—O, that husband! My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen, As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable Is the desire that's glorious: Blessed be those, How mean so'er, that have their honest wills, Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? Fie!

Enter PisaniO and Iachimo.

Pi's. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome; Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam? The worthy Leonatus is in safety, And greets your highness dearly.

[Presents a Letter.

Imo. You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich!

[Aside.

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare, She is alone the Arabian bird; and I Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend! Arm me, audacity, from head to foot! Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight; Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.] He is one of the noblest men, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust, Lleonatus.

So far I read aloud: But even the very middle of my heart Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully. You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I Have words to bid you; and shall find it so, In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.— What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones Upon the number'd beach? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?'

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be i'the eye; for apes and monkeys, 'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way, and...
Contemn with mows the other: Nor i'the judgment;
For idiots, in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definite: Nor i'the appetite;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos'd
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allure'd to feed.

Iomo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will,
(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
That tub both fill'd and running,) ravening first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Iomo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam; well:—'Beech, you, sir,
Desire [To Pts.]

My man's abode where I did leave him: he
Is strange and peevish. 16

Pts I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit Pts.

Iomo. Continues well my lord? His health, 'beeseekh you?

Iach. Well, madam.

Iomo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so game some: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Iomo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home: he furnaces
The thick sighs from him; whiles the jolly Briton (Your lord, I mean,) laughs from 's free lungs, cries, "O!"

Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish for Assured bondage?"

Iomo. Will my lord say so?

Iach. Ay, madam; with his eyes in flood with laughter.

It is a recreation to be by,
And hear him mock the Frenchman: But, heavens
know,
Some men are much to blame.

Iomo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he: But yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much

In you,—which I count his, beyond all talents,— Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Iomo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Iomo. Am I one, sir?

You look on me; What wreck discern you in me,
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What!
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I'the dungeon by a snuff?

Iomo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—but
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Iomo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me; 'Pray you, (Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Than to be sure they do: For certainties
Either are past remedies; or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born,) discover to me
What both you spur and stop. 17

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the fealer's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here: should I (damn'd then,) Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood, as
With labour;) then lie peeping in an eye,
Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit,
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Iomo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inelin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That, from my mutest conscience, to my tongue,
Charms this report out.

Iomo. Let me hear no more.

Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery, 18
Would make the great'st king double! to be parter'd
With tomboys, hir'd with that self-exhibition —
Which your own coffers yield! with discas'd ventures,
That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff;
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she, that bore you, was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. — Reveng'd! How should I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me
Livo like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets;
Whiles he is vaulting variable rumps,
In your despite, upon your purse? — Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure;
More noble than that runagate to your bed;
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close, as sure.

Imo. — What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Imo. Away! — I do condemn mine ears, that have
So long attended thee. — If thou wert honourable,
Thou would'st have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st; as base, as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady, that disdains Thee and the devil alike. — What ho, Pisanio! —
The king my father shall be made acquainted Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
As in a Roman stew, and to expound His beastly mind to us; he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all. — What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say;
The credit, that thy lady hath of thee,
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect goodness
Her assur'd credit! — Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this, to know if your alliance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: And he is one
The truest manner'd: such a holy witch,
That he enchant'st societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. — You make amends.

Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear him
Made me to fam you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir: Take my power i' the court
For yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. — Pray, what is 't?

Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
(Th' best feather of our wing) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'Tis plate, of rare device; and jewels,
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage: May it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. — Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. — O, no, no.

Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By length'ning my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. — I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow?

Iach. — O, I must, madam: Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have outstood my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. — I will write.

Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept
And truly yielded you: You are very welcome.

[Exeunt.]
ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cloten, and Two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack upon an up-cast, to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on 't: And then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1st Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2nd Lord. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have ran all out. [Aside.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths: Ha?

2nd Lord. No, my lord; nor [Aside.] crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction? 'Would, he had been one of my rank!

2nd Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.

Clo. I am not more vexed at anything in the earth,—A pox on 't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother: every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

2nd Lord. You are a cock and eapen too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on. [Aside.

Clo. Sayest thou?

1st Lord. It is not fit, your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that: but it is fit, I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2nd Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1st Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger! and I not know on 't!

2nd Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. [Aside.

1st Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1st Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit, I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in 't?

1st Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2nd Lord. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate. [Aside.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian: What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2nd Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt Clo. and first Lord.

That such a crafty devil as his mother Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st! Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd; A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer, More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st stand, To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Bed-chamber; in one Part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her Bed; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are weak:—

Fold down the leaf where I have left: To bed: Take not away the taper, leave it burning; And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock, I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly. [Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods! From fairies, and the tempters of the night, Guard me, beseech ye! [Sleeps. LACH. from the Trunk.

LACH. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense Repairs itself by rest: Our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd The chastity he wounded.—Cypieren, How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily!
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch! But kiss; one kiss!—Rubies unparagon’d, How dearly they do’t!—"Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: The flame o’ the taper Bows toward her; and would under-peepe her lids, To see the enclosed lights, now canopied Under these windows: White and azure, lae’d With blue of heaven’s own tint.—But my design? To note the chamber:—I will write all down:— Such, and such, pictures:—There the window:— Such The adorning of her bed:—The arras, figures, Why, such, and such:—And the contents o’the story,— Ah, but some natural notes about her body, Above ten thousand meander moveables Would testify, to enrich mine inventory: O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her! And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off;— [Taking off her Bracelet. As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard!— 'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience does within, To the madding of her lord. On her left breast A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops I’ the bottom of a cowslip: Here’s a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make: this secret Will force him think I have pick’d the lock, and ’tien The treasure of her honour. No more.—To what end? Why should I write this down, that ’s rivetted, Screw’d to my memory? She hath been reading late The tale of Tereus; here the leaf’s turn’d down, Where Philomel gave up;—I have enough: To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. Swift, swift, you dragons of the night!—that dawning May bare the raven’s eye: I lodge in fear; Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here. [Clock strikes. One, two, three,—Time, time [ Goes into the Trunk The Scene closes. SCENE III.—An Ante-Chamber adjoining Imogen’s Apartment. Enter Clooten and Lords. 1st Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace. Clo. It would make any man cold to lose. 1st Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship; You are most hot, and furious, when you win. Clo. Winning would put any man into courage: If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough: It’s almost morning, is’t not? 1st Lord. Day, my lord. Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o’ mornings; they say, it will penetrate. Enter Musicians. Come on; tune: If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we’ll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I’ll never give o’er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider. SONG. Hark! hark! the lark at heaven’s gate sings, And Phoebus ’gins arise, His steeds to water at those springs On chalice’d flowers that lies;’t And winking Mary-buds begin To ope their golden eyes; With every thing that pretty bin: My lady sweet, arise; Arise, arise. So, get you gone: If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs; and cats-guts, nor the voice of unpaved cumbuch to boot, can never amend. [Execunt Musicians. Enter Cymbeline and Queen. 2nd Lord. Here comes the king, Clo. I am glad, I was up so late; for that’s the reason I was up so early: I do not choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother. Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter? Will she not forth? Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice. Cym. The exile of her minion is too new; She hath not yet forgot him: some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, And then she’s yours. Queen. You are most bound to the king; Who lets go by no vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter: Frame yourself To orderly soliciets; and be friendly With aptness of the season: make denials.
Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your dismissal tends.
And therein you are senseless.
Olo. Senseless? not so.

.Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
The one is Caius Lucius.
Cym. A worthy fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: We must receive him
According to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself his goodness forespent on us
We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress,
Attend the queen, and us; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym., Queen, Lords, and Mess.

Olo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave ho!—

[Knocks.

I know her women are about her; What
If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold
Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up
Their deer to the stand of the stealer; and 'tis gold
Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief;
Nay, sometime, hangs both thief and true man: What Can it not do, and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me; for I yet not understand the case myself.
By your leave. [Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?
Olo. A gentleman.
Lady. No more?
Olo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.
Lady. That's more
Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
Can justly boast of: What's your lordship's pleasure?
Olo. Your lady's person: Is she ready?
Lady. Ay,
To keep her chamber.

ACT II.

Olo. There's gold for you; sell me your good report.
Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you
What I shall think is good?—The princess——

Enter Imogen.

Olo. Good-morrow, fairest sister: Your sweet hand.
Imo. Good-morrow, sir: You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Olo. Still, I swear, I love you.
Imo. If you but said so, twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Olo. This is no answer.
Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent,
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: 'tis faith,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy
To your best kindness; one of your great knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Olo. To leave you in your madness, twere my sin:
I will not.
Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Olo. Do you call me fool?
Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal: and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
(To accuse myself) I hate you: which I had rather
You felt, than make 't my boast.

Olo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
(One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o' the court,) it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties,
(Yet who, than he, more mean?) to knit their souls
(On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot;
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o' the crown; and must not soil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A biding for a livery, a sphere's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

Iamo. Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to his sty'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!
Iamo. He never can meet more mischance, than
To be but nam'd of thee. His neatest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer,
In my respect, than all the airs above thee,
Were they all made such men.—How now,
Pisanio?

Enter Pisanio.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—
Iamo. To Dorothy, my woman, hee thee presently:—
Clo. His garment?
Iamo. I am sprightled with a fool: Frighted, and anger'd worse: Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel, that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's: 'shrew me,
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: confident I am,
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it:
I hope, it be not gone, to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Iamo. I hope so: go, and search. [Exit. Pis.
Clo. You have abus'd me:—
His neatest garment?
Iamo. Ay; I said so, sir.
If you will make't an action, call witness to 't.
Clo. I will inform your father.
Iamo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent. [Exit.
Clo. I'll be reveng'd:—
His neatest garment?—Well. [Exit.

Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would, I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold; her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi. What means you make to him? post. Not any; but abide the change of time;
Quake in the present winter's state; and wish
That warmer days would come: In these fear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission throughly: And, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
(Statist though I am none, nor like to be,) That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Caesar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline
(Now mingled with their courage) will make known
To their approvers, they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Enter Iachimo.

Phi. See Iachimo?
Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Hero are letters for you.
Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis a very like.
Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is 't not?
Too dull for your good wearing?

* TILE.
If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

* POST.
The stone 's too hard to come by.

* TILE.
Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

* POST.
Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.

* TILE.
Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

* POST.
If you can make 't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is yours: If not, the soul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

* TILE.
Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You 'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

* POST.
Proced.

* TILE.
First, her bed-chamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not: but, profess,
Had that was well worth watching,) It was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd,
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on't was—

* POST.
This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

* TILE.
More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

* POST.
So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

* TILE.
The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

* POST.
This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

* TILE.
The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: Her androns
(I had forgot them,) were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

* POST.
This is her honour!—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and praise
Be given to your remembrance,) the description
Of what is in her chamber, nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

* TILE.
Then, if you can,
*[Pulling out the Bracelet.
Be pale;* I beg but leave to air this jewel: See!—
And now 'tis up again: It must be married
To that your diamond; I 'll keep them.

* POST.
Jove!—
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

* TILE.
Sir, (I thank her,) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: She gave it me, and said,
She priz'd it once.

* POST.
May be, she pluck'd it off,
To send it me.

* TILE.
She writes so to you? doth she?

* POST.
O, no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this too;
*[Gives the Ring.
It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on 't:—Let there be no honour,
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,
Where there's another man: The vows of women
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing:—
O, above measure false!

* PHI.
Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable, she lost it; or,
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stolen it from her.

* POST.
Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by't:—Back my ring;—
Render to me some corporal sign about her, More evident than this; for this was stolen.

Jach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears. 'Tis true;—nay, keep the ring—'tis true: I am sure, She would not lose it: her attendants are All sworn, and honourable:—They induce'd to steal it! And by a stranger?—No, he hath enjoy'd her: The cognizance of her incontinency Is this,—she hath bought the name of whose thus dearly.— There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient: This is not strong enough to be believ'd Of one persuaded well of——

Post. Never talk on't, She hath been colt'd by him. Jach. If you seek For further satisfying, under her breast (Worthy the pressing,) lies a mole, right proud Of that most delicate lodging: By my life, I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger To feed again, though full. You do remember This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold, Were there no more but it.

Jach. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your arithmetic: never count the turns;

Once, and a million!

Jach. I'll be sworn,—

Post. No swearing. If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie; And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny Thou hast made me cuckold.

Jach. I will deny nothing.

Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limbmeal!

I will go there, and do't; 'tis the court; before Her father:—I'll do something——

[Exit.

Phi. Quite besides The government of patience! You have won: Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath He hath against himself.

Jach. With all my heart. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women Must be half-workers? We are bastards all; And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools Made me a counterfeit: Yet my mother seem'd The Dian of that time: so doth my wife The nonpareil of this.—O vengeance, vengeance! Mo of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd, And pray'd me, oft, forbearance; did it with A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her As chaste as unsum'd snow:—O, all the devils!— This yellow Iachino, in an hour,—was 't not?— Or less,—at first: Perchance he spoke not; but, Like a full-acorn'd bear, a German one, Cry'd, oh! and mounted: found no opposition But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out The woman's part in me! For there's no motion That tends to vice in man, but I affirm It is the woman's part: Be it lying, note it, The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers; Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain, Nice loungings, slanders, mutability, All faults that may be nam'd, may, that hell knows, Why, hers, in part, or all; but, rather, all: For ov'n to vice They are not constant, but are changing still One vice, but of a minute old, for one Not half so old as that. I'll write against them. Detest them, curse them:—Yet 'tis greater skill In a true hate, to pray they have their will: The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords, at one Door; and at another, Caius Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us?

Luc. When Julius Caesar (whose remembrance yet Lives in men’s eyes; and will to ears, and tongues, Be theme, and hearing ever,) was in this Britain, And conquer’d it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, (Famous in Caesar’s praises, no whit less, Than in his feats deserving it,) for him, And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee lately Is left untender’d.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Caesars, Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself; and we will nothing pay, For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity, Which then they had to take from us, to resume We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege, The kings your ancestors; together with The natural bravery of your isle; which stands As Neptune’s park, ribbed and paled in With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters; With sands, that will not bear your enemies’ boats, But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of conquest Caesar made here; but made not here his brag Of, came, and saw, and overcome: with shame (The first that ever touch’d him,) he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping, (Poor ignorant baubles!) on our terrible seas, Like egg-shells mov’d upon their surges, crack’d As easily ‘gainst our rocks; for joy whereof, The fam’d Cassibelan, who was once at point (O, giglot fortune!) to master Caesar’s sword, Made Lud’s town with rejoicing fires bright, And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come there’s no more tribute to be paid: Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Caesars: other of them may have crooked noses; but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say, I am one; but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light: else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know, Till the injurious Romans did extort This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar’s ambition, (Which swell’d so much, that it did almost stretch The sides o’ the world,) against all colour, here Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off, Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be. We do say then to Caesar, Our ancestor was that Mulmiutius, which Ordain’d our laws; (whose use the sword of Caesar Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and franchise, Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry;) Mulmiutius, Who was the first of Britain, which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call’d Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar (Cesar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy: Receive it from me, then:—War, and confusion, In Caesar’s name pronounce I ‘gainst thee: look For fury not to be resisted:—Thus defied, I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius. Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather’d honour; Which he, to seek of me again, perforce, Behoves me keep at utterance; I am perfect, That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their liberties, are now in arms: a precedent Which, not to read, would show the Britons cold So Caesar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day, or two, longer: If you
ACT III.

CYMBELINE.

SCENE II.

You bees, that make these locks of counsel!
Lovers,
And men in dangerous bonds, pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young cupid's tables. — Good news, gods! [Reads.

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes. Take notice, that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven: What your own love will, out of this, advise you, follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your increasing in love,

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.

O, for a horse with wings? — Ifcarr'st thou, Pisiano?
He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day? — Then, true Pisiano, (Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—
O, let me 'bate,—but not like me:—yet long'st,—
But in a fainter kind:—O, not like me;
For mine's beyond beyond,) say, and speak thick,58 (Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing,
To the smothering of the sense,) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford: And, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
To inherit such a haven: But, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse: — but first, how get
hence:
Why should excuse be born or ever begot?
We 'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score, 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution, man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagons,
Where horses have been nimmer than the sands
That run i' the clock's behalf: — But this is foolery:
Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She 'lil home to her father: and provide me, presently,
A riding suit; no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.59

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, nor here, nor here
Nor what ensues; but have a fig in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee:
Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountainous Country, with a cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goody day not to keep house, with such Whose root's as low as ours! Stoop, boys: This gate
Instructs you how to adore the heavens; and bows
you
To morning's holy office: The gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbands on, without Good morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder rivers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now, for our mountain sport: Up to you hill,

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place, which lessens, and sets off.
And you may then revolve what tales I have told
you,

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd: To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see:
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler, than attending for a cheek;
Richer, than doing nothing for a babe;
Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him, that makes them fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unfledg'd,

Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor know not
What air's from home. Haply, this life is best,
If quiet life be best: sweeter to you,
That have a sharper known; well corresponding
With your stiff age: but, unto us, it is
A cell of ignorance; travelling abed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of,
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind best dark December, how,
In this our piuching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:
We are beastly; subtle as the fox, for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf, for what we eat:
Our valour is, to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art of the court,
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame, and honour; which dies i' the search;
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sey at the eensure:—O, boys, this story
The world may read in me: My body's marked
With Roman swords; and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me;
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: Then was I a tree,
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but, in one
night,
A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft,)
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was confederate with the Romans: so,
Follow'd my banishment; and, this twenty years,
This rock, and these desmesnes, have been my world:

Where I have liv'd at honest freedom; paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountains;
This is not hunters' language:—He, that strikes
The venison first, shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exeunt Gui. and Arv.

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little, they are sons to the king:
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think, they are mine: and, though train’d up thus meanly
I’ the cave, wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prince it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,—
The heire of Cymbeline and Britain, whom,
The King his father call’d Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say,—“Thus mine enemy fell;
And thus I set my foot on his neck;” even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats, Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal, (Once, Arviragus,) in as like a figure,
Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more
His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous’d!—
O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows,
Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon,
At three, and two years old, I stole these babes,
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou resist’st me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that an Morgan call’d,
They take for natural father. The game is up.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Near Milford Haven.

Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told’st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand:—Ne’er long’d my mother so
To see me first, as I have now:—Pisanio! Man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex’d
Beyond self-explication: Put thyself
Into a haviour of less fear, ore wilfulness
Vanquish my staider senses. What’s the matter?
Why tender’st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to’t before: if winterly, thou need’st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband’s hand!

That drug-dunn’d Italy hath out-crafted him,
And he’s at some hard point.—Speak, man; thy tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain’d of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith he not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunities at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper
Hath cut her throat already.—No, ’tis slander; Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose outrageous
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it, to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep ’twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge
nature,
To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that ’s false to his bed?
Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness:—Inchimo,
Thou didst accuse him of inequiteness;
Thou then look’st like a villain; now, methinks,
Thy favour’s good enough.—Some joy of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting, hath betray’d
him:
Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ripp’d:—to pieces with me!—O,
Men’s vows are women’s traitors! All good seeming,
By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villany; not born, where’t grows;
But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.
CYMBELINE.

ACT III.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas,
Were, in his time, thought false: and Sinon's weeping
Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: So, thou, Posthumus,
Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false, and perjur'd,
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:
Do thou thy master's bidding: When thou see'st him,
A little witness my obedience: Look!
I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
Thy master is not there: who was, indeed,
The riches of it: Do his bidding; strike.
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's: Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine,
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart;
Something's afore't:—Soft, soft; we'll no defence;
Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may poor fools
Believe false teachers: Though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, thou that did'st set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely follows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be disd'g'd by her
That now thou tir'dst on: how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, despatch:
The lamb entreats the butcher: Where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,

Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles, with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent; whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbest, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment: in the which
I have consider'd of a course; Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue wary; speak:
I have heard, I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtezan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where bide? How live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—

Imo. No court, no husband; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing:
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? 'Tis the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest; Pr'ythee, think There's livers out of Britain.

_Pis._

I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and but disguise
That, which, to appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger; you should tread a course
Pretty; and full of view: yes, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus: so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

_Imo._

O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

_Pis._

Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman its pretty self,) to a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your check,
Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

_Imo._

Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end; and am almost
A man already.

_Pis._

First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit
('Tis in my cloak-bag,) doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: Would you, in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy, (which you 'll make him
know,
If that his head have ear in music,) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning, nor supplyment.

_Imo._

Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we 'll even
All that good time will give us. This attempt I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

__SCENE V._—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

_Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Clover, Lucius, and Lords._

_Cym._ Thus far; and so farewell.

_Luc._

My emperor hath wrote; I must from hence;
And am right sorry, that I must report yo
My master's enemy.

_Cym._

Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourselveto show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

_Luc._

So, sir, I desire of you
A conduct over land, to Milford-Haven.—
Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you;[147]

_Cym._

My lords, you are appointed for that office;
The due of honour in no point omit:—
So, farewell, noble Lucius.

_Luc._

Your hand, my lord.

_Clo._ Receive it friendly; but from this time forth
I wear it as your enemy.

_Luc._

Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner: Fare you well.

_Cym._ Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!

_[Exeunt Luc and Lords._

_Queen._

He goes hence frowning: but it honours us,
That we have given him cause.

_Clo._

'Tis all the better;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

_Cym._

Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore, ripely,
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.

_255_
Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business; but must be look’d to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus, hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, hath not appear’d before the Roman, nor to us hath tender’d the duty of the day: she looks us like a thing more made of malice, than of duty: we have noted it.—Call her before us; for we have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an Attend.]

Queen. Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir’d hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord, 'tis time must do. 'Beseech your majesty, forbear sharp speeches to her: she’s a lady so tender of rebukes, that words are strokes, and strokes death to her.

Re-enter an Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How can her contempt be answer’d?

Attent. Please you, sir, her chambers are all lock’d; and there’s no answer that will be given to the loud’st of noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her, she pray’d me to excuse her keeping close; whereeto constrain’d by her infirmity, she should that duty leave unpaid to you, which daily she was bound to proffer: this she wish’d me to make known; but our great court made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock’d? Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that, which I fear prove false!

[Exit.]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant, I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.—[Exit Clo.]

Pisanio, thou that stand’st so for Posthumus!—He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence proceed by swallowing that; for he believes it is a thing most precious. But for her, where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz’d her; or, wing’d with fervour of her love, she’s flown to her desir’d Posthumus: gone is she to death, or to dishonour; and my end can make good use of either: she being down, I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter Cloten.

Clo. 'Tis certain, she is fled: go in, and cheer the king; he rages; none dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: May this night forestall him of the coming day! [Exit Queen.]

Clo. I love, and hate her: for she’s fair and royal; and that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite than lady, ladies, woman; from every one the best she hath, and she, of all compounded, outsells them all: I love her therefore; but, disdaining me, and throwing favours on the low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment, that what’s else rare, is chok’d; and, in that point, I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed, to be reveng’d upon her. For, when fools

Enter Pisanio.

Shall—Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah? Come hither: ah, you precious pandar! villain, where is thy lady? in a word; or else thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter I will not ask again. Close villain, I’ll have this secret from thy heart, or rip, thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus? from whose so many weights of baseness cannot a dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord, how can she be with him? when was she miss’d? he is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? come nearer; no further halting: satisfy me home, what is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain! discover where thy mistress is, at once, at the next word,—No more of worthy lord,—speak, or thy silence on the instant is thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir, this paper is the history of my knowledge touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

Clo. Let’s see:—I will pursue her even to Augustus’ throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish. she’s far enough; and what he learns by this, may prove his travel, not her danger.

Aside.
Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know 't. Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a villain, but do me true service; undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villany sooner I bid thee do, to perform it, directly and truly,—I would think thee an honest man: thou should'st not want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my purse. hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven:—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon:—Even there thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would, these garments were come. She said upon a time, (the bitterness of it I now bech from my heart,) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her: First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my last hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisanto, with the Clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is 't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou shalt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford; 'Would I had wings to follow it!—Come, and be true.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss; for, true to thee,

Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true.—To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursu' st. Flow, flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his need!

[Exit.

SCENE VI.—Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter Imogen, in Boy's Clothes.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one:
I have tir'd myself; and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me.—Milford,
When from the mountain-top Pisano shew'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think,
Foundations fly the wretched: such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me,
I could not miss my way: Will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them; knowing 'tis
A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true: To lapse in fullness
Is sorer, than to lie for need; and falsehood
Is worse in kings, than beggars.—My dear lord!
Thou art one of the false ones: Now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food.—But what is this?
Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet famine
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty, and peace, breeds cowards; hardness over
Of hardness is mother.—Ho, who's here?
If anything that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then I'll enter
Best draw my sword and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a foe, good heavens!

[She goes into the Cave.

257
CTMBELINE.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and
Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I,
Will play the cook and servant: 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry, and die,
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs
Will make what's homely, savoury: Weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave; we'll browse on that,
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. Stay; come not in: [Looking in.]

But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon!—Behold divineness
No elder than a boy!

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Great men, that had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by
That nothing gift of differing multitudes)
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!
I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus' false. 62

Bel. It shall be so:
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come in:
Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1st Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ;
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Panonians and Dalmatians;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons; that we do inite
The gentry to this business: He creates
Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commands
His absolute commission. Long live Caesar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2nd Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1st Sen. With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be suppliant: The words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 'tis said, a woman's fitness comes by fits.
Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain-glory, for a man and his glass to confer; in his own chamber, I mean,) the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperseverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced;
thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spur her home to her father: who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage: but my mother, having power of his testi-ness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: Out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, Belarius, Guiderius,
Arvibagus, and Imogen.

Bel. You are not well: [To Imo.] remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. Brother, stay here:

Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. Your health.—So please you, sir.

ACT IV.

CTMBELINE.

IMO. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage, but at court:
Experience, O, thou disprov'st report!
The imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still; heart-sick:—Pisano,
I'll now taste of thy drug.

GUI. I could not stir him:
He said, he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.

ARR. Thus did he answer me: yet said, hereafter
I might know more.

BEL. To the field, to the field:—
We'll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.

ARR. We'll not be long away.

BEL. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.

IMO. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

BEL. And so shalt be ever. [Exit IMO.]

This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath Good ancestors.

ARR. How angel-like he sings!

GUI. But his neat cookery! He cut our roots in characters;
And su'd our broth, as Juno had been sick,
And he her dieter.

ARR. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh; as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

GUI. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.

ARR. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root, with the increasing vine!

BEL. It is great morning. Come; away.—Who
's there?

Enter Cloten.

CLO. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hath mock'd me:—I am faint.

BEL. Those runagates!
Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o'the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he:—We are held as outlaws:

Hence.

GUI. He is but one: You and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him. [Exeunt BEL. and ARV.

CLO. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?
I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

GUI. A thing
More alas! did I ne'er, than answering
"A slave" without a knock.

CLO. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, villain: Yield thee, thief.

GUI. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I
An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art;
Why I should yield to thee?

CLO. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

GUI. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather; he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

CLO. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

GUI. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

CLO. Thou injurious thief
Hear but my name, and tremble.

GUI. What's thy name?

CLO. Cloten, thou villain.

GUI. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it; were 't toad, or adder, spider,
'Twould move me sooner.

CLO. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

GUI. I'm sorry for 't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

CLO. Art not afraid?

GUI. Those that I reverence, those I fear; the wise:

At fools I laugh, not fear them.

CLO. Die the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:
Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter Belarius and Arviragus.

BEL. No company's abroad.

ARR. None in the world: You did mistake him, sure.
Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour
Which then he wore; the matches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute,
'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear: But see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius, with Cloten's Head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool; an empty purse,
There was no money in 't: not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect, what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they grow,
And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But, that he swore, to take our lives? The law
Protects not us: Then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh thrust us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on, but, in all safe reason,
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone: Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is 't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods forsey it: howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw 't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes, he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck.
[Exit.]

Bel. I fear, 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done 't! though valour
Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. 'Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursued me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would, revenge;
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: To gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity.
[Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head: and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchaf'd, as the rush's wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonderful,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange,
What Cloten's being here to us portends;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return.
[Solemn music.
261}
Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion! Hark!
Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys,
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter Arbiterous, bearing Imogen as dead, in his Arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
Of what we blame him for!
Arv. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.
Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.
Bel. O, melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare
Might easiest harbour in?—Thou blessed thing! Jove knows what man thou might'st have made; but I,
Thou diest, most rare boy, of melancholy!— How found you him?
Arv. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his right check
Reposing on a cushion.
Gui. Where?
Arv. O' the floor;
His arms thus leagu'd: I thought, he slept; and put My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rude ness
Answer'd my steps too loud.
Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.
Arv. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: Thou shalt not lack

The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor
The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor The leaf of ogilantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock would,
With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument!) bring thee all this;
Yea, and fur'd moss besides, when flowers are none,
To winter-ground thy corse.

Gui. Pr'ythee, have done;
And do not play in wenche-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave.
Arv. Say, where shall 's lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.
Arv. Bo't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,
As once our mother; use like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee:
For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.
Arv. We'll speak it then.
Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less: for Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys:
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid for that: Though mean and mighty, roting
Together, have one dust; yet reverence,
(That angel of the world,) doth make distinction
Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely:
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.
Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax
When neither are alive.
Arv. If you'll go fetch him.
We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin. [Exit Bel.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for 't.
Arv. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

202
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes: Our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,
I tremble still with fear: But if there be Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a pact of it!
The dream's here still: even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man!—The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shape of his leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercian; his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—
Murder in heaven?—How?—'Tis gone,—Pisanio,
All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspire'ld with that irregulous devil,—Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord.—To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio,
Hath with his forged letters,—damn'd Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top!—O, Posthumus! alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Ab me! where's that?
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on.—How should this be?
. Pisanio?
'Tis he, and Cloten: malice and lucre in them
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The drug he gave me, which, he said, was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Mur'drous to the senses? That confirms it home
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!—
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrider may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!

Enter Lucius, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the sea; attending
You here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:
They are here in readiness.

Lue.

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confinners,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,
That promise noble service: and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Sienna's brother.

Lue. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Lue. This forwardness
ACT IV — CYMBELINE.

SCENE III.

Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to 't.—Now, sir,
What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision:
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,
(Unless my sins abuse my divination,) Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here,
Without his top? The ruin speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded: Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton, and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain:—Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth! Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than Thy master in bleeding: Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. If I do lie, and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope

[Aside.

They'll pardon it. Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd; but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee: Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—

My friends,
The boy hath taught us many duties: Let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave: Come, arm him. Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us; and he shall be inter'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisanio.

Cym. Again; and bring me word, how 'tis with her.

A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger:—Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone: my queen
Upon a desperate bed; and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: It strikes me, past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: But, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,

Hold me your loyal servant.

1st Lord. Good, my liege,
The day that she was missing, he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally.

For Cloten,—
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Gym. The time's troublesome:
We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy

[To Pis.

Does yet depend.

1st Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast; with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Sym. Now for the counsel of my son, and queen!—
I am amaz'd with matter.

1st Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready:
The want is, but to put those powers in motion,
That long to move.

Gym. I thank you: Let's withdraw:
And meet the time, as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but
We grieve at chances here.—Away. [Exeunt.

Pis. I heard no letter from my master, since
I wrote him, Imogen was slain: 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; Neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work:
Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true, to be true.

These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Rel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us; or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.

To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not musing'd)
Among the bands) may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd; and so extort from us
That which we've done, whose answer would be dead
Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt,
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely,
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not descry'd my service, nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known: yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: what thing is it, that I never Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison?

Never bestrid a horse, save one, that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel? I am amash'd
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I; Amen.
Bel. No reason I, since on your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
ACT V.

SCENE I.—A field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, & for I wish'd
Thou should'st be coloured thus. You married ones,
If each of you would take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves.
For wrying but a little?—O, Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you
Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never
Had liv'd to put on this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me wretch, more worth your vengeance. But, slack,
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's love,
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse;
And make them dreadful to the doer's heart.
But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought bitter
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'Tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress! peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens,
Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter at one side, Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; Leonatus Posthumus following it, like a poor Soldier. They march over, and go out. Alarums. Then enter again in skirmish. Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't,
Revengeing ensnibes me; Or could this carl,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdued me,
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne,
As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods.

Exit.

The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken; then enter, to his rescue, Belarius, Guiderius, and Arturagus.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us, but
The villany of our fears.

Gui. Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!

Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons: They rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then, enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself:
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hoodwink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: Or betimes.
Let's re-enforce, or fly.

[Exeunt.
SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord. Can'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did:

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post: No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost, But that the heavens fought: The king himself Of his wings destitute, the army broken, And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damn'd With dead men, hurt behind, and cowards living To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—An honest one, I warrant; who describ'd So long a breeding, as his white beard came to, In doing this for his country;—athwart the lane, He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run The country base, — than to commit such slaughter; With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,) Made good the passage; cry'd to those that fled, "Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men: To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards! Stand; Or we are Romans, and will give you that Like beasts, which you shun beastly; and may save, But to look back in frown: stand, stand."—These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many, (For three performers are the file, when all The rest do nothing,) with this word "stand, stand,"

Accommodated by the place, more charming, With their own nobleness, (which could have turn'd A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks, Part, shame, part, spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd coward

But by example (O, a sin in war Damn'd in the first beginners!) 'gan to look The way that they did, and to grin like lions Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began A stop i' the chaser, a retire; anon,

A rout, confusion thick: Forwith, they fly Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves, The strides they victors made: And now our cowards (Like fragments in hard voyages,) became The life o' the need; having found the back-door open Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens, how they wound! Some, slain before; some, dying; some, their friends O'er-borne i' the former wave: ten, chas'd by one, Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty: Those, that would die or ere resist, are grown The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:

A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are made Rather to wonder at the things you hear, Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon 't, And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:

"Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane, Preserv'd the Britons, was the Roman's bane."-

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. Lack, to what end? Who dares not stand his soc, I'll be his friend: For if he'll do, as he is made to do, I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too. You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you are angry.

Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O, noble misery!

To be i' the field, and ask, what news, of me! To-day, how many would have given their honours To have sav'd their carcasses? took heel to do't. And yet died too? I, in mine own wise charmed, Could not find death, where I did hear him groan; Nor feel him, where he struck: Being an ugly monster,

'Tis strange, he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds, Sweet words: or hath more ministers than we That draw his knives i' the war.— Well, I will find him:

For being now a favourer to the Roman, No more a Briton, I have resum'd again The part I came in: Fight I will no more, But yield me to the veriest blind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take: For me, my ransom's death; On either side I come to spend my breath; Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again, But end it by some means for Imogen.
Enter Two British Captains, and Soldiers.

1st Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken:
'Tis thought, the old man and his sons were angels.
2nd Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit.
That gave the afront with them.
1st Cap. So 'tis reported: But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is there?
Post. A Roman;
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds Had answer'd him.
2nd Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell
What crows have peck'd them here: He brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, attended; Belarius, Guidonius, Atyragus, Pisario, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter Posthumus and Two Gaolers.

1st Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you;
So, graze, as you find pasture.

2nd Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a way,
I think, to liberty: Yet am I better
Than one that's sick o' the gout: since he had rather Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd
By the sure physician, death; who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience! thou art fetter'd
More than my shanks, and wrists: You good gods give me
The penitent instrument, to pick that bolt,
Then, free for ever! Is 't enough, I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd, more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me, than my all.

I know, you are more element than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that 's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life, take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man, they weigh not every stamp;
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours: And so, great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen.
I'll speak to thee in silence.

[He sleeps.

Solemn Music. Enter, as an Apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, an old Man, attired like a Warrior; leading in his Hand an ancient Matron, his Wife, and Mother to Posthumus, with Music before them. Then, after other Music, follow the two young Leonatus, Brothers to Posthumus, with Wounds, as they died in the Wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done a night but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending Nature's law.
Whose father then (as men report,
Thou orphans' father art,)
Thou should'st have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vesting smart.

Moth. Lucina lent me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.

1st Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?
Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonatis' seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachino,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the gend and scorn
O' the other's villany?
2nd Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came,
Our parents, and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Tenants' right,
With honour to maintain.

1st Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due;
Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise,
Upon a violent race, thy harsh
And potent injuries:

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2nd Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunder-bolt.

The Ghosts fall on their Knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low,
Offend our hearing; hush!—How dare you ghosts,
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:
Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd;
No care of yours it is; you know, 'tis ours.
Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
Your low-born son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
Our temple he was married.—Rise, and fade!—
He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
And so, away: no further with your din.
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.]

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us: his ascension is
More sweet than our bless'd fields: his royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak,

As when his god is pleas'd.

All.
Thanks, Jupiter!

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd
His radiant roof:—Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.

[ Ghosts vanish.]

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grand-sire, and begot
A father to me: and thou hast created
A mother, and two brothers: But (O scorn!)
Gonel they went hence so soon as they were born.
And so I am awake.—Poor wretches that depend
On greatness' favour, dream as I have done;
Wake, and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve;
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours: so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.
What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O, rare one!
Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reads.] When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself known,
Without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air;
And when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches,
Which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing:
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot unite. Bo what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?
Goof. Hanging is the word, sir; if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Goof. A heavy reckoning for you, sir: But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty: the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: O! of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—O the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what 's past, is, and to come, the discharge:—Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

Goof. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache: But a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his officer: for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed, do I, fellow.

Goof. Your death has eyes in 's head then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know; or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know; or jump the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you 'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wark, and will not use them.

Goof. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindeness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bringest good news;—I am called to be made free.

Goof. I 'll be hanged then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead. [Exeunt Post, and Mess.

Goof. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation of gaolers, and gallowses! I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preference in 't.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guderi, Arviragus, Pisanio, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart, That the poor soldier, that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp'd before targe of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living, But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am. The heir of his reward; which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain, [To Bel., Gud., and Ary. By whom, I grant, she lives: 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are:—report it. Bel. Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen: Further to boast, were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees: Arise, my knights o' the battle; I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius, and Ladies.

There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king! To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?
Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life;
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd,
I will report, so please you: These her women
Can trip me, if I err; who, with wet cheeks,
Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.
Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this:
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.
Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love
With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is 't can read a woman?—Is there more?
Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, she had
For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and, ling'ring,
By inches waste you: In which time she purpos'd,
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to
O' ercome you with her show; yes, and in time,
(When she had fitted you with her craft,) to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown.
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effect'd; so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
Lady. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious,
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, the Soothsayer, and other
Roman prisoners, guarded; Posthumus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute: that

The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose kinmen have made suit,
That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter
Of you their captives, which ourself have granted:
So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war; the day
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:
Augustus lives to think on't: And so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; My boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so dutious, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like: let his virtue join
With my request, which, I 'll make bold, your highness
Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him sir
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour is familiar to me.—
Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own.—I know not why, nor wherefore,
To say, live, boy: no'er thank thy master; live:
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it;
Yen, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet, I know, thou wilt.

No, no: alack,
There's other work in hand; I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, sears me: Briefly die their joys,
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.—
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What would'st thou, boy? I love thee more and more; think more and more
What 's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak, Wilt have him live? Is he thy kins? thy friend?

271
As it doth me,) a nobler sir ne'er liv'd
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.
Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength:
I had rather thou should'st live while nature will,
Than die ere I hear more: strive man, and speak.
Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!) it was in Rome, (accurs'd
The mansion where!) 'twas at a feast, (O, 'would
Our viands had been poison'd! or, at least,
Those which I he'rd to head!) the good Posthú-
mus,
(What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were; and was the best of all
Among'st the rar'st of good ones,) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for feature, lamíng
The shrine of Venus, or straight-nigh't Minerva
Postures beyond brief nature: for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides, that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye:——

Cym. I stand on fire:
Come to the matter.
Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou would'st grieve quickly.—This Posthú-
mus,
(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover,) took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom we prais'd (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in 't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.
Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.
He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: Whereat, I, wretch!
Made seruple of his praise; and wager'd with him
Pieces of gold, 'gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery: he, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phæbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of his ear. Away to Britain
Post in this design: Well may you, sir,
Remembe] me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus queench'd
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gain in your diller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with similar proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,
(O, cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,—
Methinks, I see him now,—
Post. Ay, so thou dost,
[Coming forward.
Italian fiend!—Ah me, most credulous foe,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justice! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is it
That all the abhorred things 'o' the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthûmus,
That kill'd thy daughter—villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
A saereligious thief, to do't—the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
Spat, and throw stones, cast mere upon me,
The dogs 'o' the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd, Posthûmus Leonatus; and
Be villainous less than 'twas!—O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen!
Imogen, Imogen!
Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear—
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful
... page.
There lie thy part.
[Striking her: she falls.
Pis. O, gentlemen, help, help
Mine, and your mistress:—O, my lord Posthûmus!
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now:—Help, help!—
Mine honour'd lady!
Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How come these staggerers on me?

---

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike
me
To death with mortal joy.
Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O, get thee from my sight;
Thou gav'est me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.
Cym. The tune of Imogen!
Pis. Lady,
The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing; I had it from the queen.
Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison'd me.
Cor. O Gods!—
I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: If Pisânio
Have, said she, given his mistress that confidence
Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.
Cym. What's this, Cornelius.
Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importud me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
Tho present power of life; but in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?
Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.
Bel. My boys,
There was our error.
Giu. This is sure, Fidele.
Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from
you?
Think, that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again.
[Embracing him.
Post. Hang thereto like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!
Cym. How now, my flesh, my child?
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?
Imo. Your blessing, sir.
Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
You had a motive for't.
[To GUL. and ARV.
Cym. My tears, that fell,
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.
Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord.
Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her it was,
That we meet here so strangely: But her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord, Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and sware,
If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death: By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket; which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he infore'd from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
My lady's honour: what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the story:
I slew him there.
Cym. Marry, the gods forsend!
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth,
Deny 't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Gui. A most uncivil one: The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head;
And an right glad, he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must
Endure our law: Thou art dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king:
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone;

[To the Guard.

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

274

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove, that two of us are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger is Ours.

Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then.—
By leave;—Thou hadst, great king, a subject, who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence;
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and saucy: Here's my knee;
Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd,
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such, and so they are,) these twenty years
Have I train'd up: those arts they have, as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Eufriphile,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For which I did then: Beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason: Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world:—
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st: I lost my children;
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true, Guiderius:
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother
Rejoic'd deliverance more:—Bless'd may you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by 't. —O my gentle brother,
Have we thus met? O never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?
Arr. Ay, my good lord.
Gai. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continued so, until we thought he died.
Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where? how liv'd you?
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with, your brothers? how first met them?
Why fled you from the court? and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;
And all the other by-dependencies.

From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place,
Will serve our long intergatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever.

[To Bel.]

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'errjoy'd,
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well become'd this place, and graci'd
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeing; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd:—That I was he, Speak, Iachino; I had you down, and might Have made you finish.

Iach. I am down again:

[Kneeling.] But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, 'bsecuch
you,
Which I so often owe: but, your ring first;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess,
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me;
The power that I have on you, is to spare you;
The malice towards you, to forgive you: Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd:
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arr. You holp us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer: As I slept, methought,
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back,
Appeard to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing 275

Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc.

Philarmonus,—

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

[To Cym.

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth: who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym.

Well,
My peace we will begin:—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice, (both on her, and hers,)
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd: For the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd; which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
The imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym.

Land we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars! Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: Let
A Roman and a British ensign wavo
Friendly together: so through Lud's town march:
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we 'll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there:—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

[Exeunt.
NOTES TO CYMBELINE.

1 You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens, than our couriers:
Still seem as does the king's.

This passage is very obscure, the sense appears to be, our bloods and dispositions no longer are influenced by the seasons, but, like our couriers, take their cue from the temper of the king. Mr. Tyrwhitt says we should omit the ș in the word kings, the sense is then certainly clearer.

2 I do extend him, sir, within himself.
My praise, however great, is less than, or within, his merits.

3 And tear up my embracions from a next
With bonds of death!
To tear up, is strictly to close up with burning, and may here mean to solder up in a lead coffin; some of the commentators are, however, of opinion that it merely meant to close up in grave clothes, or otherwise.

4 ——— O disloyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth: thou heapest
A year's age on me!
This passage is probably corrupt; for Cymbeline to say that his daughter's conduct had made him exactly one year older would be ludicrous. Sir T. Hanmer reads:—
Thou heapest many
A year's age on me!
And Dr. Johnson alters the last line thus:—
Years, ages on me.

6 And did avoid a puttock.
A puttock is a mean degenerate species of hawk, too worthless to deserve training.

6 Out of your best advice.
Out of your reflection or consideration.

7 ——— 'Twere a paper lost
As offer'd mercy is.
The meaning appears to be, that the paper is to the speaker as valuable as offered mercy to a condemned criminal, and that the loss of it would be as much to be regretted as the loss of such a pardon.

8 To encounter me with orisons.
That is, meet me with reciprocal prayers.

9 Words him, I doubt not, a good deal from the matter.
Gives rise to very exaggerated descriptions of him.

10 Rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences.
Posthumus admits himself to have been a presumptuous young man, and implies, that he rather studied to avoid conducting himself by the opinions of other people, than to be guided by their experience.

11 To convince the honour of my mistress.
To convince is used for to overcome.

12 You are a good deal abused.
That is, deceived.

13 You are a friend, and therein the wiser.
Dr. Warburton reads—you are afraid, &c. Dr. Johnson interprets it thus—you are a friend to the lady, and therein the wiser, as you will not expose her to hazard.

14 To shift his being.
That is, to change his abode.

15 ——— And the twinn'd stones
Upon the number'd beach,
In what sense can the beach be called numbered? who can number the sands of the sea shore? We might read—
Upon th' unwrumber'd beach, with more propriety. Twinn'd stones, says Dr. Johnson,
I do not understand, but twinn'd shells, or pairs of shells, are very common. The pebbles on the sea shore are so much of the same size and shape, that twinned may mean as like as twins.

16 ——— He
Is strange and peevish.
Strange is shy, or backward; peevish may be used in its modern acceptation as irritable, but it ancienly meant silly.

What both you spur and stop.
What is it that at once incites you to speak and restrains you from it? what is it that you seem anxious to utter and yet withhold.

18 And fastened to an emperry.
That is allied to royalty; emperry is an obsolete word which signified sovereign command.

19 With tomboys, hir'd with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield.
That is, with strumpets hired with the pension which you allow your husband. It would appear that the ladies of pleasure in the time of Shakspere often went habited as young men, hence, probably, the name of tomboy. In W. Warren's Nureerie of Names, 1581:

She comes not unto Bacchus' feastes,
Or Floris' routes by night,
Like tomboyes, such as live in Rome
For every knife's delight.

20 Being strange, i.e., being a stranger.

21 When I kissed the jack upon an up-east, to be hit away.

He is describing a game at bowls. The jack is the small bowl at which the others are aimed; he who throws the nearest to it wins. To kiss the jack is an expression denoting a state of great advantage in the game.

22 To have smell like a fool.

A poor quibble is intended on the word rank in the preceding speech.

23 And you crow, cock, with your comb on.

The intention of the speaker is to call Cloten a coxcomb; the allusion is to the cap worn by a fool or jester having on it a comb like a cock's.

24 Under these windows, i.e. her eyelids.

25 She hath been reading late.

The tale of Tereus.

Tereus and Progne is the second tale in A Petite Palace of Pettie His Pleasure, printed in quarto, 1576. The same tale is related in Gower's poem, De Confessione Amantis, and in Ovid's Metamorphoses.

26 One, two, three,—Time, time.

Mr. Malone has very truly observed that Shakspere is hardly ever exact in his computation of time. Just before Imogen went to sleep, she asked her attendant what hour it was, and was informed that it was almost midnight. Immediately after she has fallen asleep, Iachimo comes from the trunk, and the present soliloquy cannot have occupied more than a few minutes; yet we are now told that it is three o'clock.

27 His steeds to water at those springs.

On chalice'd flowers that lies.

A poetical allusion to the morning sun drying up the dew which lies in the cups of flowers. We should read lie instead of lives in the last line, but inaccuracies of this character are frequent in our poet's writings, and in this instance, we cannot rectify the grammar without spoiling the rhyme.

28 If'twere made Comparative for your virtues.

If it were to be considered as a compensation adequate to your deserving; a reward for merit.

29 I am sprightly with a fool.

That is, haunted by a fool as by a sprite.

30 Statist, i.e. statesman.

31 To their approvers, i.e. to those who try them.

That is, if you can be patient; forbear to flush your cheek with rage.

32 The fun'd Cassibelan, who was once at point (O, gjust fortune!) to master Cesar's sword.

Shakspeare has here transferred to Cassibelan an adventure which happened to his brother Nennius.

"The same historie," says Holinshed, "also maketh mention of Nennius, brother to Cassellianc, who in fight happened to get Cesar's sword fastened in his shield, by a blow which Cesar stroke at him. But Nennius died within fifteen dayes after the battel, of the hurt received at Cesar's hand, although after he was hurt, he slew Labienus, one of the Roman tribunes."

33 I am perfect, i.e. I am well informed.

34 What false Italian As poisonous tongue'd, as handed.

In the time of Shakspere, the practice of poisoning was very common in Italy, and the art carried to great perfection by certain villainous physicians.

35 Art thou a封建ary for this art.

That is, art thou a confederate or accomplice. So in The Winter's Tale, Leontes says of Hermione:

More, she 's a traitor, and Camillo is A federal with her.

36 I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

That is, I am ignorant of, or unpractised in the arts of murder.

37 Say and speak thick.

Crowd one word upon another as fast as possible; speak rapidly, even "to the smothering of the sense."

38 A franklin's housewife.

A franklin is, literally, a freeholder, with a small estate, neither villain nor vassal.

39 That giants may jet through And keep their impious turbands on.

The idea of a giant was, among the readers of romances, always confused with that of a Saracen.

40 Richer, than doing nothing for a babe.

This is evidently a corruption. Sir T. Hamner substitutes the word bride for that of babe, and Dr. Warburton reads babbage, that is, vain titles of honour gained by an idle attendance at court. Dr. Johnson proposes to read bride, and says that brabant is a badge of honour, or any thing worn as a mark of dignity.

41 To stride a limit, i.e. to overpass his bound.

Some abandoned woman made by art, the creature
NOTES TO CYMBELINE.

not of nature, but of painting. In All's Well that Ends Well, we have a similar expression:

—— Whose judgments are
More fathers of their garments.

44 — When thou shalt be diseased by her
That now thou tirest on.

That is, when you shall be satiated by her who now attracts you. A hawk is said to tire upon that which she seeks; from tirer, French.

45 — Now, if you could bear a mind
Dark as your fortune is.

To wear a dark mind, is to carry a mind impenetrable to the search of others. Darkness, applied to the mind is secrecy: applied to the fortune is obscurity.

46 Wherein you are happy.

That is, in what you are accomplished.

47 Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you.

This is but a senseless repetition, we should read his grace and you; or your grace and yours, i.e., your kindred.

48 ——— May
This night foresall him of the coming day.

May his grief to-night urge him to some act of premature destruction, so that he may never see the morrow.

49 And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, women.

The passage is rendered obscure by its brevity, but Cloten means to say that, she has all accomplishments more exquisite than any lady, than all ladies, than all womankind.

50 ——— Then had my prize
Been less; and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

If these youth's had been my brothers I should not be heir to the throne, not so great a prize as I now am, but more the equal of my husband.

51 I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus' false.

Mr. Mason would read—is false, but this addition clogs the metre. Shakespeare, who takes many freedoms in this way, doubtless used the word false for falsehood, or want of faith.

52 ——— And to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commands
His absolute commission.

That is, he commands the commission to be given to the tribunes, arms them with his authority to raise the levy.

53 This imperseverant thing.

Sir T. Hanmer reads ill-perseverant, but imperseverant may mean no more than perseverant; like inboomed, impassioned, immasked.

54 Thy garments cut to pieces before thy face.

It could not injure or annoy Posthumus to have his garments cut to pieces before his face after he was dead. We should read before her face, i.e. Imogen's.

55 But his jovial face.

Jovial face here signifies not a merry but a noble face, such a one as belongs to Jove.

56 Conspir'd with that irreligious devil.

Perhaps we should read irreligious devil, but irreligious may be a word of Shakspere's own coinage, intended for lawless, licentious.

57 I fast and prayed.

Fast is here improperly used for fasted.

58 Richard du Champ.

The use of this name to denominate an ancient Briton is one of the numerous anachronisms which occur in this play. In the fifth act Cymbeline is made to knight Bellarius and his sons on the field of battle by dubbing them according to the fashion of the middle ages.

59 Come arm him.

That is, raise him in your arms.

60 Even to the note of the king.

I will so distinguish myself that the king shall remark it.

61 Yes, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee.

This bloody cloth is the token of Imogen's death, which in the foregoing act Pisario had determined to send.

62 The country base.

A rustic game called prison-bars, or prisoners-base.

63 In a silly habit.

Silly is simple or rustic.

64 Our fealty, and Tenants' right.

Tenants was the father of Cymbeline. According to some authorities Tenants paid to Rome the tribute stipulated by Cassibelan; but other accounts say that he refused it, and warred against the Romans.

65 And cloys his beak.

Perhaps we should read cloys his beak, which is a frequent action with hawks and eagles.

66 I never saw one so prone; i.e. so forward.

67 How come these staggers on me?

This delirious agitation; the staggers is a disease of the horse, resembling apoplexy.

279
IN Coriolanus, Julius Caesar, and Antony and Cleopatra, the Roman tragedies of Shakspere, the poet introduces his readers to a new mode of life and feeling; times past are revivified, the heroes of the elder ages of the world recalled from their oblivious graves, ruined cities rebuilt, and Rome, in all its ancient glory, with its palaces, columns, and statues, its walks and fountains, its patricians and its people, appear as on some magic orb before us. The busy hum of life is over all, and the heroes of Plutarch seem to live and breathe again; and we analyze their actions and penetrate their motives, as critically as if they were no more remote from us than Cromwell or Napoleon. The great poet throws a bridge over time, and brings us face to face with antiquity; this is peculiarly the case with Shakspere's Roman dramas; he has given us better and far more accurate pictures of life in the eternal city——

"That sat on her seven hills
And from her throne of beauty ruled the world."

Than he has done of the early history of his own country. Coriolanus, Antony, Brutus, Caesar, and Cassius, are all poetical Daguerreotypes, in which it is almost difficult to say whether poetry or history are most indebted to our bard.

Coriolanus is, in my estimation, the least interesting of the three tragedies I have named; it displays less variety of character than is contained in Julius Caesar, and less beauty and poetry than the story of the Roman Antony and his voluptuous Egyptian Queen. It has been highly popular in the present age, certainly, but that is partially attributable to the excellence of the late John Kemble in the character of the unbending Marcius, whose perfect identification of himself with it, made this tragedy attractive at the theatre; and has, since his time, roused a spirit of emulation in other tragedians, who have courted comparison with Kemble in a character for which nature had eminently fitted him. The character of Marcius is unanime almost to repulsiveness; his stern and tyrannical disposition is shewn on his first entrance, when, because the starved citizens complain of hunger, and presume to call in question the wisdom of their governors, he exclaims; had he permission, he would slay as many of them as would make a heap as high as he could hurl his lance. He is praised constantly in the play, but surely the poet never wished to excite our sympathy for this insolent and unfeeling man, but rather intended to show that such a nature could not live in peace with men of any order. He wishes to slay the people, because they offend the patricians; then he would destroy the patricians, because they have offended him; and that he may execute his hate on Rome, having fled to the Volcians, who protect and honour him, he finally quarrels with them. He has no patriotism, but a mere selfish love of glory; he is the mercenary of his own feelings, and fights for or against Rome, as it offends or pleases him. It is himself he worships, not his country or his kind; "being moved, he will not spare to gird the gods." His love to his mother arises from the similarity of their natures, and because she is as haughty and arrogant as he. Menenius truly says, "there is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male tiger;" the only act of kindness which he does, is to beg the freedom of the poor Volcean at whose house he had lodged; but even this grace he mars by forgetting the name of the man whom he would benefit. His scorn and contempt of the common people is more than he can give utterance to; in his language they are rats, crows, curs, and the "musty superfluity" of the city. He would govern them most absolutely, pluck out their "multitudinous tongue," and take from them all political power. The tribune, Brutus, reproves him justly, by saying:—

You speak o' the people
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their infirmity.

He would realize despotism in its most hateful shape, and looks upon the people as a mass of bones and muscles, born only to toil and be despised.

Such a man is unfit for peace: he is a brand in the hands of those who lead him: his actions are the death of order—

Before him
He carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears."

By blood he flourishes, and in blood he falls.

Coleridge says—"This play illustrates the wonderfully philosophic impartiality of Shakspere's politics." The poet, however, shows himself something of an aristocrat, both here and in Julius Caesar. He seems to entertain a contempt for the common order of people, and places them in a very ridiculous light. The citizens are made mere creatures of fear and contradiction, wafted about by every wind, and won by every suppliant. More stress is laid on the folly of the plebeians than on the vices of the patricians; and if history has recorded the former as feeble, it has not left the latter stainless. Their courage and self-denial sometimes made them regarded as demi-gods, but their vices sunk them below the brutes. The Roman satirists give pictures of life in the great city which fill modern readers with disgust and loathing. Shakspere laughs at the people; but if he intended Coriolanus to represent the principle of aristocracy, he places that in no very attractive light.

Some apologists for the turbulent character of Marcius have been found who urge the prejudices he had derived from birth and education; from the fact that he was a spoiled child of fortune; and because that, in his day, there were no connecting links between the higher and lower classes, by which they might become known to and respect each other; but these excuses fall very short of a reasonable defence of his haughtiness."

Volumnia, also, has been much praised as a noble character; but she possesses too much of the pride and arrogance of her son, though his nature is certainly softened in her: she is an Amazonian scold, that holds the lives of the Roman citizens in less estimation than a mere whim of her son's; when they have irritated him, she wishes that they may all hang and burn too. She has more experience and wisdom than he; and though she despises and hates the people as much, she truly vaunts she has a brain "that leads her use of anger to better advantage." The softer character of Virgilia shows pale beside her, but it is far more pleasing; the sound of flutes is sweeter than the clang of trumpets; and the tender solicitude of the wife more interesting than the stately ambition of the mother.

Mencenius is something between a patrician and a buffoon; his connexions are aristocratic, but his sympathies are with the people: out of his love for Coriolanus he becomes his parasite, and is, in the end, treated by that proud and selfish man with insolence and ingratitude. His application of the fable of the belly and its members to the mutiny of the citizens is apt enough; but we see that, after all, he loves the poor rogues whom he traduces. His great objects of abuse are the tribunes; but they show far more sense than he: they were chosen guardians of the liberty of the people; and in opposing Coriolanus in his attempt at arbitrary power, they but performed their duty. To have done less, would have proved them unworthy of their great trust.

This tragedy, says Mr. Malone, "comprehends a period of about four years, commencing with the secession to the Mona Sacer, in the year of Rome, 262, and ending with the death of Coriolanus, A.U.C. 266." It is attributed to the year 1608 or '9, and the historical events are copied with singular fidelity, and even some of the language borrowed from The Life of Coriolanus, in Plutarch.

Roman and Volcean Senators, Patricians and Soldiers, Ladies, Aediles, Lictors, Citizens, Messengers, Servants, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—Partly in Rome, and partly in the Territories of the Volcians and Antiates.
ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.  A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other Weapons.

1st Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

Cit. Speak, speak.  [Several speaking at once.

1st Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to suffer?

Cit. Resolved, resolved.

1st Cit. First you know, Caius Marius is chief enemy to the people.

Cit. We know 't, we know 't.

1st Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is 't a verdict?

Cit. No more talking on 't; let it be done: away, away.

2nd Cit. One word, good citizens.

1st Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians, good: What authority surfeits on, would relieve us; if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it was wholesome, we might guess, they relieved us humanely; but they think, we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them.—Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know, I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2nd Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marius?

Cit. Against him first; he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2nd Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1st Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2nd Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1st Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft conscience'd men can be content to say, it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2nd Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him: You must in no way say, he is covetous.

1st Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition.  [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen: Why stay we praying here? to the Capitol.

Cit. Come, come.

1st Cit. Soft; who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2nd Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

1st Cit. He's one honest enough; 'Would, all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you

With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

1st Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling, this fortnight, what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say, poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know, we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,

Will you undo yourselves?

1st Cit. We cannot, sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearness, you may as well Striko at the heaven with your staves, as lift them Against the Roman state; whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link asunder, than can ever Appear in your impediment: For the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it; and Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack, You are transported by calamity Thither where more attends you; and you slander
The helms o’tho state, who care for you like fathers,
When you curse them as enemies.

1st Cit. Care for us!—True, indeed!—They ne’er cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their store-houses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers: repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there’s all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
Or be accus’d of folly. I shall tell you
A pretty tale; it may be, you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To scale ’t a little more.¹

1st Cit. Well, I’ll hear it, sir: yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale: but, an’t please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time when all the body’s members
Rebell’d against the belly; thus accus’d it:—
That only like a gulf it did remain
I’ the midst o’ the body, idle and inactive,
Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest; where the other instruments²
Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate,³ did minister
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answered,—

1st Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,
Which ne’er came from the lungs, but even thus,
(For, look you, I may make the belly smile,
As well as speak,) it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts
That envied his receipt; even so most fitly
As you malign our senators, for that
They are not such as you.

1st Cit. Your belly’s answer: What!
The kingly-crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
With other muniments and petty helps
In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?—
‘Fore me, this fellow speaks!—what then? what then?
1st Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain’d,
Who is the sink o’ the body,——

ACT I.

CORIOLANUS.

SCENE I.

Men. Well, what then?
1st Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you;
If you’ll bestow a small (of what you have little,) Patience, a while, you’ll hear the belly’s answer.

1st Cit. You are long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer’d.

“True is it, my incorporate friends,” quoth he,

“That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon: and fit it is;
Because I am the store-house, and the shop
Of the whole body: But if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart,—to the seat o’ the brain;
And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves, and small inferior veins,
From me receive that natural competency
Whereby they live: And though that all at once,
You, my good friends,” (this says the belly,) mark me,—

1st Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. “Though all at once cannot
See what I do deliver out to each;
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran.” What say you to ’t?

1st Cit. It was an answer: How apply you this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,
And you the mutinous members: For examine
Their counsels, and their cares; digest things rightly,
Touching the weal o’ the common; you shall find,
No public benefit which you receive,
But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you,
And no way from yourselves.—What do you think?
You, the great toe of this assembly?—

1st Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that being one o’ the lowest, basest, poorest,
Of this most wise rebellion, thou go’st foremost:
Thou rascal, that art worst in blood, to run
Lead’st first to win some vantage.—
But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs;
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle,
The one side must have bale.⁴—Hail, noble Marcius!

Enter Caius Marcius.

Mar. Thanks.—What’s the matter, you dissentions rogues,
That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scolds?

1st Cit.  We have ever your good word.

Mar.  He that will give good words to thee, will flatter
Beneath abhorring.—What would you have, you curs,
That like nor peace, nor war? the one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. Ho that trusts you,
Where he should find you lions, finds you hares;
Where foxes, geese: You are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy, whose offence subdues him,
And curse that justice did it.
Who deserves greatness,
Deserves your hate: and your affections are
A sick man’s appetite, who desires most that
Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours, swims with flins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes.  Hang ye! Trust ye?
With every minute you do change a mind;
And call him noble, that was now your hate,
Him vile, that was your garland. What’s the matter,
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another?—What ’s their seeking?
Men.  For corn at their own rates; whereof, they say,
The city is well stor’d.

Mar.  Hang ’em! They say?
They’ll sit by the fire, and presume to know
What ’s done i’ the Capitol: who ’s like to rise,
Who thrives, and who declines: side factions, and give out
Conjectural marriages; making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking,
Below their cobbled shoes. They say, there’s grain each?

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my sword, I’d make a quarry
With thousands of these quarter’d slaves, as high
As I could pick my lance.

Men.  Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded;
For though abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech
you,
What says the other troop?

Mar.  They are dissolv’d: Hang ’em!
They said they were an-hungry; sighed forth proverbs;—
That, hunger broke stone walls; that, dogs must cat;

That, meat was made for mouths; that, the gods sent not
Corn for the rich men only:—With these shreds
They vented their complainings; which being answer’d,
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
(To break the heart of generosity,)
And make bold power look pale,) they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns o’ the moon,
Shouting their emulation.

Men.  What is granted them?

Mar.  Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdoms,
Of their own choice: One ’s Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—’sdeath!
The rabble should have first unroof’d the city,
Ere so prevail’d with me: it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes
For insurrections arguing.

Men.  This is strange.

Mar.  Go, get you home, you fragments;

Enter a Messenger.

Mess.  Where’s Caius Marcius?

Mar.  Here: What ’s the matter?

Mess.  The news is, sir, the Volscs are in arms.

Mar.  I am glad on ’t; then we shall have means to vent
Our musty superfluity:—See, our best elders.

Enter Cominius, Titus Lartius, and other Senators; Junius Brutus, and Sicinius Velutus.

1st Sen.  Marcius, ’tis true, that you have lately told us;
The Volscs are in arms.

Mar.  They have a leader,
Tullius Aufidius, that will put you to ’t.
I sin in envying his nobility:
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wish me only he.

Com.  You have fought together.

Mar.  Were half to half the world by the ears, and he
Upon my party, I’d revolt, to make
Only my wars with him: he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.
ACT I.

CORIOLANUS.

1st Sen. Then, worthy Marcius, Attend upon Cominius to these wars.
Com. It is your former promise.
Mar. Sir, it is; And I am constant.—Titus Lartius, thou Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face: What, art thou still? stand'st out?
Tit. No, Caius Marcius; I'll lean upon one crutch, and fight with the other, Ere stay behind this business.
Men. O, true bro'd! 1st Sen. Your company to the Capitol; where, I know, Our greatest friends attend us.
Tit. Lead you on: Follow, Cominius; we must follow you; Right worthy you priority.
Com. Noble Lartius! 1st Sen. Hence! to your homes, be gone. [To the Citizens.
Mar. Nay, let them follow: The Volscers have much corn; take these rats thither, To gnaw their garners:—Worshipful mutineers, Your valour puts well forth: pray, follow.
Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius?
Bru. He has no equal.
Sic. Where were chosen tribunes for the people,—
Bru. Mark'd you his lip, and eyes?
Sic. Nay, but his taunts.
Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.
Sic. Be-mock the modest moon.
Bru. The present wars devour him: he is grown Too proud to be so valiant.
Sic. Such a nature, Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow Which he tremends on at noon: But I do wonder, His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Cominius.
Bru. Fame, at which he aims— In whom already he is well gna'd.—cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd, than by A place below the first: for what miscarries Shall be the general's fault, though he perform To the utmost of a man; and giddy censure Will then cry out of Marcius, "O, if he Had borne the business!"
Sic. Besides, if things go well, Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall Of his demerits rob Cominius,

286

SCENE II.—Corioli. The Senate-House.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, and certain Senators.
1st Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels, And know how we proceed.
Auf. Is it not yours? What ever hath been thought on in this state, That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone, Since I heard thee. these are the words: I think, I have the letter here; yes, here it is: [Reads. "They have press'd a power, but it is not known Whether for east, or west: The dearth is great; The people mutinous: and it is rumour'd, Cominius, Marcius your old enemy, (Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,) And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman, These three lead on this preparation Whither 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you: Consider of it."
1st Sen. Our army's in the field: We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready To answer us.
Auf. Nor did you think it folly, To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching, It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery, We shall be shorten'd in our aim; which was, To take in many towns, and, almost, Rome Should know we were afoot.
2nd Sen. Noble Aufidius, Take your commission; he ye to your bands: Let us alone to guard Corioli: If they set down before us, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find They have not prepar'd for us.
Auf. O, doubt not that; I speak from certainties. Nay, more.

[Exeunt.
Some parcels of their powers are forth already,
And only bitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Anf. And keep your honours safe!

1st Sen. Farewell.

2nd Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell. [Exit.

Enter Volumnia, and Virgilia: They sit down on two low stools, and see.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embraces of his bed, where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day of king's entertainies, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I,—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter,—I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam? how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely:—Had I a dozen sons,—each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius,—I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.

Methinks, I hear hither your husband’s drum; See him pluck Ausfidius down by the hair;

As children from a bear, the Volscs shunning him:
Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,— “Come on, you cowards, you were in fear,
Though you were born in Rome?” His bloody brow
With his mail’d hand then wiping, forth he goes;
Like to a harvest-man, that ’s task’d to now
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O, Jupiter, no blood!

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man,
Than girt his trophy: The breasts of Hecuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look’d not lovelier
Than Hector’s forehead, when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords’ contending.—Tell Valeria,
We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Ausfidius!

Vol. He’ll beat Ausfidius’ head below his knee, And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with Valeria and her Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam,—

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What, are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith.—How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster.

Val. O’ my word, the father’s son: I’ll swear, ’tis a very pretty boy. O my troth, I looked upon him o’ Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again; or whether his full currage him, or how ’twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it; O, I warrant, how he mammocked it! 12

Vol. One of his father’s moods.

Val. Indeed la, ’tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam. 13

Vol. Come, lay aside your stichery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Vol. Not out of doors!

Val. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience: I will not over the threshold, till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fye, you confine yourself most unreasonably; Come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Vol. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun, in Ulysses' absence, did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would, your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Vol. In truth, sa, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Vol. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Vol. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is:—The Volscs have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord, and Titus Lartius, are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady; as she is now, she will but dace our better mirth.

Vol. In troth, I think, she would:—Fare you well then.—Come, good sweet lady. —Pr'ythee, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No; at a word, madam; indeed, I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Vol. Well, then farewell. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news:—A wager, they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view; but have not spoke as yet.
Further than seen, and one infect another
Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese,
That bear the shapes of men, how have you run
From slaves that apes would beat? Pluto and hell!
All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale
With flight and agued fear! Mend, and charge home,
Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe,
And make my wars on you: look to 't: Come on;
If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives,
As they us to our trenches followed.

Another Alarum. The Volscs and Romans re-enter, and the fight is renewed. The Volscs retire into Corioli, and Marcius follows them to the Gates.

So, now the gates are ope:—Now prove good seconds:
'Tis for the followers fortune widens them,
Not for the fliers; mark me, and do the like,
[He enters the Gates, and is shut in.
1st Sol. Foul-hardiness; not I.
2nd Sol. Nor I.
3rd Sol. See, they.
Have shut him in.
[Alarum continues.
All. To the pot, I warrant him.

Enter Titus Lartius.
Lart. What is become of Martius?
All. Slain, sir, doubtless.
1st Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,
With them he enters: who, upon the sudden,
Clapp'd-to their gates; he is himself alone,
To answer all the city.
Lart. O noble fellow!
Who, sensible, outdazs his senseless sword,
And, when it blows, stands up! Thou art left, Marcius:
A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible
Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks, and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds,
Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world
Were feverous, and did tremble.

Re-enter Marcius, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.
1st Sol. Look, sir.
Lart. 'Tis Marcius:
Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.
[They fight, and all enter the City.

SCENE V.—Within the Town. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with Spoils.
1st Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2nd Rom. And I this.
3rd Rom. A murain on 't! I took this for silver.
[Alarum continues still afier off.

Enter Marcius, and Titus Lartius, with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours.
At a crack'd drachm! Cushions, leaden spoons,
Irons of a doit, doubelts that hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves, Ere yet the fight be done, pack up:—Down with them.—
And hark, what noise the general makes!—To
him:—
There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans: Then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city;
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste
To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent for
A second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not:
My work hath yet not warm'd me: Fare you well.
The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: To Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms
Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So, farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!—[Exit Mar.
Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers of the town,
Where they shall know our mind: Away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Near the Camp of Cominius.

Enter Cominius and Forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends; well fought: we are come off
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
We shall be charg'd again. While we have struck,
By interims, and conveying gusts, we have heard
The charges of our friends:—The Roman gods,
Lead their successes as we wish our own;
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering,

Enter a Messenger.

May give you thankful sacrifice!—Thy news?
Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Marius battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.
Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks, thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?
Mess. Above an hour, my lord.
Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How could'st thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late.
Mess. Spies of the Volscans
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir,
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter Marius.

Com. Who is yonder,
That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marius; and I have Before-time seen him thus.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor,
More than I know the sound of Marius' tongue
From every meaner man's.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.
Mar. O! let me clip you
In arms as sound, as when I woo'd; in heart
As merry, as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward.
Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?
Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning the other;
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.
Com. Where is that slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.

290
As cause will be obey’d. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin’d.
	Com.” March on, my fellows:
Mako good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a Guard upon Corioli, going with a Drum and Trumpet toward CMI-NIUS and CADIUS MARCIUS, enters with a Lieutenant, a Party of Soldiers, and a Scant.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: If we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lien. Fear not our care, sir.
Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.—
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarum. Enter MARCIUS and Aufidius.

Mar. I’ll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Aus. We hate alike;
Not Africk owns a serpent, I abhor
More than thy fame and envy: Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first bodger die the other’s slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Aus. If I fly, Marcius,
Halloo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas’d; ’Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me mask’d; for thy revenge,
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Aus. Wert thou the Hector,
That was the whip of your bragg’d progeny,
Thou should’st not scape me here.—
[They fight, and certain Volscs come to the aid of Aus.

Officious, and not valiant—you have sham’d me
In your condemned seconds.
[Exeunt fighting, driven in by Mar.

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A Retreat is sounded. Flourish. Enter at one side, Cominius, and Romans; at the other side, Marcus, with his Arm in a Scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o’er this thy day’s work,
Thou’lt not believe thy deeds: but I’ll report it,
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles;
Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug,
I’ the end, admire; where ladies shall be frightened,
And, gladly quak’d, hear more; where the dull
Tribunes,
That, with the dusty plebeians, hate thine honours, Shall say, against their hearts,—“ We thank the gods,
Our Rome hath such a soldier!”
Yet can’st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully dined before.

Enter Titus Lartius, with his Power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:
Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me, grieves me. I have done,
As you have done; that’s what I can; induc’d
As you have been; that’s for my country:
He, that has but effected his good will,
Hath overta’en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know
The value of her own: ‘twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which, to the spire and top of praises you’d,
Would seen but modest: Therefore, I beseech you,
(In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,) before our army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart
To hear themselves remember’d.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester ’gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses, (Whereof we have ta’en good, and good store,) of all
The treasure, in this field achiev’d, and city,
We render you the tenth; to be ta’en forth
Before the common distribution, at Your only choice.

Mark. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

[A long Flourish. They all cry, Marcus! Marcus! cast up their Cops and Lancees: Com. and Lart. stand bare.

Mark. May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall I the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-fac’d soother! When steel grows
Soft as the parasite’s silk, let him be made
An overture for the wars! No more, I say;
For that I have not wash’d my nose that bled,
Or foil’d some debile wretch,—which, without note,
Here’s many else have done,—you shout me forth
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I loved my little should be dictated
In praises sauc’d with lies.

Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report, than grateful
To us that give you truly: by your patience,
If ’gainst yourself you be inens’d, we’ll put you (Like one that means his proper harm,) in manacles,
Then reason safely with you.—Therefore, be it
known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius
Wears this war’s garland: in token of the which
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and, from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
Caius Marcius Coriolanus.—
Bear the addition nobly ever!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums.
All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!
Cor. I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: Howbeit, I thank you:—
I mean to strike your steed; and, at all-times,
To underest your good addition,
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent:
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success.—You, Titus Lartius,
Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good, and ours.

292

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I that now
Refus’d most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it: ’tis yours.—What is’t?
Cor. I sometime lay, here in Corioli,
At a poor man’s house; he us’d me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But when Anfidius was within my view,
And wrath o’erwhelm’d my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well begg’d!
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free, as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.
Lart. Marcus, his name?
Cor. By Jupiter, forgot:—
I am weary; yea, my memory is tir’d.—
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries: ’tis time
It should be look’d to: come.

[Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Voices.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter Tellus Aufidius, bloody, with Two or Three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta’en!
1st Sol. ’Twill be deliver’d back on good condition.

Auf. Condition?—
I would, I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Voice, be that I am.—Condition
What good condition can a treaty find
I the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat
me;
And would’st do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat.—By the elements,
If o’er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his: Mine emulation
Hath not that honour in’t, it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force,
(True sword to sword,) I’ll potch at him some way;
Or wrath, or craft, may get him.

1st Sol. He’s the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle: My valour’s poison’d,
With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep, nor sanctify,
Being naked, sick: nor faire, nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom ’gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, 19 even there
Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in his heart. Go you to the city;
Learn, how 'tis held; and what they are, that must Be hostages for Rome.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SCINCIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The angrier tells me, we shall have news to-morn.

Brut. Good, or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sci. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sci. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry ple beians would the noble Marcius.

Brut. He's a lamb indeed, that bees like a bear.

Men. He's a bear, indeed, that lives like a lamb.

You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor, that you two have not in abundance?

Brut. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

Sci. Especially, in pride.

Brut. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very lit tle thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your disposition the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so. You blame
Marcius for being proud?

Brut. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know, you can do very little alone; for your helps are many; or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O, that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O, that you could!

Brut. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, (aliases, fools,) as any in Rome.

Sci. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humble patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tyber in 't; said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first complaint: hasty, and tinder-like, upon too trivial motion: one that converses more with the buttock of the night; 21 than with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I utter; and spend my malice in my breath: Meeting two such weak-men as you are,
(I cannot call you Lyceurgases) if the drink you gave me, touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say, your worship have delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men; yet they lie deadly, that tell, you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it, that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bissone conspectuities glean out of this cha racter, if I be known well enough too?

Brut. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs; 32 you wear out a good wholesome fore noon, in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fessedeller; and then rejourn the contro versy of three-pence to a second day of audience.—
When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the choliick, you make faces like mummers; set up the bloody flag against all patience;® and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause, is, calling both the parties knives; You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table, than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave, as to stuff a butcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors, since Deucalion, though, peradventure, some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. Good e'en to your worship; more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[Brutus and Sicinius retire to the back of the scene.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee:—Hoo! Marcius coming home!

Two Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night:—A letter for me?

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me? It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiriculick,® and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O, no, no, no.
In honour follows, Coriolanus:
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

[Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!
Cor. No more of this, it does offend my heart;
Pray now, no more.
Com. Look, sir, your mother,—
Cor. You have, I know, petition’d all the gods
For my prosperity.

[Kneels.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;
My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly nam’d,
What is it? Coriolanus, must I call thee?
But O, thy wife——
Cor. My gracious silence, hail!
Would’st thou have laugh’d, had I come coiffin’d home,
That weep’st to see me triumph? Ah, my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now the gods crown thee!
Cor. And live you yet?—O my sweet lady, pardon.

[To Val.

Vol. I know not whero to turn:—O welcome home;
And welcome, general;—And you are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,
And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy: Welcome:
A curse begin at very root of his heart,
That is not glad to see thee!—You are three,
That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of men,
We have some old crab-trees here at home, that will not
Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors:
We call a nettle, but a nettle: and
The faults of fools, but folly.

Com. Ever right.
Cor. Mencenius, ever, ever.
Jer. Give way there, and go on.
Cor. Your hand, and yours:
[To his Wife and Mother.

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have receiv’d not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.
Vol. I have lived
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only there
Is one thing wanting, which I doubt not, but
Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother, I had rather be their servant in my way,
Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol.

[Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before.
The Tribunes remain.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectacled to see him: Your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry,26
While she chats him: the kitchen maids pluck
Her richest lockram ‘bout her reechy neck,25
Clambering the walls to eye him: Stalls, bulks, windows,
Are smoother’d up, leads fill’d, and ridges hors’d
With variable complexion: all agreeing
In earnestness to see him: sold-shown flamens27
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station: our veil’d dames Commit the war of white and damask, in
Their nicely-gawded cheeks, to the wanton spoil
Of Phæbus’ burning kisses: such a pother,
As if that whatsoever god, who leads him,
Wero slyly crept into his human powers,
And gave him gracefull posture.

Sie. On the sudden,
I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.

Sie. He cannot temperately transport his honours
From where he should begin, and end; but will Lose those that he hath won.

Bru. In that there’s comfort.

Sie. Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand,
But they, upon their ancient malice, will Forget, with the least cause, these his new honours;
Which that he’ll give them, make as little question
As he is proud to do’t.

Bru. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i’t the market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture o’ humiliation;
Nor, showing (as the manner is) his wounds
To the people, beg their sticking breaths.

Sie. ‘Tis right.

Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it, rather Than carry it, but by the suit o’ the gentry to him,
And the desire of the nobles.

Sie. I wish no better,
Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it
In execution.
Tis most like, he will.
Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills;
A sure destruction. 28
Bru. So it must fall out
To him, or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people, in what hatred
He still hath held them; that, to his power, he would Have made them mules, silene'd their pleaders, and Dispropertied their freedoms: holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul, nor fitness for the world,
Than camels in their war; who have their provand
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.
Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall teach the people, (which time shall not want,
If he be put upon 't; and that's as easy,
As to set dogs on sheep,) will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?
Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought,
That Marcus shall be consul: I have seen
The dumb men throng to see him, and the blind
To hear him speak: The matrons flung their gloves,
Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchiefs,
Upon him as he pass'd: the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue; and the commons made
A shower, and thunder, with their caps, and shouts:
I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.
Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Capitol.

Enter Two Officers, to lay Cushions.

1st Off. Come, come, they are almost here: How many stand for consulships?
2nd Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one, Coriolanus will carry it.
1st Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengence proud, and loves not the common people.
2nd Off. 'Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground:
Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and out of his noble carelessness, let's them plainly see 't.
1st Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he waived indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good, nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone, that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people, is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.
2nd Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country: And his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those, who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to heave them at all into their estimation and report:
but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes,
and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury; to report otherwise, were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.
1st Off. No more of him; he is a worthy man:
Make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter, with Lictors before them, Cominius the Consul, Menenius, Coriolanus, many other Senators, Sicinius, and Brutus. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volces, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service, that Hath thus stood for his country: Therefore, please
you,
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcus Coriolanus; whom
We meet here, both to thank, and to remember
With honours like himself.
1st Sen. Speak, good Cominius
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think,
Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than wo to stretch it out. Masters o' the people,
We do request your kindest ears; and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body
To yield what passes here.
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee 31 in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene, 32
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea;
And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch'd all swords o' the garland. For this last,
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: He stopp'd the fliers;
And, by his rare example, made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as waves before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword (death's stamp)
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was timed with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate o' the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny, aidless came off;
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli, like a planet: Now all's his:
When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense: then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quick'en what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoil: and, till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!
1st Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours
Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at;
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o' the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them; and is content
To spend the time, to end it.

Men. He's right noble;
Let him be call'd for.
1st Sen. Call for Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear

Re-enter Coriolanus.

Men. Tho' senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life, and services.

Men. It then remains,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom; for I cannot 297

Put on the gown, stand naked, and entertain them, For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage: please you, That I may pass this doing.

Sir. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bat
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to 't:—
Pray you, go fit you to the custom; and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?
Cor. To bring unto them.—Thus I did, and thus:—
Show them the unaching scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only:—

Men. Do not stand upon 't.—
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them;—and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour! [Flourish. Then exit Sen.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sir. May they perceive his intent! He that will require them,
As if he did commend what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know, they do attend us. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

1st Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2nd Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

3rd Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do; for if he shew us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous: and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1st Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve: for once, when we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

3rd Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass.

2nd Cit. Think you so? Which way, do you judge, my wit would fly?

3rd Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will, 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head: but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward.

2nd Cit. Why that way?

3rd Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience sake, to help to get thee a wife.

2nd Cit. You are never without your tricks:—
You may, you may.

3rd Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices?
But that's no matter, the greater part carries it.
I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus and Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility; mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars: wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt.

Men. O sir, you are not right: have you not known
The worthiest men have done it?

Cor. What must I say?—
I pray, sir,—Plague upon 't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace:—Look, sir;—my wounds:—
I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd, and ran
From the noise of our own drums.

Men. O me, the gods! You must not speak of that; you must desire them
To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me? Hang 'em!
I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by them.88

208
CAVANDENHOFF AS CORIOLANUS

COR: Most sweet voices!
Better it is to die, better to starve,
Than crave the bread which first we so despised.

Act II. Sc. 2
ACT II.

Men.

You'll mar all;
I'll leave you: Pray you, speak to them, I pray you,
In wholesome manner.

[Exit.

Enter Two Citizens.

Cor.
Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean.—So, here comes a brace,
You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.
1st Cit. Wo do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to 't.
Cor. Mine own desert.
2nd Cit. Your own desert?
Cor. Ay, not
Mine own desire.
1st Cit. How! not your own desire?
Cor. No, sir;
'Twas never my desire yet,
To trouble the poor with begging.
1st Cit. You must think, if we give you anything,
We hope to gain by you.
Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o' the consulship?
1st Cit. The price is, sir, to ask it kindly.
Cor. Kindly?
Sir, I pray, let me ha' t: I have wounds to show you,
Which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, sir;
What say you?
2nd Cit. You shall have it, worthy sir.
Cor. A match, sir:—
There is in all two worthy voices begg'd:—
I have your utmost; adieu.
1st Cit. But this is something odd.
2nd Cit. An 'twere to give again,—But 'tis no matter.
[Exeunt Two Citizens.

Enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices, that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.
3rd Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.
Cor. Your enigma?
3rd Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not, indeed, loved the common people.
Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeily; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

4th Cit. We hope to find you our friend; and therefore give you our voices heartily.
3rd Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.
Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further.
Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily!

[Exeunt.

Cor. Most sweet voices!—
Better it is to die, better to starve,
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.
Why in this woolish gown should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,
Their needless vouches? Custom calls me 't:—
What custom wills, in all things should we do 't,
The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
And mountainous error be too highly heap'd
For truth to over-peer.—Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus,—I am half through;
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter Three other Citizens.

Here come more voices,—
Your voices: for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices, bear
Of wounds two dozen odd; battles threesix
I have seen, and heard of; for your voices, have Done many things, some less, some more: your voices:
Indeed, I would be consul.
5th Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.
6th Cit. Therefore let him be consul: The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!
All. Amen, amen.—
God save thee, noble consul!
[Exeunt Citizens.

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS, and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice; Remains,
That, in the official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate.
Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharge’d:
The people do admit you; and are summon’d
To meet, anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I then change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I’ll go straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I’ll keep you company.—Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Cor. and Men.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
’Tis warm at his heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds: Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters? have you chose this man?

1st Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods, he may deserve your loves.

2nd Cit. Amen, sir: To my poor unworthy notice,
He mock’d us, when he begg’d our voices.

3rd Cit. Certainly,
He flout’d us down-right.

1st Cit. No; ’tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us.

2nd Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says,
Us’d us scornfully: he should have show’d us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv’d for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Cit. No; no man saw ’em.

[Several speak.]

3rd Cit. He said, he had wounds, which he could show in private;
And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
“ I would be consul,” says he: ’ aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;”4
Your voices therefore:”’ When we granted that, Here was,—“ I thank you for your voices,—thank
you,—
Your most sweet voices:—now you have left your voices,
I have no further with you:”’—Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either, you were ignorant to see ’t?
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

300

Bru. Could you not have told him,
As you were lesson’d,—When he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever spake against
Your liberties, and the charters that you bear
I the body of the weal: and now, arriving
A place of potency, and sway o’ the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might Be curses to yourselves? You should have said,
That, as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for; so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis’d, had touch’d his spirit,
And try’d his inclination; from him pluck’d
Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call’d you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall’d his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage,
You should have ta’en the advantage of his choler,
And pass’d him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive,
He did solicit you in free contempt,
When he did need your loves; and do you think,
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? Or had you tongues, to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you,
Ere now, deny’d the asker? and, now again,
On him, that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your su’d-for tongues?

3rd Cit. He’s not confirm’d, we may deny him yet.

2nd Cit. And will deny him:
I’ll have five hundred voices of that sound.

1st Cit. I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece ’em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly; and tell those friends,—
They have chose a consul, that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election: Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed;
ACT II.

CORIOLANUS.

SCENE I.

How in his suit he scorn'd you: but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which glibly, ungravelvly he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay a fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd (No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment, than as guided
By your own true affections: and that, your minds
Pre-occupied with what you rather must do
Than what you should, made you against the grain
To voice him consul: Lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say, we read lectures
to you,
How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continued: and what stock he springs of;
The noble house o' the Marsians; from whence came
That Ancus Marcius, Num'm's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king:
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And Censorinus, darling of the people,
And nobly nam'd so, being censor twice,
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Sealing his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say, you ne'er had done't,
(Harp on that still,) but by our putting on:
And presently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to the Capitol.

Cit. We will so: almost all [Several speaK.
Repent in their election. [Exeunt Cit.

Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay, past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol:
Come; we'll be there before the stream o' the people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. A Street.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenious, Cominius, Titus Lartius, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Talilus Aufidius then had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was, which caus'd
Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then, the Volscs stand but as at first;
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road
Upon us again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safe-guard he came to me, and did curse
Against the Volscs, for they had so vilely
Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. IIIo did, my lord.

Cor. How? what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword:
That, of all things upon the earth, he hated
Your person most: that he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish, I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome homo. [To Lart.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o' the common mouth. I do despise them;
For they do prank them in authority,
Against all noble sufferance.
Coriolanus

Act III. Scene I.

Sic. Pass no further.
Cor. Ha! what is that?
Bru. It will be dangerous to Go on: no further.
Cor. What makes this change?
Men. The matter?
Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the commons?
Bru. Cominius, no.
Cor. Have I had children's voices?
1st Sen. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.
Bru. The people are incensed against him.
Sic. Stop, Or all will fall in broil.
Cor. Are these your herd?—
Must these have voices, that can yield them now,
And straight disdain their tongues?—What are your offices?
You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?
Have you not set them on?
Men. Be calm, be calm,
Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,
To curb the will of the nobility:—
Suffer it, and live with such as cannot rule,
Nor ever will be rul'd.
Bru. Call 't not a plot:
The people cry, you mock'd them; and, of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd;
Scandal'd the suppliants for the people; call'd them
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.
Cor. Why, this was known before.
Bru. Not to them all.
Cor. Have you inform'd them since?
Bru. How! I inform them!
Cor. You are like to do such business.
Bru. Not unlike,
Each way, to better yours.
Cor. Why then should I be consul? By yeo clouds,
Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.
Sic. You show too much of that,
For which the people stir: If you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit:
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.
Men. Let's be calm.
Com. The people are abus'd:—Set on.—This palt'ring
302
Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I' the plain way of his merit.
Cor. Tell me of corn!
This was my speech, and I will speak 't again;—
Men. Not now, not now.
1st Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will.—My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons:—
For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them
Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd, and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honour'd number;
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.
Men. Well, no more.
1st Sen. No more words, we beseech you.
Cor. How! no more?
As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lung
Coin words till their decay, against those meazels,56
Which we disdain to utter us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.
Bru. You speak o' the people
As if you were a god to punish not
A man of their infirmity.
Sic. 'Twere well,
We let the people know't.
Men. What, what? his choler?
Cor. Choler!
Were I patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind.
Sic. It is a mind,
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.
Cor. Shall remain!—
Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute 'shall'?
Com. 'Twas from the canon.
Cor. "Shall!"
O good, but most unwise patricians, why,
You grave, but reckless senators, have you thus Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory "shall," being but
The horn and noise o' the monsters, wants not spirit
To say, he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,
If they be senators; and they are no less,
When both your voices blended, the greatest taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate;
And such a one as he, who puts his "shall,"
His popular "shall," against a graver bench
Than ever found'd in Greece! By Jove himself,
It makes the consuls base: and my soul aches,
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well—on to the market-place.
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 'twas na'd
Sometimes in Greece,—

Men. Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. (Though there the people had more absolute power,) I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why, shall the people give
One, that speaks thus their voice?
Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know, the corn
Was not our recompense; resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service for 't: Being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd.
They would not thread the gates; 37 this kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis: being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them: The accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the native
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bosom multiplied digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's like to be their words:—"We did request it;
We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands;"—Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares fears; which will in time break one
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.—

Men. Come, enough.
Bru. Enough, with over-measure.
Cor. No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal!—This double worship,—

Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wis-

CANNOT conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpose: Therefore, base and
You,—
You that will be less fearful than discreet;
That love the fundamental part of state,
More than you doubt the change of 't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body 38 with a dangerous physic
That 's sure of death without it,—at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison: your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it;
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For the ill which doth control it.

Bru. He has said enough.
Sie. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch! despit o'erwhelm thee!—
What should the people do with these bold tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience falls
To the greater bench: In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
Then were they chosen; in a better hour,
Let what is meet, so said it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason.
Sie. This a consul? no.
Bru. The ædiles, ho!—Let him be apprehended.
Sie. Go, call the people; [Exit Batur.] in whose name, myself
Attach thee, as a traitorious innovator,
A foe to the public weal: Obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!
Sen. and Pat. We'll surety him.
Com. Aged sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.

Re-enter Batur, with the ædiles, and a rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect.
Sie. Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.
Seize him, Ædiles.

Cor.

No; I'll die here.

[Drawing his Sword.]

There's some among you have beheld me fighting;
Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

Men. Down with that sword;—Tribunes, withdraw a while.

Brutus. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help, Marcius! help, you that be noble; help him, young, and old!

Cit. Down with him, down with him! [In this Mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People, are all beat in.]

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone, away,

All will be naught else.

2nd Sen. Get you gone.

Cor. Stand fast; We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that? 1st Sen. The gods forbid! I pr’ythee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us,

You cannot tent yourself: Begone, beseech you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us.

Cor. I would they were barbarians, (as they are,
Though in Rome litter’d,) not Romans, (as they are not,
Though cal’d i’ the porch o’ the Capitol,)—

Men. Put not your worthy rage into your tongue;

One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground,

I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself

Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call’d foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabrick.—Will you hence, Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o’erbear
What they are used to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone:

I'll try whether my old wit be in request

With those that have but little; this must be patch’d

With cloth of any colour.

Com. Nay, come away.

[Exeunt Com., Com., and Others.]

1st Pat. This man has marred his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world: He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for his power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent:
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. [A noise within.

Here's goodly work!

2nd Pat. I would they were a-bed!

Men. I would they were in Tyber!—What, the vengeance,

Could he not speak them fair?

Re-enter Brutus, and Sicinius, with the Rabble.

Sic. Where is this viper,

That would depopulate the city, and

Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes.—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands; he hath resisted law,

And therefore law shall scorn him further trial

Than the severity of the public power,

Which he so sets at nought.

1st Cit. He shall well know,
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,

And we their hands.

Cit. He shall, sure on't.

[Several speak together. Sir,—

Men. Peace.

Sic. Men. Do not cry, hayvo, where you should but hunt

With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes it, that you

Have help to make this rescue?

Men. Hear me speak:—

As I do know the consul's worthiness,

So can I name his faults:—

Sic. Consul!—what consul?

Men. The consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He a consul!

Cit. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people,

I may be heard, I'd crave a word or two;

The which shall turn you to no further harm,

Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly then:

For we are peremptory, to despatch

This viperous traitor: to eject him hence,

Were but one danger; and, to keep him here,

Our certain death; therefore it is decreed,

He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid,

That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
ACT III.

CORIOLANUS.

SCENE II.—A Room in Coriolanus's House.

Enter Coriolanus, and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses's heels;
Or pile ten bills on the Tarpian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still
Be thus to them.

Enter Volumnia.

1st Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse, my mother
Does not approve me further, who was went
To call them woollen vassals, things created
To buy and sell with groats; to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace, or war. I talk of you; [To Vol.
Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me
False to my nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.

Vol. O, sir, sir, sir,
I would have had you put your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are,
With striving less to be so: Lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions, if
You had not show'd them how you were dispos'd
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter Menenius, and Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, something too rough;
You must return, and mend it.

1st Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray be counsel'd:
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain, that leads my use of anger,
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman:
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that
The violent fit o'the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. What then? what then?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them?—I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
I the war do grow together: Grant that, and tell me,
In peace, what each of them by th' other lose,
That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!

Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour, in your wars, to seem
The same you are not, (which, for your best ends
You adopt your policy,) how is it less, or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies on you to speak
To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you to,
But with such words that are but roseted in
Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all,
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.—
I would dissemble with my nature, where
My fortunes, and my friends, at stake, requir'd,
I should do so in honour: I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles; 40
And you will rather show our general louts
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon them,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!—
Come, go with us; speak fair: you may save so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand
ACT III.

And thus far having stretch'd it, (here be with them,) Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such business Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant More learned than the ears,) waving thy head, Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart, That humble, as the ripest mulberry, Now will not hold the handling: Or, say to them, Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils, Hast not the soft way, which, thou dost confess, Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim, In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far As thou hast power, and person.

Men. This but done, Even as she speaks, why, all their hearts were yours: For they have pardoned, being ask'd, as free As words to little purpose.

Vol. Pr'ythee now, Go, and be rul'd: although, I know, thou hast rather, Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf, Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter Cominius.

Com. I have been i' the market-place: and, sir, 'tis fit You make strong party, or defend yourself By calmness, or by absence; all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think 'twill serve, if he Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will:— Pr'ythee now, say, you will, and go about it. Com. Must I go show them my unbar'd sconce? Must I With my base tongue, give to my noble heart A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't: Yet were there but this single plot to lose, This mould of Marcus, they to dust should grind it, And throw it against the wind.—To the market-place:—

You have put me now to such a part, which never I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you. Vol. I pr'ythee now, sweet son: as thou hast said, My praises made thee first a soldier, so To have my praise for this, perform a part Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't. Away, my disposition, and possess me Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd, Which quired with my drum, into a pipe Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves Tent in my cheeks; and school-boys’ tears take up The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue Mako motion through my lips; and my arm’d knees, Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his That hath receiv'd an alms!—I will not do’t; Lest I successe to honour mine own truth, And, by my body's action, teach my mind A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice then; To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour, Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list. Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content; Mother, I am going to the market-place; Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves, Cog their hearts from them, and come home below'd Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going Commend me to my wife. I'll return consol'd; Or never trust to what my tongue can do I' the way of flattery, further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit. Com. Away, the tribunes do attend you: arm yourself To answer mildly: for they are prepar'd With accusations, as I hear, more strong Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is, mildly:—Pray you, let us go: Let them accuse me by invention, I Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly bo it then; mildly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. The Forum.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannical power: If he evade us there, Enforce him with his envy to the people; And that the spoil, got on the Antiaties, Was no'er distributed.—

Enter an Edile.

What, will he come?

Ed. He's coming.
How accompanied?

Æd. With old Monienius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
Set down by the poll?

Æd. I have; 'tis ready, here.

Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?

Æd. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, "It shall be so
I the right and strength of the commons," be it either
For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say, fine, cry "fine;" if death, cry "death;"
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i' the truth of the cause.

Æd. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

Æd. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give 't them.

Bru. Go about it.—

[Exit Æd.

Put him to choler straight: He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction: Being once chief'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks
What 's in his heart; and that is there, which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius,
Senators, and Patricians.

Sic. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.

Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knife by the volume.—The honour'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us!
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!

1st Sen. Amen, amen!

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Æd. List to your tribunes; audience: Peace, I say.

Cor. First, hear me speak.
ACT IV.

CORIOLANUS.

Scene 1.

But since he hath Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor. What do you prate of service?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Is this The promise that you made your mother?—

Know, I pray you,—

Cor. I'll know no further:

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,

Vagabond exile, flaying; Pent to linger

But with a grain a day, I would not buy

Their mercy at the price of one fair word;

Nor check my courage for what they can give,

To have 't with saying, Good morrow.

Sic. For that he has

(As much as in him lies) from time to time

Envied against the people, seeking means

To pluck away their power; has now at last

Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers

That do distribute it; In the name o' the people,

And in the power of us the tribunes, we,

Even from this instant, banish him our city;

In peril of precipitation

From off the rock Tarpeian, never more

To enter our Rome gates: I' th' people's name,

I say, it shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so,

It shall be so; let him away: he's banish'd

And so it shall be.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common

friends:—

Sic. His sentence'd: no more hearing.

Com. Let me speak:

I have been consul, and can show from Rome,

Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love

My country's good, with a respect more tender,

More holy, and profound, than mine own life,

My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,

And treasure of my loins; then if I would

Speak that—

Sic. We know your drift: Speak what?

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,

As enemy to the people, and his country:

It shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate

As reck o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcasses of unburied men

That do corrupt my air, I banish you;

And here remain with your uncertainty!

Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!

Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,

Fan you into despair! Have the power still

To banish your defenders; till, at length,

Your ignorance, (which finds not, till it feels,)

Making not reservation of yourselves,

(Still your own foes,) deliver you, as most

Abated captives, to some nation

That won you without blows! Despising,

For you, the city, thus I turn my back:

There is a world elsewhere.

Ed. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!]

Cit. Our enemy's banish'd! he is gone! Hoo! hoo!

[The People shout, and throw up their Caps.

Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,

As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;

Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard

Attend us through the city.

Cit. Come, come, let us see him out at gates;

come;—

The gods preserve our noble tribunes!—Come.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene 1.—The same. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears; a brief farewell:—

the heast

With many heads butts me away.—Nay, mother,

Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd
To say, extremity was the trier of spirits;

That common chances common men could bear;

That, when the sea was calm, all boats alike

Show'd mastership in floating: fortune's blows,

When most struck home, being gentle wounded,
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still: and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That’s worthy
As any ear can hear.—Come, let’s not weep.—
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I’d with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand:—
Come.

SCENE II.—The same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter Sicinius, Brutus, and an Edile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he’s gone, and we’ll no further.—
The nobility are vex’d, who, we see, have sided
In his behalf.

Brut. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem lumber after it is done,
Than when it was a doing.

Sic. Bid them home:
Say, their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Brut. Dismiss them home.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let’s not meet her.

Brut. Why?

Sic. They say, she’s mad.

Brut. They have ta’en note of us:
Keep on your way.

Vol. O, you’re well met: the hoarded plague o’ the gods
Require your love!

Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud.
Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—
Nay, and you shall hear some.—Will you be gone?

To Bae.

Vir. You shall stay too: [To Sic.] I would, I had the power
To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool! Is that a shame?—Note but this fool.—
Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome,
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!
Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise words; And for Rome's good,—I'll tell thee what;—Yet go:— Nay, but thou shalt stay too:—I would my son Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him, His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then?

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards, and all.— Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country, As he began; and not unknit himself The noble knot he made.

Brut. I would he had.

Vol. I would he had? 'Twas you incens'd the rabble: Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth, As I can of those mysteries which heaven Will not have earth to know.

Brut. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone: You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this: As far as doth the Capitol exceed The meanest house in Rome: so far, my son, (This lady's husband here, this, do you see,) Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Brut. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.— I would the gods had nothing else to do, [Exit Tribunes. But to confirm my curses! Could I meet them But once a day, it would unlog my heart Of what lies heavy to 't.

Men. You have told them home, And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself, And so shall starve with feeding.—Come, let's go: Leave this faint puling, and lament as I do, In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

SCENE III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium. Enter a Roman and a Voice, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against them: Know you me yet?

Rom. The same, sir. Vol. You had more beard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well appeared by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Voleanian state, to find you out there: You have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection: the people against the senators, patricians and nobles.

Vol. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness, to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished?

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, The fittest time to corrupt a man's wife, is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: You have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vol. A most royal one: the centurions, and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well let us go together. [Exit.

Enter Coriolanus, in mean Apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium: City, 'Tis I that made thy widows; many an heir Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars Have I heard groan, and drop: then know me not; Lest that thy wives with spiss, and boys with stones, Enter a Citizen.

In puny battle slay me.—Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will, Where great Aufidius lies: Is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state, At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, 'beseech you?

Cit. This, here, before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir; farewell.[Exit Cit.

O, world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart,
Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercize,
Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love
Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissension of a doit, break out
To bitterest enmity: So, fellest foes,
Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep
To take the one the other, by some chance,
Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends, And interjoin their issues. So with me:—
My birth-place hate I, and my love’s upon
This enemy town.—I'll enter: if he slay me,
He does fair justice; if he give me way,
I'll do his country service. [Exit.

SCENE V.—The same. A Hall in Aufidius’s House.

Music within. Enter a Servant.

1st Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.

Enter another Servant.

Enter Coriolanus.

Cor. A goodly house: The feast smells well: but I Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servant.

1st Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you: Pray, go to the door.

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment, In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servant.

2nd Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

2nd Serv. Away? Get you away.

Cor. Now thou art troublesome.

2nd Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a third Servant. The first meets him.

3rd Serv. What fellow's this?

1st Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o'the house: Pr'ythee, call my master to him.

3rd Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

3rd Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

3rd Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

3rd Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you; pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function, go!
And hasten on cold bits. [Pushes him away. 3rd Serv. What will you not? Pr'ythee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

2nd Serv. And I shall. [Exit 3rd Serv. Where dwellest thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

3rd Serv. Under the canopy?

Cor. Ay.

3rd Serv. Where's that?

Cor. I' the city of kites and crows.

3rd Serv. I' the city of kites and crows?—What an ass it is!—Then thou dwellest with daws too?

Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

3rd Serv. How, sir? Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honester service than to meddle with thy mistress;
Enter AUFIDUS and the second Servant.

AUF. Where is this fellow?

AUF. Whence comest thou? what wouldst thou? Thy name?

Cor. If, Tullus, [Unmuffling.

Not yet thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity Commands me name myself.

AUF. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volcians' ears, And harsh in sound to thine.

AUF. Say, what's thy name?

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face Bears a command in't; though thy tackle's torn, Thou show'st a noble vessel: What's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown: Know'st thou me yet?

AUF. I know thee not:—Thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done To thee particularly, and to all the Volcians, Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may My surname, Coriolanus: The painful service, The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood Shed for my thankless country; are required But with that surname; a good memory, And witness of the malice and displeasure Which thou should'st bear me: only that name remains;
The cruelty and envy of the people, Permitted by our dastard nobles, who Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest; And suffered me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity Hath brought me to thy hearth; Not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life; for if I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world I would have voiced thee: but in mere spite, To be full quit of those my banishers, Stand I before thee hero. Then if thou hast A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those mains Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight, And make my misery serve thy turn; so use it, That my revengeful services may prove As benefits to thee; for I will fight.
AUF. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have
The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission; and set down,—
As best thou art experienced, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways:
Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those, that shall Say, "yes," to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enomy;
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand! Most welcome!
[Exeunt Cor. and AUF.
1st Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!
2nd Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.
1st Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.
2nd Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: He had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.
1st Serv. He had so; looking as it were,— "Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.
2nd Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: He is simply the rarest man 'tis the world.
1st Serv. I think, he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot one.
2nd Serv. Who? my master?
1st Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that...
2nd Serv. Worth six of him.
1st Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.
2nd Serv. 'Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.
1st Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servant.

3rd Serv. O, slaves, I can tell you news; news, you rascals.
3rd Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations;
I had as lieve be a condemned man.
1st and 2nd Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?
3rd Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general,—Caesar Marcius.
1st Serv. Why do you say, thwack our general?
COELIOLANUS.

ACT IV.

1st Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another. 3rd Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars, for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Voleians. They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Public Place.

— Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;
His remedies are tame 't the present peace
And quietness o' the people, which before
Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends Blush, that the world goes well; who rather had,
Though they themselves did suffer by 't, behold
Dissentious numbers pesterling streets, than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their functions friendly.

— Enter Menenius.

Bru. Wo stood to 't in good time. Is this Menenius?
Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O, he is grown most kind
Of late.—Hail, sir!
Men. Hail to you both!
Sic. Your Coriolanus, sir, is not much miss'd,
But with his friends; the common-wealth doth stand;
And so would do, were he more angry at it.
Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if He could have temporiz'd.
Sic. Where is he, hear you?
Men. Nay, I hear nothing; his mother and his wife
Hear nothing from him.

— Enter Three or Four Citizens.

Cit. The gods preserve you both!
Sic. Good-o'en, our neighbours.
Bru. Good-o'en to you all, good-o'en to you all.
1st Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees,
Are bound to pray for you both.
Sic. Live, and thrive!
Bru. Farewell; kind neighbours: We wish'd
Coriolanus
Hadhov'd you as we did.
Cit. Now the gods keep you!
Both Tri. Farewell, farewell.  [Exeunt Cit.
Sic. This is a happier and more comely time,

Than when these fellows ran about the streets,
Crying, Confusion.
Bru. Caius Marcius was
A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent,
O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,
Self-loving,—
Sic. And affecting one sole throne,
Without assistance.
Men. I think not so.
Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
If he had gone forth consul, found it so.
Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome
Sits safe and still without him.

— Enter Ædile.

Æd. Worthy tribunes,
There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,
Reports,—the Volees with two several powers
Are enter'd in the Roman territories;
And with the deepest malice of the war
Destroy what lies before them.
Men. 'Tis Ausfidius,
Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world;
Which were insheld, when Marcius stood for Rome,
And durst not once peep out.
Sic. Come, what talk you
Of Marcius?
Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd.—It cannot be,
The Volees dare break with us.
Men. Cannot be!
We have record, that very well it can;
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this:
Lest you shall chance to whip your information,
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.
Sic. Tell not me
I know, this cannot be.
Bru. Not possible.

— Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles, in great earnestness, are going
All to the senate-house: some news is come,
That turns their countenances.
Sic. 'Tis this slave:—
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his raising!
Nothing but his report!
Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.
ACT IV.
CORIOLANUS.

Scene VI.

Sic. What more fearful?
Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths, (How probable, I do not know,) that Marcius, Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome; And vows revenge as spacious, as between The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely!

Bruc. Rais'd only that the weaker sort may wish Good Marcius home again.

Sic. The very trick on 't.

Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more alone, Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. You are sent for to the senate: A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius, Associated with Aufidius, rages Upon our territories; and have already, O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Com. O, you have made good work!

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and To melt the city leads upon your pates; To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses;—

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burned in their cement; and Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd Into an augre's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?— You have made fair work, I fear me:—Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volcians,

Com. He is their god; he leads them like a thing Made by some other deity than nature, That shapes man better: and they follow him, Against us brats, with no less confidence, Than boys pursuing summer butterflies, Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work, You, and your apron men; you that stood so much Upon the voice of occupation, and The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules Did shake down mellow fruit: You have made fair work!

316

Bruc. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale Before you find it other. All the regions Do triumphly revolt; and, who resist, Are only mock'd for valiant ignorance, And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?

Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone, unless The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it? The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they Should say, 'Be good to Rome,' they charg'd him even As those should do that had deserv'd his hate, And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand That should consume it, I have not the face To say, "Beseech you, cease."—You have made fair hands, You, and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought A trembling upon Rome, such as was never So incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Men. How! was it we? We lov'd him; but, like beasts, And cowardly nobles, gave way to your clusters, Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But, I fear They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius, The second name of men, obeys his points As if he were his officer:—Desperation Is all the policy, strength, and defence, That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clusters.— And is Aufidius with him?—You are they That made the air unwholesome, when you cast Your stinking, greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming; And not a hair upon a soldier's head, Which will not prove a whip; as many coxcombs, As you threw caps up, will he tumble down, And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter; If he could burn us all into one coal, We have deserv'd it.

Cit. 'Faith, we hear fearful news.
1st Cit. For mine own part, When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity. 2nd Cit. And so did I. 3rd Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: That we did, we did for the best: and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will. Com. You are goodly things, you voices! Men. You have made Good work, you and your cry!—Shall we to the Capitol? Com. O, ay; what else? [Exeunt Com. and Men. Sie. Go, masters, get you home, be not dismay'd; These are a side, that would be glad to have This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home, And show no sign of fear. 1st Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said, we were the wrong, when we banish'd him. 2nd Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home. [Exeunt Cit.

Bru. I do not like this news. Sie. Nor I. Bru. Let's to the Capitol:—'Would, half my wealth Would buy this for a lie! Sie. Pray, let us go. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Camp; at a small distance from Rome.

Enter Aufidius, and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman? Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him; but Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat, Their talk at table, and their thanks at end; And you are darken'd in this action, sir, Even by your own. Auf. I cannot help it now; Unless, by using means, I lame the foot Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier Even to my person, than I thought he would, When first I did embrace him: Yet his nature In that's no changeling: and I must excuse What cannot be amended. Lieu. Yet I wish, sir, (I mean, for your particular,) you had not Join'd in commission with him: but either Had borne the action of yourself, or else To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure, When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems, And so he thinks, and is no less apparent To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly, And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state; Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon As draw his sword: yet he hath left undone That, which shall break his neck, or hazard mine, Whence'er we come to our account. Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down; And the nobility of Rome are his: The senators, and patricians, love him too: The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty To expel him thence. I think, he'll be to Rome, As is the osprey to the fish,47 who takes it By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride, Which out of daily fortune ever taints The happy man; whether defect of judgment, To fail in the disposing of those chances Which he was lord of; or whether nature, Not to be other than one thing, not moving From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace Even with the same austerity and garb As he contriv'd the war; but, one of these, (As he hath spices of them all, not all, For I dare so far free him,) made him fear'd, So hated, and so banish'd: But he has a merit, To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues Lie in the interpretation of the time: And power, unto itself most commendable, Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair To extol what it hath done. One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail; Rights by rights fouler, strengths by strengths do fail. Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, and Others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear, what he hath said,
Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him In a most dear particular. He call'd me, father:
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him,
A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel
The way into his mercy: Nay, if he coy'd To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name: I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. Coriolanus He would not answer to: forbade all names; He was a kind of nothing, titleless, Till he had forg'd himself a name i' the fire Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work: A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome, To make coals cheap: A noble memory!

Com. I minded him, how royal 'twas to pardon When it was less expected; He replied, It was a bare petition of a state To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well:
Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For his private friends: His answer to me was, He could not stay to pick them in a pile Of noisome, musty chaff: He said, twas folly, For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt, And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain Or two? I am one of those; his mother, wife, His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt Above the moon: We must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: If you refuse your aid
In this so never-heeded help, yet do not Upbraid us with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue, More than the instant army we can make, Might stop our countryman.

318
SCENE II.—An advanced Post of the Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guard at their Stations.

Enter to them, Menenius.

1st G. Stay: Whence are you?
2nd G. Stand, and go back.
Men. You guard like men; 'tis well: But, by your leave, I am an officer of state, and come to speak with Coriolanus.

1st G. From whence?
Men. From Rome.

1st G. You may not pass, you must return; our general will no more hear from thence.

2nd G. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire, before you'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends, if you have heard your general talk of Rome, and of his friends there, it is lots to blanks, my name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

1st G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow, thy general is my lover: I have been the book of his good acts, whenceso men have read his fame unparallel'd, hapy, amplified; for I have ever verified my friends, (of whom he's chief,) with all the size that verity would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes, like to a bowl upon a subtile ground, I have tumbled past the throw; and in his praise have, almost, stamp'd tho leasing. Therefore, fellow, I must have leave to pass.

1st G. 'Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastely. Therefore, go back.

Men. Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2nd G. Howsoever you have been his liar, (as you say, you have,) I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

Men. Has ho dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1st G. You are a Roman, are you?
Men. I am as thy general is.

1st G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the pulsed intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution; you are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

2nd G. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

1st G. My general cares not for you. Back, I say, go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood:—back,—that's the utmost of your having;—back.

Men. Nay, but fellow, fellow,—

Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou stand'st not i' the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueler in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee.—The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O, my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured, none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. Howl away?

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs are servanted to others: though I owe my revenge properly, my remission lies in Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much.—Therefore, be gone.
Mine ears against your suits are stronger, than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov’d thee,
Take this along; I write it for thy sake.

[Give a Letter.

And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,
I will not hear thee speak.—This man, Aufidius,
Was my beloved in Rome; yet thou beheldst—

[Exit Cor. and Auv.

1st G. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?
2nd G. ’Tis a spell, you see, of much power:
You knew the way home again.

1st G. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back?

2nd G. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there’s any, you are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself, fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! [Exit.

1st G. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

2nd G. The worthy fellow is our general: He is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Tent of Coriolanus.

Enter Coriolanus, Aufidius, and Others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow
Set down our host.—My partner in this action,
You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly
I have borne this business.

Auv. Only their ends
You have respected; stopp’d your ears against
The general suit of Rome; never admitted
A private whisper, no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man,
Whom with a crack’d heart I have sent to Rome,
Loved me above the measure of a father;
Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him: for whose old love, I have (Though I show’d sourly to him,) once more offer’d
The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only,
That thought he could do more; a very little
I have yielded too: Fresh embassies, and suits,
Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter

Will I lend ear to.—Ha! what shout is this?

[Shouts within.

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the same time ’tis made? I will not.—

Enter, in mourning Habits, Virgilia, Volumnia, leading young Marcius, Valeria, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour’d mould
Wherin this trunk was fram’d, and in her hand
The grand-child to her blood. But, out, affection!
All bond and privilege of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous, to be obstinate.—
What is that curt’se worth? or those doves’ eyes,
Which can make gods forsworn?—I melt, and am not
Of stronger earth than others.—My mother bows;
As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod: and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries, “Deny not.”—Let the Volscians Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I’ll never
Be such a goblin to obey instinct; but stand,
As if a man were author of himself,

Vir. My lord and husband!
Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus chang’d,
Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now,
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say,
For that, “Forgive our Romans.”—O, a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Now by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip
Hath virgin’d it e’er since. You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted: Sink, my knee, i’ the earth;

[Kneels.

Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless’d! I stand up.

Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee; and improperly
Show duty, as mistaken all the while
Between the child and parent.

[Kneels.

Cor. What is this?

Your knees to me? to your corrected son?
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds

[Act V. Coriolanus. Scene III.]
ACT V.

CORIOLANUS.

SCENE III.

Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun;
Murd'ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I holp to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle,
That's curbed by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dion's temple: Dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou may'st prove
To shame unvulnerable, and stick it the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy.

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace;
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before;
The things I have foresworn to grant, may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics:—Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: Desire not
To ally my rages and revenges, with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more! You have said, you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: Yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness: therefore hear us.

Cor. Anfius, and you Voles, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private.—Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment,
And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself,
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,
Constrains them, weep, and shake with fear and sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing

T. 2 T.

His country's bowels out. And to poor we,
Thine ennity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy: For how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray,
Where to we are bound; together with thy victory,
Where to we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse; or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win: for either thou Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin;
And bear the palm, for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
Then seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country, than to tread
(Trust to't, thou shalt not,) on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.

Fir. Ay, and on mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.

Boy. He shall not tread on me;
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Voles whom you serve, you might condemn us,
As poisonous of your honour: No; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Voles
May say, "This mercy we have show'd;" the Romans,
"This we receiv'd;" and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, "Be bless'd
For making up this peace!" Thou know'st, great son,
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses;
Whose chronicle thus writ,—"The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out;
Destroy'd his country; and his name remains
To the ensuing age, abhor'd." Speak to me, son;
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you, Stand to me in this cause.—O mother! wife!

_Auf._ I am glad, thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune.

[Aside.

_The Ladies make signs to Cor._

_Ay, by and by;

[To Vol. Vin. &c._

But we will drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which we,
On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace.

_[Exit._

SCENE IV.—Rome. _A public Place._

_Enter Menenius and Sicinius._

_Men._ See you yond' coign o' the Capitol; yond' corner-stone?

_Sic._ Why, what of that?

_Men._ If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him, But I say, there is no hope in't; our throats are sentenced, and stay upon execution.

_Sic._ Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

_Men._ There is difference between a grub, and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcus is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

_Sic._ He loved his mother dearly.

_Men._ So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now, than an eight year old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes. When he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corset with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done, is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

_Sic._ Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

_Men._ I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is 'long of you.

_Sic._ The gods be good unto us!

_Men._ No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them: and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you’d save your life, fly to your house;
The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune,And hale him up and down; all swearing, ifThe Roman ladies bring not comfort home,They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sir. What's the news?
Mess. Good news, good news;—The ladies have prevailed,
The Volscs are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone:A merrier day did never yet great Rome,No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sir. Friend,Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?
Mess. As certain as, I know the sun is fire:Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it?Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blownd tide,As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you;

[Trumpets and Hautboys sounded, and Drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.]
The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and sires,Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,Make the sun dance. Hark you! [Shouting again. Men.

This is good news;I will go meet the ladies. This VolumniaIs worth of consuls, senators, patricians,A city full; of tribunes, such as you,A sea and land full: You have pray'd well to-day;This morning, for ten thousand of your throatsI’d not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Shouting and Music.]

Sir. First, the gods bless you for their tidings:next,
Accept my thankfulness.
Mess. Sir, we have allGreat cause to give great thanks.
Sir. They are near the city?
Mess. Almost at point to enter.
Sir. We will meet them,And help the joy.

[Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the Stage.

1st Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome:Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:
Unshout the noise that banish’d Marcius,Repeat him with the welcome of his mother;Cry,—Welcome, ladies, welcome!—
All. Welcome, ladies! Welcome! [A Flourish with Drums and Trumpets.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antium. A public Place.

Enter Tullius Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city, I am here:Deliver them this paper: having read it,Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,Even in theirs and in the commons’ ears,Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse,The city ports by this hath enter’d, andIntends to appear before the people, hopingTo purge himself with words: Despatch.

[Exeunt. Attend.

Enter Three or Four Conspirators of Aufidius’ faction.

Most welcome!
1st Con. How is it with our general?
Auf. Even so,As with a man by his own alms empoison’d,And with his charity slain.
2nd Con. Most noble sir,If you do hold the same intent whereinYou wish’d us parties, we’ll deliver youOf your great danger.
Auf. Sir, I cannot tell;We must proceed, as we do find the people.
3rd Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst'Twixt you there’s difference; but the fall of eitherMakes the survivor heir of all.
Auf. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admitsA good construction. I rais’d him, and I pawn’dMine honour for his truth; Who being so heighten’d,He water’d his new plants with dews of flattery,Seducing so my friends: and, to this end,He bow’d his nature, never known beforeBut to be rough, unswayable, and free.
3rd Con. Sir, his stoutness,When he did stand for consul, which he lostBy lack of stooping.—

Auf. That I would have spoke of:Being banish’d for ’t, he came unto my heart;Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freshest men; serv'd his designs
In mine own person; helpt to reap the same,
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.

1st Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it. And, in the last,
When he had carried Rome; and that we look'd
For no less spoil, than glory,—

Auf. There was it;—
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him.
At a few drops of women's rheum, which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action; Therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and Trumpets sound, with great Shouts of the People.

1st Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

2nd Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear,
With giving him glory.

3rd Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more;
Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it,
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

1st Lord. And grieve to hear it.
What faults be made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fixes; but there to end,
Where he was to begin; and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge; &amp; making a treaty, where
There was a yielding; This admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches, you shall hear him.

Enter Coriolanus, with Drums and Colours; a Crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am returned your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage, led your wars, even to
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,
Do more than counterpoise, a full third part,
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Antiates.
Than shame to the Romans: and we here deliver,
Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' the senate, what We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor!—How now?—

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius.

Cor. Marcius!—

Auf. Ay, Marcius; Caius Marcius; Dost thou think I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
Coriolanus in Corioli?—
You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome
(I say, your city,) to his wife and mother;
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting Counsel o' the war; but, at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears,—

Cor. Ha!

Auf. No more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave!—
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords,
Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion
(Who wears my stripes impress'd on him; that must bear
My beating to his grave;) shall join to thrust
The lie unto him.

1st Lord. Peace, both, and hear no speak.
COR: Boy! False hound!
If you have writ your annals true, as there
That like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Plotted your voices in Corioli?
Alone I did it—Boy!

CORIOLANUS. Act 5, Sc. 5
Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volcke; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me.—Boy! False hound!
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your Volces in Corioli:
Alone I did it.—Boy!

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggar,
'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Con. Let him die for't. [Several speak at once.

Cit. [Speaking promiscuously.] Tear him to pieces, do it presently; He killed my son;—my daughter;—He killed my cousin Marcus;—He killed my father.—

2nd Lord. Peace, ho;—no outrage;—peace.
The man is noble, and his fame folds in
This orb o' the earth. His last offence to us
Shall have judicious hearing.52—Stand, Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O, that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!

Con. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.

[Auf. and the Con. draw, and kill Cor., who falls, and Auf. stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1st Lord. O Tullus,—

2nd Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereto valour will weep.

3rd Lord. Tread not upon him.—Masters all, be quiet;

Put up your swords.

Auf. My lords, when you shall know (as in this rage,
Provok'd by him, you cannot,) the great danger
Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours
To call me to your senate, I'll deliver
Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.

1st Lord. Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him: let him be regarded
As the most noble corse, that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.

2nd Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow.—Take him up:—
Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.—
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully:
Train your steel pikes.—Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.—

Assist. [Exeunt, bearing the Body of Coriolanus.

A dead March sounded.

A dead March sounded.
NOTES TO CORIOLANUS.

1. To scale it a little more.
   To scale, is to disperse. The meaning of the whole passage is, though many of you may have heard the story, still I will venture to repeat it, to spread a knowledge of it still wider.

2. Where the other instruments.
   Where is here used as sehereus; instruments are limbs or members.

3. Mutually participate.
   Participate is used for participant, or participating.

4. The one side must have bale.
   Bale is an old Saxon word for misery or calamity. Mr. Mason observes, that bale, as well as bane, signified poison, in Shakspere’s time. Mr. Malone says the word was antiquated in our poet’s age; still, it is to be found in Spence’s Fairy Queen,—

   For light she hated as the deadly bale.

5. —— Your virtue is
   To make him worthy, whose offence subdues him,
   And curse that justice did it.

   This is an obscure passage, but the meaning appears to be, your virtue consists in speaking well of the vicious man, and in cursing the justice that condemns him.

6. Their ruth, i.e. their pity, compassion.

7. As high as I could pick my lance.
   Pitch my lance, is the meaning; but pick is correct, and was anciently synonymous with pitch. Thus, in Froissart’s Chronicle, “and as he stouped downe to take up his swerde, the Frenche squyer dyd pycke his swerde at hym, and by hap strake hym through bothe the thyes.”

8. To break the heart of generosity.
   To give the final blow to the nobles. Marcius uses generosity to signify high birth.

9. Marcius, ‘tis true, that you have lately told us:
   The Volces are in arms.

   Marcius had himself only been told that the Volces were in arms, and could not therefore have told the senate. The meaning is,—you were right in your opinion as to what they would do, for they are now ready for the war which you anticipated.

10. Being moved, he will not spare to gird the gods.
   To gird, is to taunt, or sneer at. Mr. Malone says that an anonymous correspondent informs him, that in some parts of England, it means to push vehemently. To gird, likewise signified to pluck or twinge; hence, probably, it was metaphorically used in the sense of, to taunt or annoy by sarcasm.

11. Of his demerits rob Cominius.
   Merits and demerits had anciently the same meaning. Thus, in Othello:—

   ——— And my demerits
   May speak unbonneted.

   Again, in Hall’s Chronicle, Henry VI., fol. 69:—
   “This noble prince, for his demerits called the good Duke of Gloucester.”

12. To take in many towns.
   To take in, signified to overcome, to take possession of.

   A crack, literally means a boy; it is here used in answer to the assertion of Valeria, that he is a noble child, to imply that he will do—he will pass master.

14. ——— Thou want a soldier
   Even to Cato’s wish, not fierce and terrible
   Only in strokes.

   Plutarch, in The Life of Coriolanus, has this passage:
   “For he was even such another as Cato would have a soldier and a captain to be; not only terrible and fierce to lay about him, but to make the enemy afraid with the sound of his voice and the grimness of his countenance.” This passage led Shakspere into a great chronological error—that of making Cato anterior to Coriolanus.

15. Let’s fetch him off, or make remain alike.
   To make remain is an ancient and obsolete mode of speaking, which merely means—to remain. Time has pruned our language of many redundancies of expression.

16. See here these mowers, that do prize their hours.
   Pope reads—prize their honours: an ingenious alteration; but the text is doubtless correct. Hours is used as time.

17. The ports, i.e., the gates.

18. Those centuries.
   Centuries were companies of soldiers, consisting each of a hundred men. Hence the military title of Centurion, a commander of one of these regiments.
At home, upon my brother's guard.

Even were he in my own house, and with my brother stationed to protect him, still would I slay him.

I am attended at the cypress grove.

That is, waited for there.

One that converses more with the buttock of the night, &c.

That is, one that often goes to bed late, but seldom rises early.

You are ambitious for your men's caps and legs.

Anxious for their obeisance and respect, shown by bowing and humility.

Set up the bloody flag against all patience.

That is, declare war against patience. Dr. Johnson truly observes, that there is not wit enough in this satire to recompense its grossness.

The most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricattick.

This sentence contains an anachronism of near six hundred and fifty years. Menenius flourished about four hundred and ninety years before Christ, and Galen was born in the hundred and thirtieth year of the Christian era. Empiriattick is an adjective arbitrarily formed by our poet from the word empiric, a quack.

Into a rupture lets her baby cry.

Possibly into a rupture, to which children are liable from extreme fits of crying; or, a rupture may signify a fit; as we still say, that a child will cry itself into fits.

The kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lockran 'bout her reechey neck.

The kitchen malkin is the kitchen wench; a malkin or malkin, is properly a sort of mop, made of cloths, for the use of sweeping ovens: thence a figure of rags, dressed up, was so called; and from thence the name was transferred to any negligent, dirty woman. Lockran was a kind of cheap linen; and reechey is sweaty, greasy.

That is, priests who seldom exhibit themselves to public view.

It shall be to him, then, as our good wills;
A sure destruction.

Mr. Tyrwhitt says wills should be written will is: that is, it shall be to him of the same nature as our dispositions towards him—deadly.

You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not.

You did not flatter me, and therefore did not offend me.

When with his Amazonian chin.

That is, his chin smooth as a woman's; a chin on which there was no beard.

And struck him on his knee.

That is, to his knee: he did not give Tarquin a blow on the knee, but such a blow as made him fall upon his knee.

When he might act the woman in the scene.

Shakspere was hero thinking of the theatre, where the characters of women were represented by boys; but he falls into a great anachronism, as there were no theatres at Rome for the exhibition of plays for about two hundred and fifty years after the death of Coriolanus.

I would they would forget me, like the virtues Which our divines lose by them.

That is, I wish they would forget me as effectually as they do the virtuous precepts which the divines preach to them, and by so doing, lose their labour.

Aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me.

Shakspere is seldom particular about time and dates. the Romans had but lately changed the regal for the consular government; for Coriolanus was banished the eighteenth year after the expulsion of the kings.

On safe-guard he came to me.

That is, with a convoy—a guard appointed to protect him.

Against those meazels.

Meazel is a scurvy or low fellow. In The London Prodigal, Oliver, the Devonshire man, says—"I wad you were yspilt, and you let the mezel have a penny." Mezell is used in Pierce Plowman's Vision for a leper.

They would not thread the gates.

That is, pass them, go through them. So in King Lear—

Threading dark-e'y'd night.

To jump a body.

To jump is not unfrequently used by the old writers for fell; therefore to jump a body may mean to put it in a violent agitation or commotion. Shakspere appears to have used the word elsewhere in the sense of risk or hazard; thus in Macbeth—

We 'd jump the life to come.

Again in Antony and Cleopatra—

Our fortune lies
Upon this jump.

It may also fairly have this meaning attributed to it in the present passage.

This is clean kam.

Kam is crooked, awry; a crooked stick is called a cambrel, and the Welsh word for crooked is kam. Vulgar pronunciation has corrupted clean kam into kim kam, which phrase occurs several times in the old translation of Guzman de Alfarache, of which the following is an instance:—"All goes topsie turvy; all kim, kam; all is tricks and devices; all riddles and unknown mysteries."

45 ———I am in this.
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles.
That is, in thus persuading you I act as your wife, your son, as these senators and nobles, who all join with me in a desire for your welfare, and whose interests you sacrifice by a refusal.

41 Which quired with my drum.
That is, played in concert with it. My spirits sympathised with warlike sounds.

43 Abated captives, i.e. dejected, subdued captives.
43 Cautelous, i.e. wily, cunning, cautious.

44 ——— Here I clip
The anvil of my sword.

To clip is to embrace. Ausilius calls Coriolanus the anvil of his sword, because he had struck as heavy blows at him, as a smith strikes on his anvil.

45 Sanctifies himself with his hand.
That is, considers the touch of his hand as holy, and clasps it with the same reverence as a lover would the hand of his mistress.

46 He’ll go, he says, and sowle the porter of Rome gates by the ears.
That is, drag him down by the ears into the dirt. Skinner says the word is derived from sowle; i.e. to take hold of a person by the ears as a dog seizes one of those animals. So Heywood, in a comedy called Love’s Mistress, 1636:—

Venus will sowle me by the ears for this.

To sowle is still in use for pulling, lugging, and dragging, in the west of England.

Whatever, says Mr. Tyrwhit, the etymology of sowle may be, it appears to have been a familiar word in the last century. Lord Strafford’s correspondent, Mr. Garrard, uses it as Shakspeare does. Strafford’s Letters, vol. ii., p. 149—A lieutenant soled him well by the ears, and drew him by the hair about the room."

47 As is the osprey to the fish.
An osprey is a kind of eagle, or a large and rare species of hawk; it hovers over streams, and feeds on fish. In Michael Drayton’s Polyolbion, song twenty-five, is the following account of the osprey, which shows the appropriateness of Shakspeare’s simile:—
The osprey, oft here seen, though seldom here it breeds, Which over them the fish no sooner doth espy, But, bewiht him and them by an antipathy, Turning their bellies up, as though their death they saw, They at his pleasure lie, to stuff his glutinous maw.

48 Nay if he coy’d.
Unwillingly condescended, acted with reserve and coldness.

49 Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions.
This is obscure, and apparently corrupt; we might read, to yield no new conditions.

50 ——— And in his praise
Hace, almost, stamp’d the leasing.

In his praise I have told falsehoods so plausibly, that they have passed as current, as if they had the stamp of truth.

51 A jack guardant.
An insolent officer; it is equivalent to a term still in use, namely, a Jack in office.

52 He that hath a will to die by himself.
He that is tired of life, and desires to die by his own hands.

53 But we will drink together.
This would represent the wife and mother of Coriolanus as rather jovial than delicate; drinking together was certainly used as a sign of amity, but I am inclined to adopt Dr. Farmer’s emendation, and read—think together.

54 ——— Answering us
With our own charge.

Rewarding us with our own expenses, throwing away the victory, and making the mere cost of war its recompense.

55 Judicious hearing.

Judicious is here either a corruption of judicial; i.e. such a hearing as is allowed to criminals in courts of judicature; or the word was anciently used in the same sense, as imperious is used by our author for imperial.

H. T.
Julius Caesar.

THE whole life of a hero is too comprehensive a subject, and usually embraces far too many incidents, to be effectively treated within the limits of a single tragedy. Many a dark and fearful act has required but an hour for its perpetration, and with the greatly active mind every year is equivalent to an ordinary life. We are made strongly sensible of this, in perusing the present tragedy; its subject is, not the life and deeds of Caesar, but his death, and the punishment of his assassins: not Caesar, but Brutus is the hero of the drama. But vigorously as Shakspere has delineated the character of the great warrior and historian, the brilliant and noble military despot, during the brief time that he appears upon the scene; still, we are disappointed that he disappears so soon, and would willingly that the play had commenced with an earlier period of his life, and that he had remained the hero to its conclusion. The subsequent adventures of Brutus and Cassius would have afforded the great poet ample materials for another tragedy; the first terminating with the death of Caesar, and the second with the defeat and suicide of his chief assassins.

Julius Caesar was a character worthy of the closest analytical investigation by the master-mind of Shakspere; his attainment of power, and his great influence with the Roman people, was entirely attributable to his lofty talents and indomitable courage; his patience under toil, his industry in the pursuit of success, his wise deliberation, and the unshaken steadiness with which he carried out his wonderful resolutions, were the terror of his adversaries, and the astonishment of the world.

Slender and feeble in person, and subject to violent headaches and epileptic fits, he never suffered these natural imperfections to interfere with his plans, or allure him into effeminacy; on one occasion, being out upon an excursion with some friends, they were overtaken by a violent storm, and sought for shelter in a mean hut, consisting of a single room, and that only large enough for one man to sleep in. This was, of course, offered to Caesar, but he declined it, and saying, “Honours for the great, and necessities for the infirm,” gave it up to his friend Oppius; and himself, and the rest of the company, slept under a shed at the door.

His lofty ambition was shown in many acts of early life: when passing the Alps, he and his friends came to a little town, when one of them said, jestingly, “Can there be any disputes for offices, any contentions for precedence, or such envy and ambition as we see among the great?” To this, Caesar replied proudly—“I assure you, I had rather be the first man here, than the second man in Rome.” When in Spain, he bestowed his leisure time in reading the history of Alexander, and once, after sitting over it for a long time in a pensive attitude, he burst into tears. His friends inquired the reason of his distress; “Do you think,” he replied, “I have not sufficient cause for concern, when Alexander at my age reigned over so many conquered countries, and I have not one glorious achievement to boast.”

Plutarch apologises for Caesar’s attempt at sovereignty, and says that his tyranny was merely nominal, for no tyrannical act could be laid to his charge; and he adds—“Nay, such was the condition of Rome, that it evidently required a master; and Caesar was no more than a tender and skilful physician appointed by Providence to heal the distemper of the state. Perhaps the darkest spot upon his character was his treatment of his son-in-law, Pompey the Great, upon whose destruction he had resolved, for the consolidation of his own power; and whose treacherous murder by the Egyptians formed a dark and fearful close to a brilliant career, spent chiefly in promoting the true interests of mankind. Almost the last words spoken by Pompey were these lines from Sophocles:

Seek’st thou a tyrant’s door? then farewell freedom!
Though free as air before.

T. 2 v 329
JULIUS CESAR.

Shakspere has very artistically alluded to the greatness and the fall of Pompey in the first scene of his tragedy, but he in no way points out Caesar as the cause of Pompey’s ruin and cruel death.

Brutus is delineated with great subtlety; his lofty integrity and wonderful self-denial, the purity of his life, his gentleness to his dependents, (so touchingly shown in his fatherly consideration for the boy Lucius,) and his noble patriotism, all are exquisitely pictured by the poet. His humanity also appears prominently even at the moment that he is consenting to the death of Caesar, and he depletes that they cannot destroy him painlessly—come at his spirit without shedding his blood. Brutus is chiefly blamed for his ingratitude to Caesar, against whom he had fought in conjunction with Pompey; and Caesar had not only pardoned him, and sought his friendship, but also forgave all for whom he interceded. Brutus says—

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crowned;

and the unbending republican sacrifices his friend to his country; and sheds the blood of Caesar, not for what he had done, but, for what he feared he would ultimately do. This is an act of injustice, for which Brutus is punished by the failure of his cause, and his own premature and violent death.

"Brutus," says Mr. Drake, "the favourite of the poet, is brought forward, not only adorned with all the virtues attributed to him by Plutarch, but, in order to excite a deeper interest in his favour, and to prove that not jealousy, ambition, or revenge; but unalloyed patriotism, was the sole director of his conduct—our author has drawn him as possessing the utmost sweetness and gentleness of disposition, sympathising with all that suffer, and unwilling to inflict pain, but from motives of the strongest moral necessity. He has most feelingly and beautifully painted him in the relations of a master, a friend, and a husband; his kindness to his domestics, his attachment to his friends, and his love to Portia, demonstrating that nothing but a high sense of public duty could have induced him to lift his hand against Caesar. It is this struggle between the humanity of his temper, and his ardent and hereditary love of liberty, now threatened with extinction, by the despotism of Caesar, that gives to Brutus that grandeur of character, and that predominancy over his associates in purity of intention, which secured to him the admiration of his contemporaries, and to which posterity has done ample justice, through the medium of Shakspere, who has placed the virtues of Brutus, and the contest in his bosom between private regard and patriotic duty, in the noblest light; wringing, even from the lips of his bitterest enemy, the fullest eulogium on the rectitude of his principles and the goodness of his heart."

Cassius is a man of more worldly wisdom than Brutus: his great tact and knowledge of human nature is displayed in his remark to Antony, to reconcile him to the murder of Caesar:—

Your voice shall be as strong as any man’s
In the disposing of new dignities.

Many touches of this worldliness appear in him: he is eminently fitted for a conspirator; but is still noble. We feel that Mark Antony, in his hour of triumph, slanders the memory of Cassius, in attributing his conspiring against Caesar merely to envy. The scene in the streets of Rome, where Cassius walks through the storm at night, amid the prodigies that foretell the death of the ambitious dictator, and bares his “bosom to the thunder-stone,” is the sublime of tragedy: it raises our expectations to the highest pitch, and is a fitting prelude to the approaching catastrophe: when Caesar, surrounded by fierce looks and glittering swords, and gashed with three-and-twenty hideous wounds, falls dead on the base of his rival’s statue, which is bespattered with his blood, and is supposed to look down, with grim satisfaction, on the death of his destroyer. The following scene, where Brutus, in his orchard, meditates the death of Caesar, is finer still: his struggle between tenderness and duty—his love for his friend, and his love for his country—his high bearing to his fellow-conspirators, where he deprecates the necessity of an oath to bind just men “that have spoke the word, and will not palter”—and his generous yielding of the secret to his heroic and noble wife—are all pregnant with the vivid fire of genius—all point to Shakspere as the master-bard, who, with exquisite and unerring colouring, has filled up the spirited sketches of Plutarch.

The speech of Brutus, in justification of his conduct, is a cold and feeble oration, but perhaps consistent with the stoical calmness of his temper: the fiery and eager Cassius would have made an infinitely better one. Antony's oration is a master-piece of eloquence—appealing, convicing, and then urging his listeners to vengeance. Shakspere treats the Roman people with too much levity. He certainly makes them very amusing, and brings them in, in admirable contrast to the serious characters and events of his tragedy. But they did not deserve this sarcasm: any people would have been affected by the brilliant and touching speech of Antony; and the Romans were, in reality, disposed to side with him, rather than with the conspirators. They only wanted reminding of the benefits Cæsar had conferred upon them, to break out into lamentation for his fall. Plutarch tells us—"The people lamented his death, and were implacably enraged against his assassins." But Shakspere forcibly points out the fatal consequences of popular excitement and fury, by representing the people, in the wildness of their ungoverned passion, tearing to pieces the unfortunate poet, Cinna, because he had the misfortune to possess the same name as one of the conspirators.

The parting of Brutus and Cassius on the eve of the battle at Philippi is beautifully touching; a cloud of sadness hangs over them; an ominous feeling that this is their "everlasting farewell," appears to strike them both, and despondency struggles with natural courage and determination. Cassius meets with a reverse of fortune, and then doubt of his partner's success—doubt, that "hateful error, melancholy's child," overcomes his failing heart, and urges him to the Roman hero's last refuge—suicide. The death of Brutus is melancholy in the extreme; the painful loss of his beloved Portia first shakes his heart, then follows the death of his friend Cassius, the defeat of his army, and with it the destruction of the republican cause. He recognises the hand of fate in it, and believing the gods to be adverse to his enterprise, exclaims:

O Julius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet!
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails.

The cold and selfish character of Octavius is strongly traced; his first act of power is one of cruelty, that of the proscription of the senators; the rest of his conduct is marked by littleness and cunning. In the early part of the tragedy, Shakspere introduces one of that class of characters that are almost peculiar to his pen, Cæsar, whose humorous bluntness lends variety and contrast to the opening scenes; "his rudeness" is truly, "a sauce to his good wit." It would have been interesting to the readers of the Roman classics, if Shakspere had introduced the orator Cicero more prominently; at present he is lost in the crowd of illustrious men who fill the scene and support the action, and when brought forward, is treated rather contemptuously than otherwise; but the great mass of materials the poet had in hand would not permit any further elaboration. Indeed, those who will trouble themselves to trace the history of the period will be astonished at the consummate art which Shakspere has used in the arrangement of events, and in the manner in which he has thrown the less important ones into perspective.

This tragedy, which Shakspere founded on events related by Plutarch, is attributed to the year 1607; in the same year, a tragedy upon the fate of Cæsar was published by William Alexander, afterwards Earl Sterline, but was not adapted for representation; and Gosson, in his School of Abuse, 1579, mentions a play by an anonymous author, entitled The History of Cæsar and Pompey. It does not appear that Shakspere was indebted to either of these tragedies for any hint for his own, although in Earl Sterline's drama, some passages are found bearing a feeble resemblance to others in Shakspere; but these, probably, have proceeded only from the two authors writing upon the same subject, and both borrowing their materials from the same source.

SCENE.—During a great part of the Play, at Rome; afterwards at Sardis; and near Philippi.
Julius Caesar.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Flavius, Marullus, and a Rabble of Citizens.

Flav. Hence; home, you idle creatures, get you home;
Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk,
Upon a labouring day, without the sign
Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?

1st Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—
You, sir; what trade are you?

2nd Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman,
I am but, as you would say, a coblcer.

1st Cit. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave; thou naughty knave, what trade?

2nd Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow?

2nd Cit. Why, sir, cobble you.

Fla. Thou art a coblcer, art thou?

2nd Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is, with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman’s matters, nor woman’s matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neats-leather, have gone upon my handy-work.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day? Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

2nd Cit. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Caesar, and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?
What tributaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
O, you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
Havo you climb’d up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yes, to chimney-tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The live-long day, with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Havo you not made an universal shout,
That Tyber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds,
Made in her concave shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now call out a holiday?
And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey’s blood?
Be gone;
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Fla. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault,
Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[Exit Citizens.

See, whe’r their basest metal be not mov’d;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I: Disrobe the images,
If you do find them deck’d with ceremonies.1

Mar. May we do so?

You know, it is the feast of Lupercal.

Fla. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Caesar’s trophies. I’ll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:

333
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Caesar's wing,
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch;
Who else would soar above the view of men,
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.  [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A public Place.

Enter, in Procession, with Music, Caesar; Antony, for the course; Calphurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, and Casca, a great Crowd following; among them a Soothsayer.

Cas. Calphurnia,—
Casca. Peace, ho! Caesar speaks.
[Music ceases.

Cas. Calphurnia,—
Cal. Here, my lord.
Cas. Stand you directly in Antonius' way
When he doth run his course. —Antonius.
Ant. Caesar, my lord,
Cas. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia: for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their steril curse.
Ant. I shall remember:
When Caesar says, "Do this," it is perform'd.
Cas. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.
[Music.

Sooth. Caesar.
Cas. Ha! Who calls?
Casca. Bid every noise he still:—Peace yet again.
[Music ceases.

Cas. Who is it in the press, that calls on me?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry, Caesar: Speak; Caesar is turn'd to hear.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Cas. What man is that!
Bru. A soothsayer, bids you beware the ides of March.
Cas. Set him before me, let me see his face.
Cas. Fellow, come from the throng: Look upon Caesar.
Cas. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Cas. He is a dreamer; let us leave him;—pass.
[Sonnet. Exeunt all but Bru. and Cas.
Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?
Bru. Not I.
Cas. I pray you, do.
Bru. I am not gnomes: I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.

Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness,
And show of love, as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd: If I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am,
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours:
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd;
(Among which number, Cassius, be you one;) Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof, this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?
Bru. No, Cassius: for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'Tis just:
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors, as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Caesar,) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me,
Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?
Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear.
And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous of me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laugh'er, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protestor; if you know
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandall them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.
[Flourish, and Shout.
Br. What means this shouting? I do fear, the people
Choose Caesar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.
Br. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well:—
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye, and death in the other,
And I will look on both indifferently:
For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.—
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Think of this life: but, for my single self,
I had as lief be not, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as myself.
I was born free as Caesar: so were you:
We both have fed as well; and we can both Endure the winter's cold, as well as he.
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tyber chafing with her shores,
Caesar said to me, "Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?"—Upon the word,
Accout'rd as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow: so indeed, he did.
The torrent roar'd; and we did buffet it
With lusty sinew; throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy.
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd Cæsar cried, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink." I, as Aeneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so, from the waves of Tyber
Did I the tired Caesar: And this man
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body,
If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: "tis true, this god did shake:
His coward lips did from their colour fly;
And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the world,
Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan:
Ay, and that tongue of his, that hade the Romans
Mark him, and write his speeches in their books,
Aha! it cried, "Give me some drink, Titinius,"
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should

So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone.

[Shout. Flourish.]
Br. Another general shout! I do believe, that these applauses are,
For some new honours that are heap'd on Caesar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world,
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus, and Caesar: What should be in that Caesar?
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well:
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure them,
Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Caesar. [Shout.
Now in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd:
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,
But it was fam'd with more than with one man?
When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide walks encompass'd but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.
O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
As easily as a king.

Br. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
What you would work me to, I have some aim;
How I have thought of this, and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said,
I will consider: what you have to say,
I will with patience hear: and find a time
Both meet to hear, and answer, such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this;
Brutus had rather be a villager,
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad, that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter Caesar, and his Train.

Bru. The games are done, and Caesar is returning.
Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve; And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you What hath proceeded, worthy note, to-day.
Bru. I will do so:—But, look you, Cassius, The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow, And all the rest look like a chidden train: Calphurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes, As we have seen him in the Capitol, Being cross'd in conference by some senators.
Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.
Cas. Antonius.
Ant. Caesar.
Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat; Sleek-headed men,3 and such as sleep o' nights: Yond! Cassius has a lean and hungry look; He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.
Ant. Fear him not, Caesar, he's not dangerous.
He is a noble Roman, and well given.
Cas. 'Would he were fatter:—But I fear him not; Yet if my name were liable to fear, I do not know the man I should avoid So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much; He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men: he loves no plays, As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music: Seldom he smiles; and smiles in such a sort, As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit That could be mov'd to smile at any thing. Such men as he be never at heart's ease, Whiles they behold a greater than themselves; And therefore are they very dangerous. I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd, Than what I fear, for always I am Caesar. Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf, And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.
[Execut Cæs. and his Train. CASCA stays behind.
Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; Would you speak with me?
Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day, That Caesar looks so sad.
Casca. Why you were with him, were you not?
Bru. I should not then ask Casca what hath chanc'd.
Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him; and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a shouting.
Bru. What was the second noise for?
Casca. Why, for that too.
him; if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.
Brut. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?
Cæsa. Ay.
Cas. Did Cicero say anything?
Cæsa. Ay, he spoke Greek.
Cas. To what effect?
Cæsa. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again: But those, that understood him, smiled at one another, and shook their heads:
but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.
Cæsa. Will you sup with me to-night, Cæsar?
Cæsa. No, I am promised forth.
Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?
Cæsa. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold,
and your dinner worth the eating.
Cas. Good; I will expect you.
Cæsa. Do so: Farewell, both. [Exit Cæsa.
Brut. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be?
He was quick mettle, when he went to school.
Cas. So is he now, in execution
Of any bold or noble enterprise,
However he puts on this tardy form.
This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.
Brut. And so it is. For this time I will leave
you:
To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you; or, if you will,
Come home with me, and I will wait for you.
Cas. I will do so:—till then, think of the world.
[Exit Brut.
Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet I see,
Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is dispos'd: Therefore 'tis meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes:
For who so firm, that cannot be seduced?
Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus:
If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name: wherein-obscurely Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And, after this, let Cæsar see him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure.
[Exit.
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny, that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure.

Cas. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Caesar be a tyrant then?
Poor man! I know, he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans kind.

Cas. Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak straws: What trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate

Cas. So vile a thing as Caesar? But, O, grief!
Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this Before a willing bondman: then I know
My answer must be made: But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Cas. You speak to Casca; and to such a man,
That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold my hand:
Be fictitious for redress of all these griefs;
And I will set this foot of mine so far,
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made.

Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans,
To undergo, with me, an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: For now, this fearful night,
There is no stir, or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element,
Is favour'd, like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna.

Cas. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;
He is a friend.—Cinna, where haste you so?
Cin. To find out you: Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not staid for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this?
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. Brutus's orchard.

Enter Brutus.

Brut. What, Lucius! ho! —
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day.—Lucius, I say!—
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.—

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?
Brut. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Brut. It must be by his death: and, for my part,
I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question.
It is the bright day, that brings forth the adder;
And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—

That;—

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him,
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins
Remorse from power: And, to speak truth of Caesar,
I have not known when his affections sway'd
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereeto the climber-upward turns his face:
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back.

Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend: So Caesar may;
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel
Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus: that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these, and these extremities:
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous;
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure,
It did not lie there, when I went to bed.
Brut. Get you to bed again, it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ide of March?
Luc. I know not, sir.
Brut. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.
Luc. I will, sir. [Exit.

Brut. The exhalations, whizzing in the air,
Giv so much light, that I may read by them.

[Opens the Letter, and reads.

"Brutus, thou sleepest; awake and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!
Brutus, thou sleepest; awake,—"

Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up.

"Shall Rome, &c." Thus must I piece it out;
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe. What?
Rome?
But honours you: and every one doth wish,
You had but that opinion of yourself,
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Brutus. He is welcome hither.
Cas. This Decius Brutus.
Brutus. He is welcome too.
Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this, Metellus Cimber.
Brutus. They are all welcome.
What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word?
[They whisper.]
Dec. Here lies the cause: Doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.
Cinna. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and you grey lines,
That fret the clouds, are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess, that you are both deceiv'd.
Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence, up higher toward the north
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Brutus. Give me your hands all over, one by one.
Cas. And let us swear our resolution.
Brutus. No, not an oath: If not the face of men,
The sufferation of our souls, the time's abuse,—
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery.  14
But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women; then, countrymen,
What need we any spur, but our own cause,
To prick us to redress? what other bond,
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not bate? and what other oath,
Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?
Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautious,
Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt: but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insupportable mettle of our spirits,
To think, that, or our cause, or our performance,
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood,
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

\textit{Cas.} But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think, he will stand very strong with us.

\textit{Casen.} Let us not leave him out.

\textit{Cin.} No, by no means.

\textit{Met.} O let us have him: for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said, his judgment rul'd our hands;
Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.

\textit{Brus.} O, name him not; let us not break with him:
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

\textit{Cas.} Then leave him out.

\textit{Casen.} Indeed, he is not fit.

\textit{Dec.} Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?

\textit{Cas.} Decius, well urg'd:—I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar,
Should outlive Cæsar: We shall find of him
A shrewed contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improves them, may well stretch so far,
As to annoy us all: which to prevent,
Let Anthony, and Cæsar, fall together.

\textit{Brus.} Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the head off, and then hack the limbs;
Like wrath in death, and envy afterwards:
For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.
Let us be sacrificers, but no butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood:
O, that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar! But, alas,
Cæsar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully,
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcase fit for hounds;\footnote{15}
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide them. This shall make
Our purpose necessary, and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm,
When Cæsar's head is off.

\textit{Cas.} Yet I do fear him:
For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar,

\textit{Brus.} Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself; take thought, and die for Cæsar:
And that were much he should; for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.

\textit{Treb.} There is no fear in him; let him not die;
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

\textit{Brus.} Peace, count the clock.

\textit{Cas.} The clock hath stricken three.

\textit{Treb.} 'Tis time to part.

\textit{Cas.} But it is doubtful yet,
Wh'ēr Cæsar will come forth to-day, or no:
For he is superstitious grown of late.
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies:
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustomed terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capital to-day.

\textit{Dec.} Never fear that: If he be so resolv'd,
I can o'ersway him: for he loves to hear,
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers:
But, when I tell him, he hates flatterers,
He says, he does; being then most flattered.
Let me work:
For I can give his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

\textit{Cas.} Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

\textit{Brus.} By the eighth hour: Is that the uttermost?

\textit{Cin.} Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

\textit{Met.} Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey;
I wonder, none of you have thought of him.

\textit{Brus.} Now, good Metellus, go along by him:
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

\textit{Cas.} The morning comes upon us: We'll leave you, Brutus:
And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember
What you have said, and show yourselves true
Romans.

\textit{Brus.} Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes;
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits, and formal constancy:
And so, good-morrow to you every one.

\textit{Exeunt all but Brus.}

Boy! Lucius!—Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleepest so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my lord!
Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?
It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw-cold morning.
Por. Nor for yours neither. You have un gently,
Brutus,
Stole from my bed: And yesternight, at supper,
You suddenly arose, and walk’d about,
Musing, and sighing, with your arms across:
And when I ask’d you what the matter was,
You star’d upon me with un gentle looks:
I urg’d you farther; then you scratch’d your head,
And too impatiently stamp’d with your foot:
Yet I insisted, yet you answer’d not;
But, with an angry wafture of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you: So I did;
Fearing to strengthen that impatience,
Which seem’d too much enkindled; and, withal,
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep;
And, could it work so much upon your shape,
As it hath much prevail’d on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.
Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.
Por. Brutus is wise and, were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.
Bru. Why, so I do:—Good Portia, go to bed.
Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical
To walk unbreasted, and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick;
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the night?
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of: And, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my one commendéd beauty,16
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy; and what men to-night
Have had resort to you: for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.
Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle
Brutus.
Within the bond of marriage, tell me Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself,
But, as it were, in sort, or limitation;
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus’ harlot, not his wife.
Bru. You are my true and honourable wife;
As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.
Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.
I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
A woman that lord Brutus took to wife:
I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
A woman well-reputed; Cato’s daughter.
Think you, I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father’d, and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose them
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound
Here, in the thigh: Can I hear that with patience,
And not my husband’s secrets?
Bru. O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife!

[Knocking within.
Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go in a while;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows:17—
Leave me with haste.

[Exit Por.

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

Lucius, who is that, knocks?
Luc. Here is a sick man, that would speak with
you.
Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.—
Boy, stand aside.—Caius Ligarius! how?
Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.
Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave
Caius,
To wear a kercchief? ’Would you were not sick!
Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.
Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.
Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome!
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified spirit. Now, bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Brutus. A piece of work, that will make sick men whole.

Lucius. But are not some whole, that we must make sick?

Brutus. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going
To whom it must be done.

Lucius. Set on your foot;
And, with a heart new-fir'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what; but it sufficeth,
That Brutus leads me on.

Brutus. Follow me then. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in Caesar's Palace.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Cæsar, in his Night-gown.

Cæsar. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out,
"Help, ho! They murder Cæsar!" Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Servant. My lord?

Cæsar. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Servant. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Calpurnia.

Cæsar. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæsar. Cæsar shall forth: The things that threaten'd me,
Ne'er look'd put on my back; when they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanquish'd.

Cæsarian. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelp'd in the streets:
And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead:
Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks, and squadrons, and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol:
The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan;
And ghosts did shriek, and squeal about the streets.
O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæsar. What can be avoided,
Whose end is purposed by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth: for these predictions
Are to the world in general, as to Cæsar.

Caesar. When beggars die, there are no comets seen;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæsar. Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear;
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a Servant.

Servant. What say the augurers?

Servant. They would not have you to stir forth to-day,
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæsar. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cæsar shall not: Danger knows full well,
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he,
We were two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible;
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Caesar. Alas, my lord, your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: Call it my fear,
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house;
And he shall say, you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæsarian. Mark Antony shall say, I am not well;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Decius. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar:
I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæsar. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them, that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false; and that I dare not, falser;
I will not come to-day: Tell them so, Decius.

Caesar. Say, he is sick.
JULIUS CAESAR.

Good-morrow, Casca.—Caius Ligarius, Caesar was ne'er so much your enemy, As that same age which hath made you lean.—What is 't o'clock?

Bruc. Caesar, 'tis strucken eight.

Ces. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter Antony.

See! Antony, that reveals long o'clocks, Is notwithstanding up:—

Good-morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Caesar.

Ces. Bid them prepare within:—

I am to blame to be thus waited for.—

Now, Cinna.—Now, Metellus.—What, Trebonius! I have an hour's talk in store for you;

Remember that you call on me to-day:

Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Caesar, I will:—and so near will I be, [Aside.

That your best friends shall wish I had been farther.

Ces. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me;

And we, like friends, will straightforward go together.

Bru. That every like is not the same, O Caesar, The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter Artemidorus, reading a Paper.

Art. Caesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Case; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar. If thou be'st not immortal, look about you: Security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, Artemidorus.

Here will I stand, till Caesar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments, that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Caesar, thou may'st live;
If not, the fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The same. Another part of the same Street, before the House of Brutus.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Par. I pr'ythee, boy, run to the senate-house; Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone: Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.
ACT III.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again,

Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there.—

O constancy, be strong upon my side!

Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue!

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel!—

Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?

Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,

For he went sickly forth: And take good note,

What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him.

Hark! boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Pr'ythee, listen well:

I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,

And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow:

Which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is 't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam, not yet; I go to take my stand,

To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Caesar

To be so good to Caesar, as to hear me,

I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why know'st thou any harm's intended

Towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I

Fear may chance.

Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:

The throng that follows Caesar at the heels,

Of senators, of praetors, common suitors,

Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:

I'll get me to a place more void, and there

Speak to great Caesar as he comes along. [Exit.

Por. I must go in.—Ah me! how weak a thing

The heart of woman is! O Brutus!

The heavens speed thee in thine enterprize!

Sure, the boy heard me:—Brutus hath a suit,

That Caesar will not grant.18—O, I grow faint:—

Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;

Say, I am merry: come to me again,

And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. The Capitol: the Senate sitting.

A Crowd of People in the Street leading to the Capitol; among them Artemidorus, and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter Caesar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony, Lepidus, Popilius, Publius, and Others.

Cas. The ide of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.

Art. Hail, Caesar! Read this schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read,

At your best leisure, this his humble suit.

Art. O, Caesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit

That touches Caesar nearer: Read it, great Caesar.

Cas. What touches us ourself, shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.

T. 2 y
Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back,\(^7\)
For I will slay myself.

\textit{Bru.} Cassius, be constant:
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;
For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.

\textit{Cas.} Trebonius knows his time: for, look you,
Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[\textit{Exeunt Ant. and Tre. Ces. and the Senators take their Seats.}]

\textit{Dec.} Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Caesar.

\textit{Bru.} He is address'd: \(^20\) press near, and second
him.

\textit{Cin.} Cassius, you are the first that rears your hand.

\textit{Cas.} Are we all ready? what is now amiss,
That Caesar, and his senate, must redress?

\textit{Met.} Most high, most mighty, and most puissant
Cesar,
Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble heart:—

[\textit{Kneeling.}]

\textit{Ces.} I must prevent thee, Cimber.
These couchings, and these lowly courtesies,
Might fire the blood of ordinary men;
And turn pre-ordinance, and first decree,
Into the law of children. Be not fond,
To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood,
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet words,
Low-crooked curt'sies, and base spaniel fawning.
Thy brother by decree is banished;
If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.

\textit{Know,} Caesar doth not wrong; nor without cause
Will he be satisfied.

\textit{Met.} Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear,
For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

\textit{Bru.} I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Caesar;
Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

\textit{Cas.} What, Brutus!

\textit{Cas.} Pardon, Caesar; Caesar, pardon:
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

\textit{Cas.} I could be well mov'd, if I were as you;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me:
But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fixed, and resting quality,
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,

They are all fire, and every one doth shine;
But there's but one in all doth hold his place;
So, in the world; 'Tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive; \(^21\)
Yet, in the number, I do know but one
That unassail'd holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion: \(^22\) and, that I am he,
Let me a little show it, even in this;
That I was constant, Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so.

\textit{Cin.} O Caesar,—

\textit{Cas.} Hence! wilt thou lift up Olympus?

\textit{Dec.} Great Caesar,—

\textit{Ces.} Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

\textit{Casca.} Speak, hands, for me.

[\textit{Cesca stabs Ces. in the neck. Ces. catches hold of his arm. He is then stabbed by several other Conspirators, and at last by Marcus Brutus.}

\textit{Cas.} Et tu, Brutus?—Then fall, Caesar.

[\textit{Dies. The Sen. and People retire in confusion.}]

\textit{Cin.} Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!—
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

\textit{Cas.} Some to the common pulpits, and cry out,
"Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!"

\textit{Bru.} People, and senators! be not affrighted;
Fly not; stand still:—ambition’s debt is paid.

\textit{Casca.} Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

\textit{Dec.} And Cassius too.

\textit{Bru.} Where’s Publius?

\textit{Cin.} Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

\textit{Met.} Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar’s
Should chance,—

\textit{Bru.} Talk not of standing;—Publius, good cheer;
There is no harm intended to your person,
Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius.

\textit{Cas.} And leave us, Publius; lest that the people,
Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

\textit{Bru.} Do so;—and let no man abide this deed,
But we the doers.

\textit{Re-enter Trebonius.}

\textit{Cas.} Where’s Antony?

\textit{Tre.} Fled to his house amaz’d:
Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run,
As it were doomsday.

\textit{Bru.} Fates! we will know your pleasures:—
That we shall die, we know; ’tis but the time,
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

\textit{Cas.} Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life,
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.
Act III.

Julius Caesar.

Scene 1.

Brutus. Grant that, and then is death a benefit: So are we Caesar's friends, that have abridg'd His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans, stoop, And let us batho our hands in Caesar's blood Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords: Then walk we forth, even to the market-place; And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads, Let's all cry, Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash.—How many ages hence,

Shall this our lofty scene be act'd over, In states unborn, and accents yet unknown?

Brutus. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport, That now on Pompey's basis lies along, No worthier than the dust?

Cas. So oft as that shall be,

So often shall the knot of us be call'd The men that gave our country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:

Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Brutus. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel; Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down: And, being prostrate, thus be bade me say. Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest; Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving: Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him; Say, I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him, and lov'd him. If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony May safely come to him, and be resolv'd How Caesar hath deserv'd to lie in death, Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead So well as Brutus living; but will follow The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus, Thorough the hazards of this untrod state, With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Brutus. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman; I never thought him worse.

Tell him, so please him come unto this place, He shall be satisfied; and by my honour, Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently.

[Exit Serv.]

Brutus. I know, that we shall have him well to friend.

Caesar. I wish, we may: but yet have I a mind,

That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter Antony.

Brutus. But here comes Antony.—Welcome, Mark Antony.

Antony. O mighty Caesar! Dost thou lie so low? Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrunk to this little measure?—Fare thee well:— I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,

Who else must be let blood, who else is rank: If I myself, there is no hour so fit

As Caesar's death's hour; nor no instrument Of half that worth, as those your swords, made rich With the most noble blood of all this world. I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard, Now, whilst your purple hands do reck and smoke, Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years, I shall not find myself so apt to die: No place will please me so, no mean of death, As here by Caesar, and by you cut off, The choice and master spirits of this age.

Brutus. O Antony! beg not your death of us, Though now we must appear bloody and cruel, As, by our hands, and this our present act, You see we do; yet see you but our hands, And this the bleeding business they have done: Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful; And pity to the general wrong of Rome (As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity,) Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part, To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony: Our arms in strength of malice, and our hearts, Of brother's temper, do receive you in With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Caesar. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's, In the disposing of new dignities.

Brutus. Only be patient, till we have appeas'd The multitude, beside themselves with fear, And then we will deliver you the cause, Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him, Have thus proceeded.

Antony. I doubt not of your wisdom. Let each man render me his bloody hand: First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you:— Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand:— Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Metellus; Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Cassius, yours:— Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius. Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say? My credit now stands on such slippery ground, That one of two bad ways you must conceit me. Either a coward or a flatterer.—
That I did love thee, Caesar, O, 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius!—Here wast thou bay'd, brave heart;
Here didst thou fall: and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.23
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.—
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie?
Cas. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Caesar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.
Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends;
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?
Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was, indeed,
Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Caesar,
Friends am I with you all, and love you all;
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons,
Why and wherein, Caesar was dangerous.

Brutus: Or else were this a savage spectacle:
Our reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek;
And am moreover suitor, that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Brutus. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas. Brutus, a word with you.24—
You know not what you do; Do not consent,

[Aside.
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter?

Brutus. By your pardon;—
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And shew the reason of our Caesar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission:

And that we are contented, Caesar shall
Have all true rights, and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it not.
Brutus. Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar's body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar:
And say you do't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: And you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereinto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;
I do desire no more.

Brutus. Prepare the body then, and follow us.

[Execute all but Ant."

Ant. O, pardon me, thou piece of bleeding earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man,
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hands that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I propheey,—
Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue;
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury, and fierce civil strife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy:
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds:
And Caesar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Até by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
Cry "Harue," and let slip the dogs of war;
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not?
Servant. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.
Servant. He did receive his letters, and is coming:
And bid me say to you by word of mouth,—
O Caesar!—

[Seeing the Body.

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes.
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?
Servant. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.
Mr Macready as Brutus.

Text: With this I depart: that and I view my best lover for the good of Rome, have the same dagger for myself when it shall please my country to need my death.

Julius Caesar Act 3 Sc 2.
Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chance'd:
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;27
Hic hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while;
Thou shalt not back, till I have borne this corse
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand. [Exeunt, with Cæs. Body.

SCENE II.—The same. The Forum.

Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a Throng of Citizens.

Cit. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.
Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.—
Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.—
Those that will hear me speak, let them stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cæsar's death.
1st Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.
2nd Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.
[Exit Cæs., with some of the Cit. Brut. goes into the Rostrum.

3rd Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: Silence!
Bru. Be patient till the last.
Romans, countrymen, and lovers128 hear me for my cause; and be silent that you may hear: believe me for mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom; and awake your senses that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If then that friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer.—Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves; than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him: but, as he was ambitious, Ilew him: There is tears, for his love; joy, for his fortune; honour, for his valour; and death, for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Cit. None, Brutus, none.

[Several speaking at once.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar, than you should do to Brutus.
The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol: his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter Antony and Others, with Cæsar's Body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony; who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; As which of you shall not? With this I depart; That, as I shew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Cit. Live, Brutus, live! live!
1st Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.
2nd Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.
3rd Cit. Let him be Cæsar.
4th Cit. Cæsar's better parts Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.
1st Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

2nd Cit. Peace; silence! Brutus speaks.

1st Cit. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,
And, for my sake, stay here with Antony:
Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech Tending to Cæsar's glories; which Mark Antony,
By our permission is allow'd to make.
I do entreat you, not a man depart,
Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.

1st Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.
3rd Cit. Let him go up into the public chair;
We'll hear him:—Noble Antony, go up.
Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholden to you.
4th Cit. What does he say of Brutus?
3rd Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake.
He finds himself beholden to us all.

4th Cit. Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1st Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.
3rd Cit. Nay, that's certain:
We are bless'd, that Rome is rid of him.

349
2nd Cit. Peace; let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Clt. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do, lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones;
So let it be with Caesar. The noble Brutus
Hath told you, Caesar was ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault;
And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it,
Here under leave of Brutus, and the rest,
(For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men.)
Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
But Brutus says, he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:
Did this in Caesar seem ambitious?
When that the poor have cried, Caesar hath wept:
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
You all did see, that on the Lupercal,
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without cause;
What cause withheld you then to mourn for him?
O judgment! thou art fated to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason!—Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.

1st Cit. Methinks, there is much reason in his sayings.

2nd Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Caesar has had great wrong.

3rd Cit. Has he, masters? I fear, there will a worse come in his place.

4th Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
Therefore, 'tis certain, he was not ambitious.

1st Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

2nd Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

3rd Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome, than Antony.

4th Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Caesar might Have stood against the world: now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are honourable men:
I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here's a parchment, with the seal of Caesar,
I found it in his closet, 'tis his will:
Let but the commons hear this testament,
(Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,) And they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds, And dip their napkins in his sacred blood; Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, And, dying, mention it within their wills, Bequeathing it, as a rich legacy, Unto their issue.

4th Cit. The will, the will; we will hear Caesar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it;
It is not meet you know how Caesar lov'd you.
You are not wood, you are not stone, but men;
And, being men, hearing the will of Caesar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad:
'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
For if you should, O, what would come of it?

4th Cit. Read the will; we will hear it, Antony;
You shall read us the will; Caesar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay a while?
I have o'ershot myself, to tell you of it,
I fear, I wrong the honourable men,
Whose daggers have stabbled Caesar; I do fear it.

4th Cit. They were traitors: Honourable men!

Clt. The will! the testament!

2nd Cit. They were villains, murderers: The will! read the will!

Ant. You will compel me then to read the will?
Then make a ring about the corpse of Caesar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? And will you give me leave?

Clt. Come down.

2nd Cit. Descend.

[He comes down from the Pulpit.

3rd Cit. You shall have leave.

4th Cit. A ring; stand round.
1st Cit. Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.

2nd Cit. Room for Antony:—most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

Cit. Stand back! room! bear back!

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this mantle: I remember
The first time ever Caesar put it on;
Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent:
That day he overcame the Nervii:—
Look! in this place, ran Cassius' dagger through;
See, what a rent the envious Casca made:
Through this, the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;
And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,
Mark how the blood of Caesar follow'd it;
As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Caesar's angel:
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar loved him?
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Caesar saw stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart;
And in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Caesar fell.
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.
O, now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel
The dint of pity: these are gracious drops.
Kind souls, what, weep you, when you but behold
Our Caesar's vesture wounded? Look you here,
Here he is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

1st Cit. O piteous spectacle!
2nd Cit. O noble Caesar!
3rd Cit. O woeful day!
4th Cit. O traitors, villains!
1st Cit. O most bloody sight!
2nd Cit. We will be revenged: revenge; about,—seek,—burn,—fire,—kill,—stay!—let not a traitor live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen.
1st Cit. Peace there:—Hear the noble Antony.
2nd Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They, that have done this deed, are honourable;
What private griefs they have, alas, I know not,
That made them do 't; they are wise and honourable,

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts;
I am no orator, as Brutus is:
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend; and that they know full well
That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;
I tell you that, which you yourselves do know:
Show you sweet Caesar's wounds, poor, poor dumb months,
And bid them speak for me: But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Caesar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Cit. We'll mutiny.
1st Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.
3rd Cit. Away then, come, seek the conspirators.
Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.

Cit. Peace, ho! Hear Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what:
Wherein hath Caesar thus deserved your loves?
Alas, you know not:—I must tell you then:—
You have forgot the will I told you of.

Cit. Most true:—the will;—let 's stay, and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Caesar's seal.
To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

2nd Cit. Most noble Caesar!—we 'll revenge his death.

3rd Cit. O royal Caesar!
Ant. Hear me with patience.
Cit. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
His private harbours, and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tyber, he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,
To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Caesar: When comes such another?

1st Cit. Never, never:—Come, away, away;
We 'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.

2nd Cit. Go, fetch fire.
3rd Cit. Pluck down benches.

4th Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.

[Exeunt Cit., with the Body.]
ACT IV.

JULIUS CAESAR.  SCENE I.

Ant. Now let it work: Mischief, thou art afoot, Take thou what course thou wilt!—How now, follow?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Caesar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him: Ho comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike, they had some notice of the people, How I had mor'd them. Bring me to Octavius.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Cinna, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night, that I did feast with Caesar, And things unluckily charge my fantasy: I have no will to wander forth of doors, Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

1st Cit. What is your name?

2nd Cit. Whither are you going?

3rd Cit. Where do you dwell?

4th Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor?

2nd Cit. Answer every man directly.

1st Cit. Ay, and briefly.

4th Cit. Ay, and wisely.

3rd Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly, and briefly, wisely, and truly:—wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

2nd Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry:—You'll bear me a hang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral.

1st Cit. As a friend, or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend.

2nd Cit. That matter is answered directly

4th Cit. For your dwelling,—briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

3rd Cit. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

1st Cit. Tear him to pieces, he's a conspirator.

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

4th Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

2nd Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

3rd Cit. Tear him, tear him. Come, brands, ho! fire-brands. To Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius': away; go.  [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Room in Antony's House.

Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus, seated at a Table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die; Consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him. But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar's house: Fetch the will lither, and we will determine How to cut off some charge in legacies.

852
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will;
But he’s a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and, for that,
I do appoint him store of provender.
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on;
His corporal motion govern’d by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train’d, and bid go forth:
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, arts, and imitations;
Which, out of use, and staid’l by other men,
Begin his fashion: Do not talk of him,
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things.—Brutus and Cassius,
Are levying powers: we must straight make head:
Therefore, let our alliance be combin’d,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch’d out;
And let us presently go sit in council,
Now covert matters may be best disclos’d,
And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake,
And bay’d about with many enemies;
And some, that smile, have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischief. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Before Brutus’ Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, Lucius, and Soldiers: Titinius and Pindarus meeting them.

Bru. Stand here.

Luc. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Bru. What now, Lucilius? is Cassius near?

Luc. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come.

To do you salutation from his master.

[Pind, gives a Letter to Brutus.

Bru. He greets me well.—Your master, Pindarus,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone: but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pind. I do not doubt,
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted.—A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv’d you, let me be resolv’d.

Luc. With courtesy, and with respect enough;

But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath used of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ’d
A hot friend cooling: Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle:
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to bequarter’d;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. [March within.

Bru. Hack, he is arriv’d:—
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!

Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;

And when you do them—

Bru. Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefs softly,—I do know you well:—
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: Bid them more away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do the like; and let no man
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of Brutus. Lucius and Titinius at some distance from it.

Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong’d me, doth appear in this:

353
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella,
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein, my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every vice offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold,
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm?
You know, that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!
Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember!

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What, shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But for supporting robbers; shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes?
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus?—
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, able than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you're not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say, you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted, when a madman stares?

Cas. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?

Bru. All this? ay, more: Fret, till your proud heart break;
Go, show your slaves how cholerie you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch

Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you: for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Bru. You say, you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well: For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way, you wrong me,
Brutus;
I said, an elder soldier, not a better:
Did I say, better?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not thus have mow'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace; you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not?

Bru. No.

Cas. What? durst not tempt him?

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love,
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me, as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me:—
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash.
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: Was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not:—he was but a fool,
That brought my answer back.—Brutus hath riv'd
my heart:
A friend should bear a friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.
MR. MACREADY AS CASSIUS
AND
MR. E.L. DAVENPORT AS BRITUS

CAS. There is my dagger! and here my trusty sword.

BRIT. Come, then, and take thy life in peace.

2011-08-28
Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.
Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear.

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aware of the world:
Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes!—There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within a heart
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better.

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheath your dagger
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope:
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger, as the flint bears fire;
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief, and blood ill-temper'd, vexeth him?

Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.
Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!—
Bru. What's the matter?
Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour, which my mother gave me,
Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and, henceforth,
When you are over-cereous with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

[Noise within.

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals;
There is some grudge between them, 'tis not meet
They be alone.

Luc. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet.

Cas. How now? What 's the matter?
Poet. For shame, thou generals; what do you mean?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be;
For I have seen more years, I am sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha; how vilely doth this cynic rhyme!
Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence.
Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.
Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:
What should the wars do with these jigging fools?
Companion, hence.

Cas. Away, away, be gone.

[Exit Poet.

Enter Lucilius and Titinius.

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.
Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala
Immediately to us. [Exit Luc. and Tit.

Bru. I did not think, you could have been so angry.

Cas. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.
Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better:—Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia?
Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How shall I killing, when I cross'd you so?

O insupportable and touching loss!—
Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence;
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong;—for with her death
That tidings came;—With this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Enter Lucius, with Wine and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine:
In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.
Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge:—
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Bru. Come in, Titinius:—Welcome, good Messala.—
JULIUS CAESAR.

ACT IV. SCENE III.

The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh’d, new-added, and encourag’d;
From which advantage shall we cut him off;
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon.—You must note beside,
That we have try’d the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day,
We, at the height, are ready to decline.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on;
We’ll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
And nature must obey necessity;
Which will we niggard with a little rest.

There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good night;
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius] Farewell, good Messala;—

Good night, Titinius.—Noble, noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother!

This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division ’tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Everything is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mes. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt Cas., Tit., and Mes.]

Re-enter Lucius, with the Gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak’st drowsily?

Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o’er-watch’d.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;
I’ll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?
ACT V.

JULIUS CAESAR.

SCENE 1.—The plains of Philippi.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answer'd: You said, the enemy would not come down, But keep the hills and upper regions;

It proves not so: their battles are at hand; They mean to warn us at Philippi here, Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it: they could be content To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking, by this face,
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.
Oct. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.
Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?
Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so.

[March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army;
Lucilius, Titinius, Messala, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.
Cas. Stand fast, Titinius; We must out and talk.
Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?
Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge.
Make forth, the generals would have some words.
Oct. Stir not until the signal.
Bru. Words before blows: Is it so, countrymen?
Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.
Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:
Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart,
Crying, "Long live! hail, Caesar!"

Cas. Antony,
The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hylba bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless too.
Bru. O, yes, and soundless too:
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And, very wisely, threat before you sting.
Ant. Villains, you did not so, when your vile daggers
Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
Whilst dammed Casca, like a cur, behind,
Struck Caesar on the neck. O flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank yourself:
This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: If arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look;
I draw a sword against conspirators:
When think you that the sword goes up again?—
Never, till Caesar's three and twenty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Caesar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.
Bru. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors,
Unless thou bring' st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou could'st not die more honourable.
Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour,
Join'd with a masker and a reveler.

Ant. Old Cassius still!
Oct. Come, Antony; away.—
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth:
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.

Cas. Why now, blow, wind; swell, billow; and swim, bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
Bru. Ho!
Lucilius; hark, a word with you.

Luc. My lord.

[Br. and Luc. converse apart.

Cas. Messala,—
Mes. What says my general?

Cas. This is my birth-day, as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:
Be thou my witness, that, against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compelled to set
Upon one battle all our liberties.
You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eagles fell; and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted us;
This morning are they fled away, and gone;
And in their steads, do ravens, crows, and kites,
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey; their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which,
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly;
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly.

Brutus. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly; that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then determined to do?

Brutus. Even by the rule of that philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself—I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life—arming myself with patience,
To stay the providence of some high powers,
That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

Brutus. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome:
He bears too great a mind.
But this same day
Must end that work, the idea of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again, I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.

Brutus. Why then, lead on.—O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come!
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is known.—Come, ho! away!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Brutus. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills.
Unto the legions on the other side: [Loud Alarum.
Let them set on at once; for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Titinius. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early
Who having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly; his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclosed.

Enter Pindarus.

Pindarus. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord!
Fly therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius;
Are those my tents, where I perceive the fire?

Titinius. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me, Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
 Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here again; that I may rest assur'd,
Whether you'd troops are friend or enemy.

Titinius. I will be here again, even with a thought.

[Exit.]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.—

[Exit Pindarus.]

This day I breathed first: time is come round,
And where I did begin, there I shall end;
My life is run his compass.—Sirrah, what news?

Pindarus. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pindarus. Titinius is Enclosed round about with horsemen, that Make to him on the spur;—ret he spurs on.—
Now they are almost on him; now, Titinius!—
Now some 'light—O, ho 'lights too:—he's ta'en;
—and, hark! [Shout.

They shout for joy.

Cas. Come down, behold no more.—
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

[Enter Pindarus.]

Come hither, sirrah:
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou should'st attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath!
Now be a freeman; and, with this good sword,
That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer: Here, take thou the hilts;
And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword.—Cæsar, thou art reveng'd,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him. [Exit.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he, that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!

Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun!
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set;
The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!
Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child!
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd,
Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus? Where art thou, Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius: whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it;
For piercing steel, and darts envenomed,
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while. [Exit Mes.

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,

And bid me give 't thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?
Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing.
But hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding.—Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.—
By your leave, gods:—This is a Roman's part:
Come, Cassius, sword, and find Titinius' heart.

[Dies.

Alarum. Re-enter Messala, with Brutus, young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet!
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails. [Low Alarums.

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look, wher'e he have not crown'd dead Cassius!

Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?—
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible, that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow.—Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man, than you shall see me pay.—
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body;
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us.—Lucilius, come;—
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.—
Labeo, and Flavius, set our battles on:—
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try our fortune in a second fight.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then Brutus, Cato, Lucilius, and Others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaim my name about the field:—
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

[Charges the Enemy.
JULIUS CAESAR

ACT V.

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus.
[Exit, charging the Enemy. Cato is overpowered, and falls.
Luc. O young and noble Cato, art thou down? Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titiarius; And may'st be honour'd being Cato's son.
1st Sold. Yield, or thou diest.
Luc. Only I yield to die:
There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight;
[Offering Money.
Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.
1st Sold. We must not.—A noble prisoner!
2nd Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.
1st Sold. I'll tell the news.—Here comes the general:—

Enter Antony.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.
Ant. Where is he?
Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough: I dare assure thee, that no enemy Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus: The gods defend him from so great a shame! When you do find him, or alive, or dead, He will be found like Brutus, like himself;
Ant. This is not Brutus, friend: but, I assure you, A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe, Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. Go on, And see who'r Brutus be alive, or dead: And bring us word, unto Octavius' tent, How every thing is chanc'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanus, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.
Cliti. Statilius show'd the torch-light; 50 but, my lord, He came not back; he is or ta'en, or slain.
Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: Slaying is the word;
It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.—
[Whispering.
Cliti. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.
Bru. Peace then, no words.
Cliti. I'll rather kill myself.

Dor. I do such a deed?
Cliti. O, Dardanius!
Dur. O, Clitus!
Cliti. What ill request did Brutus make to thee? Dor. To kill him, Clitus: Look, he meditates.
Cliti. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes.
Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word.
Vol. What says my lord?
Bru. Why, this, Volumnius: The ghost of Cesar hath appear'd to me Two several times by night: at Sardis, once; And, this last night, here in Philippi' fields. I know, my hour is come.
Vol. Not so, my lord.
Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius. Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes; Our enemies have beat us to the pit: It is more worthy to leap in ourselves, Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, Thou know'st, that we two went to school together; Even for that our love of old, I pray thee, Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.
Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.
[Alarum still.
Cliti. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here. Bru. Farewell to you;—and you;—and you, Volumnius.—
Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen, My heart doth joy, that yet, in all my life, I found no man, but he was true to me. I shall have glory by this losing day, More than Octavius, and Mark Antony, By this vile conquest shall attain unto. So, fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue Hath almost ended his life's history: Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest, That have but labour'd to attain this hour.
[Alarum. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly.
Cliti. Fly, my lord, fly.
Bru. Hence; I will follow thee.
[Exeunt Cliti., Dur., and Vol.
I pr'ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord: Thou art a fellow of a good respect; Thy life hath had some snatch of honour in it: Hold thou my sword, and turn away thy face, While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato? Strato. Give me your hand first: Fare you well, my lord.
Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Cesar, now best still: I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.
[He runs on his Sword, and dies.

ACT V.

JULIUS CAESAR.

SCENE V.

Oct.  What man is that?
Mes.  My master's man.—Strato, where is thy master?

Strat.  Free from the bondage you are in, Messala; The conquerors can but make a fire of him; For Brutus only overcame himself, And no man else hath honour by his death.

Luc.  So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee, Brutus, That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct.  All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them.
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Strat.  Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.
Oct.  Do so, Messala.
Mes.  How died my master, Strato?

Strat.  I held the sword, and he did run on it.
Mes.  Octavius, then take him to follow thee, That did the latest service to my master.
Ant.  This was the noblest Roman of them all: All the conspirators, save only he, Did that they did in envy of great Caesar; He, only, in a general honest thought, And common good to all, made one of them. His life was gentle; and the elements So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up, And say to all the world, “This was a man!”

Oct.  According to his virtue let us use him, With all respect, and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie, Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.— So, call the field to rest: and let's away, To part the glories of this happy day.

[Exeunt.
NOTES TO JULIUS CAESAR.

1 If you do find them deck’d with ceremonies.

Ceremonies were ceremonious ornaments, trophies, or crowns placed upon the statues of Caesar. So Plutarch:—"A few days after, his statues were seen adorned with royal diadems; and Flavius and Marullus, two of the tribunes, went and tore them off." In the next scene Casca says:—"Marullus and Flavius for pulling scarfs off Caesar’s images, are put to silence."

2 Decius.

Shakespeare followed Plutarch in calling this character Decius, but his proper name was Decimus Brutus. See Appian and Suetonius. Decimus Brutus was the most cherished by Caesar of all his friends, while Marcus kept aloof, and declined so large a share of his favours and honours as the other had constantly accepted; being suspicious of the tendency of Caesar’s ambition, and also remembering that he had fought with Pompey against Caesar at the battle of Pharsalia.

3 Stand you directly in Antonius’ way
When he doth run his course.

This passage alludes to a singular superstition which is explained in the following passage from Plutarch’s Life of Caesar:—"In the Lupercalia, which, according to most writers, is an ancient pastoral feast, and which answers in many respects to the Lycaon amongst the Arcadians; young men of noble families, and indeed many of the magistrates, ran about the streets naked, and, by way of diversion, strike all they meet with leathern thongs with the hair upon them. Numbers of women of the first quality put themselves in their way, and presented their hands for stripes (as scholars do to a master), being persuaded that the pregnant gain an easy delivery by it, and that the barren are enabled to conceive."

4 Brutus, I do observe you now of late.

Mr. Steevens, with his usual ingenuity, proposes to omit the words you now, which as they encumber the metre, he suspects of being an interpolation. The measure would then become regular; thus:—

I’ll leave you.

Brutus, I do observe of late.

5 I have much mistook your passion.

Passion is here used to imply mental disturbance, commotion of the mind. The meaning is—I have misunderstood the disturbed state of your feelings.

6 There was a Brutus once.

He alludes to the ancestor of Brutus, Lucius Junius, who freed Rome from the tyranny of the Tarquins, and to whom the ancient Romans erected a statue of brass, and placed it in the capitol amongst their kings. "He was," says Plutarch, "represented with a drawn sword in his hand, to signify the spirit and firmness with which he vanquished the Tarquins; but hard-tempered as the steel of which that sword was composed, and in no degree humanised by education, the same obdurate severity which impelled him against the tyrant, shut up his natural affection from his children, when he found those children conspiring for the support of tyranny."

7 The eternal devil.

Dr. Johnson says, “I think our author wrote infernal devil; Mr. Steevens says, in support of the present reading (which if an error, is one that by no means enfeebles the line), that Cassius infers that ‘Lucius Junius Brutus would as soon have submitted to the perpetual dominion of a demon, as to the lasting government of a king.’"

8 Let me have men about me that are fat:
Sleek-headed men.

Cæsar was a close observer of men, and, according to Plutarch, actually made this observation:—"Cæsar, too, had some suspicion of him (Cassius), and he even said one day to his friends, ‘What think you of Cassius? I do not like his pale looks.’ Another time, when Antony and Dolabella were accused of some designs against his person and government, he said, ‘I have no apprehensions from those fat and sleek men; I rather fear the pale and lean ones,’ meaning Brutus and Cassius."

9 An I had been a man of any occupation.

That is, had he been a mechanic, one of the common people.

10 Brought you Caesar home?

That is, did you attend him home?

11 Sir, ’tis your brother Cassius.

Cassius had married Junia, the sister of Brutus.

12 For if thou put thy native semblance on.

Dr. Johnson endeavours to explain this line, by saying, to put thy native semblance, is to walk in thy true form; but this is not very satisfactory; should it not read put instead of path.

13 No, not an oath: If not the face of men.

Face is probably a misprint for faith. The sense is then clear; if an honourable sense of fidelity will not bind men, oaths also will be without effect.
14 Till each man drop by lottery. That is, by chance. Mr. Stevens says, "perhaps the poet alluded to the custom of decimation, i.e., the selection by lot of every tenth soldier, in a general mutiny for punishment."

15 Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods, Not here him as a carese fit for hounds. The character of Brutus is beautifully indicated in this passage: his love of the republican form of government made him think the death of Caesar necessary; still he would have him slain without cruelty. But his humane intentions were not carried into effect. Caesar was not despatched by one or two well-directed blows, but cruelly mangled by the conspirators, and did not fall until he had received three-and-twenty wounds. Indeed, such was the eagerness of his assailants, that many of them wounded each other in striking at him; and, in the confusion, Brutus added to his torture, by stabbing Caesar in the groin.

16 I charm you, by my once-commended beauty. Pope and Sir T. Hanmer read—charge you.

17 All the character of my sad brows. That is, all that is characterized on my countenance. I will explain the causes of the thoughtful and perplexed appearance of my face.

18 ——— Brutus hath a suit That Caesar will not grant. Portia, fearing that the boy Lucreis has observed her anxiety, addresses these words to him to divert his suspicion from the real cause of her perturbation.

19 Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back. Mr. Malone would read on for or; as, if the conspiracy was discovered, it would be of the power of Cassius to prevent the return of Caesar; to prevent his own turning back, by an act of self-destruction, would be all that was left to him. Mr. Ritson, however, considers the text to be correct; and says, Cassius means, if we are discovered, and cannot kill Caesar, I will slay myself. The conspirators were resolute men, and they entirely surrounded Caesar's person; and even had they been betrayed, might, in the confusion, have had an opportunity to despatch the tyrant.

20 He is addressed, i.e. he is ready.

21 And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive. Apprehensive does not here imply fearful, but intellectual. Caesar means, men are made of flesh and blood, and endowed with intellect, as he is; but they are not, like him, unassailable by argument, and ever constant to his own purposes.

22 Unshak'd of motion, i.e. unmoved by solicitation. And crimson'd in thy lethe. Mr. Steevens says, that lethe is used by many of the old translators of novels for death, as well as in its ordinary acceptation of forgetfulness.

23 Brutus, a word with you. With you is an apparent interpolation, and disorders the metre; if omitted, the sense and measure are both perfect.

24 A curse shall light upon the limbs of men. This line is not very intelligible; and most of the editors have tried their hands at emendation. The most specious reading is that proposed by Dr. Johnson, who would substitute—these hymns of men, i.e. these bloodhounds of men.

25 Cry hooch. According to Sir W. Blackstone, in the military operations of ancient times, the word hooch was shouted as a signal for general slaughter, when it was intended that no quarter should be given.

26 Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome, No Rome of safety for Octavius yet. Here, and in another passage, (act 1, sc. 2,) Shakspeare has exhibited his pronunciation of the word Rome, and quibbled upon the similarity of the sound to room. Mr. Steevens observes, he is at least countenanced in this by the example of other authors. Thus Heywood, in his Rape of Lucrece, 1638:—

—— You shall have my room,
My Rome indeed, for what I seem to be,
Brutus is not, but born great Rome to free.

27 Romans, countrymen, and lovers! Dr. Warburton says, that "this speech of Brutus is wrote in imitation of his famed laconic brevity, and is very fine in its kind; but no more like that brevity, than his times were like Brutus's. The ancient laconic brevity was simple, natural, and easy; this is quaint, artificial, jingling, and abounding with forced antitheses. In a word, a brevity, that for its false eloquence would have suited any character, and for its good sense, would have become the greatest of our author's time; but yet is a style of declaiming, that fits as ill upon Brutus as our author's trowsers or collar-band would have done." This artificial jingle of short sentences was much in fashion amongst the orators of Shakspeare's own age.

28 Which all the white ran blood. This passage is not intended to imply that the statue of Pompey shed blood in miraculous sympathy with Caesar, as Pompey was his bitter enemy, but that the blood of Caesar spurted out upon the statue, and trickled down it. Plutarch says—"Either by accident, or pushed thither by the conspirators, he expired on the pedestal of Pompey's statue, and dyed it with his blood; so that Pompey seemed to preside over the work of vengeance, to treat his enemy under his feet, and to enjoy his agonies."
NOTES TO JULIUS CAESAR.

26 His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tyber.

Antony is speaking in the most frequented part of the city, the forum, near the capitol; a place very remote from Caesar's gardens, which were separated from the main city by the river; and lay out wide, on a line with Mount Janieulum. Plutarch, in the life of Brutus, says that Caesar left to the public his gardens and walks beyond the Tyber. The old translation from which Shakspeare borrowed his materials has on this side Tyber, and Shakspeare copied the error.

31 A room in Antony's house.

Rowe and Pope have both marked the scene here to be at Rome, but the old copies say nothing of the place;
and those who will consult Plutarch's Life of Antony will find that they met on a small island in the Rhine, not far from Bologna. Shakspeare being familiar with Plutarch's work, was doubtless sequint with this circumstance, though he has not particularised it.

32 A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, arts, and imitations.

Theobald says—"It is hard to conceive why he should be called a barren-spirited fellow that could feed either on objects or arts: that is, as I presume, form his ideas and judgment upon them; stale and obsolete imitation, indeed, fixes such a character. I am persuaded, to make the poet consonant to himself, we must read—
On object arts; i.e., on the scraps and fragments of things rejected and despised by others."

33 ———Do not talk of him
But as a property.

That is, but as an agent of our will, a thing entirely at our disposal.

34 Enter Poet.

This incident Shakspeare found in Plutarch, but the intruder is there mentioned as a cynic, not as a poet.
"Favonius, an imitator of Cato, but rather an enthusi siast than rational in his philosophy, attempted to enter.
The servants in waiting endeavoured to prevent him,
but it was not easy to stop the impetuous Favonius.
He was violent in his whole conduct, and valued himself less on his dignity as a senator, than on a kind of cyni cal freedom in saying everything he pleased; nor was this unentertaining to those who could bear with his impertinence. However, he broke through the door, and entered the apartment, pronouncing in a theatrical tone, what Nestor says in Homer:—

Young men be ruled—I'm older than you both.
Cassius laughed; but Brutus thrust him out, telling him that he pretended to be a cynic, but was in reality a dog."

35 And her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Portia is reported by Pliny to have died in conse quence of a lingering illness, and not to have destroyed herself. Valerius Maximus says, that she survived Brutus, and killed herself on hearing of her husband's defeat and death at Philippi.

36 And died so?

Mr. Stevens suggests that this and the two following short speeches were meant to form a single verse, and originally stood as follows:—

Cas. And died so?
Brut. Even so.
Cas. Immortal gods!

37 I have as much of this in art as you.
That is, theoretically, I am as much a stote as you are.
38 Layst thou thy leader mace upon my boy.
A mace is the ancient term for a sceptre.

39 Then I shall see thee again.

Mr. Stevens says that Shakspeare has on this occasion deserted his original, as Plutarch does not say that the ghost of Caesar appeared to Brutus, but a vision of his own evil genius. The following is the account of this vision in Plutarch's Life of Caesar:—"We have a proof still more striking that the assassination of Caesar was displeasing to the gods, in the phantom that appeared to Brutus. The story of it is this:—Brutus was on the point of transporting his army from Abydos to the opposite continent; and the night before he lay in his tent, awake, according to custom, and in deep thought about what might be the event of the war; for it was natural for him a great part of the night, and no general ever required so little sleep. With all his senses about him, he heard a noise at the door of his tent, and looking towards the light, which now burned very low, he saw a terrible appearance in the human form, but of prodigious stature, and the most hideous aspect. At first he was struck with astonishment; but when he saw it neither did nor spoke anything to him, but stood in silence by his bed, he asked it 'Who it was?' The spectre an swered, 'I am thy evil genius, Brutus; thou shalt see me at Philippi.' Brutus answered boldly, 'I'll meet thee there,' and the spectre immediately vanished."

40 They mean to warn us at Philippi here.

Steevens says that Shakspeare uses the word warn, in the sense of summon; but I am inclined to think we should here read, warn; give us battle, warn us with the heat of action.

41 With fearful bravery.

In this passage, fearful, does not signify timid, but desperate.

42 I do not cross you; but I will do so.

That is, I do not this to cross or anger you, but because I am resolved to do it; and I will. All the future quarns of Augustus and Antony are shadowed forth in this abrupt answer.

43 Never till Caesar's three-and-twenty wounds.

The old copy has, three-and-thirty, which, on the joint authorities of Appian, Plutarch, and Suetonius, Mr. Theobald altered as in the text.

"This is my birth-day, &c.

Our poet was largely indebted to Plutarch for both the incidents and language of this tragedy; the reader can compare this speech of Cassius with the following from the Life of Brutus.—"Messala says that Cassius supped in private with some of his most intimate friends; and that, contrary to his usual manner, he was pensive and silent. He adds, that after supper, he took him by the hand, and pressing it close, as he commonly did, in token of his friendship, he said in Greek, 'Bear witness Messala, that I am reduced to the same necessity with Pompey the Great, of hazarding the liberty of my country on one battle. Yet I have confidence in our good fortune, on which we ought still to rely, though the measures we are resolved upon are indiscreet.' These, Messala tells us, were the last words that Cassius spoke, before he bade him farewell; and that the next day, being his birthday, he invited Cassius to sup with him."

45 Coming from Sardes, on our former ensign.

Former, is used as foremost; Shakspere sometimes uses the comparative, instead of the positive or superlative.

46 Even by the rule of that philosophy.

It has been very justly pointed out, that there is an apparent inconsistency between the sentiments of Brutus in this and the following speech given to him. In the first he reiterates his condemnation of suicide, but from the second we may infer, that if the day is lost, he will commit it. Mr. M. Mason observes, that "there is no real inconsistency. Brutus had laid down to himself, as a principle, to abide every chance and extremity of war; but when Cassius reminds him of the disgrace of being led in triumph through the streets of Rome, he acknowledges that to be a trial which he could not endure. Nothing is more natural than this. We lay down a system of conduct for ourselves, but occurrences may happen that will force us to depart from it."

Plutarch represents Brutus as renouncing his former condemnation of suicide, and thus replying to the question of Cassius, "In the younger and less experienced part of my life, I was led, upon philosophical principles to condemn the conduct of Cato in killing himself. I thought it at once impious and unmanly to sink beneath the stroke of fortune, and to refuse the lot that had befallen us. In my present situation, however, I am of a different opinion; so that if heaven should now be unfavourable to our wishes, I will no longer solicit my hopes or my fortune, but die contented with it such as it is. On the idea of March I devoted myself to my country; and since that time, I have lived in liberty and glory."

47 Must end that work, the idea of March begun.

Shakspere should have written began; it is an error for which he himself is probably answerable.

48 Ride, and give these bills.

Bills were written instructions, containing directions for the captains, &c.

49 This hill is far enough.

Shakspere has here also closely followed Plutarch:— "At length he was obliged to retire, with a very small number, to a hill that overlooked the plain. Yet here he could discover nothing, for he was short-sighted; and it was with some difficulty that he could perceive his own camp plundered. His companions, however, saw a large detachment of horse, which Brutus had sent to their relief, making up to them. These Cassius concluded to be the enemy that were in pursuit of him; notwithstanding which, he dispatched Titinius to reconnoitre them. When the cavalry of Brutus saw this faithful friend of Cassius approach, they shouted for joy. His acquaintance leaped from their horses to embrace him, and the rest rode round him with clashing of arms, and all the clamorous expressions of gladness. This circumstance had a fatal effect. Cassius took it for granted that Titius was seized by the enemy, and regretted that, through a weak desire of life, he had suffered his friend to fall into their hands. When he had expressed himself to this effect, he retired into an empty tent, accompanied only by his freed-man, Pindarus, whom, ever since the defeat of Crassus, he had retained for a particular purpose. In that defeat he escaped out of the hands of the Parthians; but now, wrapping his robe about his face, he laid bare his neck, and commanded Pindarus to cut off his head; this was done, for his head was found severed from his body; but whether Pindarus did it by his master’s command, has been suspected, because he never afterwards appeared."

50 Statilius should’er the torch-light.

Statilius was a messenger whom Brutus had sent to the camp to know if many were slain in the battle; when he arrived there, if all was well, he was to lift up a lighted torch in the air. From the text it appears he did this, but was slain in returning.

H. T.
Antony and Cleopatra.

THIS varied and gorgeous historical tragedy, though perfect in itself, may yet be regarded as a continuation of Julius Caesar; in the commencement of that play absolute power is lodged in one man, a wide circle of terrible events roll on, every effort is made by the republican party, and much noble blood spilt, to preserve the political freedom of Rome; but the wheel comes round, and the conclusion of Antony and Cleopatra sees a second Caesar in possession of that absolute power which the first met his death in attempting to consolidate, and the three divisions of the Roman world are at length united under one imperial ruler. How true is it that the history of most men's lives is merely a record of wasted energy!

In Julius Caesar the character of Antony is but slightly sketched, but it is here elaborated with a truthful and powerful pen; there Antony is shown only as the orator, whose words have robbed their honey from the Hybla bees; here as the magnificent triumvir, the heroic soldier, and the imitator, in his dissipation, of his patron gods, Bacchus and Heracles.

Antony is a singular mixture of containing qualities; brave and generous, yet selfishly luxurious in his habits; a hardy soldier, yet an effeminate man, condescending and affable so far as to drink and jest with his soldiers, yet so proud and imperious as to make princes his vassals, and to bestow upon his sons the vain-glorious title of "the kings of kings." His virtues and his vices seemed to wrestle for the possession of the man; and although the latter triumphed, yet Antony so sinned that men often admired while they condemned. His enormous prodigality blinded the popular judgment; such was his liberality that while at Ephesus he gave his cook the estate of a Magnesian citizen for dressing one supper to his taste; and while there he was constantly attended by women in the dress of Bacchantes, and men and boys habited like Pan and the Satyrs marched before him; besides this, he entertained almost an army of players, dancers, and buffoons. After the death of Caesar, Antony, from motives of policy, made his peace with the conspirators, and on the same evening supped with Cassius. In his oration at the funeral, he was not only influenced by his personal affection for that distinguished man, but also by an ambitious longing, which induced him to believe that if Brutus were slain or banished, he would become the greatest man in Rome. That his motives were largely selfish in this transaction is shown by Antony retaining Caesar's will, of which he made some unjust uses, giving legacies to his personal friends and supporters; and for some time he refused to acknowledge Octavius as his partner either in the wealth or power left by Julius; but Octavius not being easily repulsed, he at length admitted him.

The blackest spot on his character is his proscription and murder of Rome's greatest orator, Cicero, with whom, notwithstanding his vanity, we, at the present day, will cordially exclaim:—

Let arms revere the robe, the warrior's laurel
Yield to the palm of eloquence

Cicero, who had great influence with the people, incensed them against Antony, and prevailed on the senate to declare him an enemy of the state; when, therefore, Caesar and Lepidus had consented to the death of the aged orator, Antony, with a revolting malignity which the most partial historian must blush to record, cut his head and hands struck off; and when they were brought to him, laughed and triumphed at the sight, and ordered them to be stuck up on the rostra in the forum, as though he was still addressing the people.

The personal appearance of Antony is thus described by Plutarch, from whom Shakespeare borrowed the materials for this tragedy: "Antony had a noble dignity of countenance, a graceful length of beard, a large forehead, an aquiline nose; and upon the whole the same manly aspect that we see in the pictures and statues of Hercules. There was, indeed, an ancient tradition, that his family was descended from Hercules, by a son of his, called Anteon; and it was no wonder if Antony sought to confirm this opinion, by affecting to resemble him in his air and in his dress.”

Generous but rapacious, a great general but a greater voluptuary, “such was the frail, the flexible Antony, when the love of Cleopatra came in to the completion of his ruin. This awakened every dormant vice, inflamed every guilty passion, and totally extinguished the gleams of remaining virtue.” His first meeting with the captivating Egyptian occurred thus: he sent her his commands to meet him in Cilicia to answer some accusations laid against her of assisting Cassius in his war against Antony and Octavius. The messenger, seeing the great beauty and fascination of Cleopatra, immediately concluded that she had nothing to fear from the gallant Antony:

Whom ne'er the word of 'No,' woman heard speak.

And therefore paid great court to her, and solicited her to go “in her best attire.” This hint was not lost upon the quick-witted Egyptian: she went, but it was not to sue, but to conquer.

Shakspeare has closely followed Plutarch in his gorgeous description of Cleopatra sailing to meet Antony down the river Cydnus, though he has certainly beautified that exquisite narrative, throwing a soft voluptuous languor into it, singularly consistent with the scene, and breathing the very soul of beauty. Cleopatra was the widow of King Ptolemy, and had been the paramour of Caesar; the early spring of youth was therefore past, but she was still in the summer of her beauty; nay, she had not yet reached the full meridian of womanly maturity; her vivacity was even beyond her personal attractions, and her conversational powers were remarkably varied and brilliant, while her voice was singularly melodious, and had the softness of music. Her beauty, we are told, was not so remarkable as her manners were fascinating and irresistible. Her accomplishments also were very great, and she spoke most languages freely, giving audience herself, without the aid of interpreters, to the ambassadors of the Ethiopians, Hebrews, Arabs, Syrians, Medes, and Parthians. Besides, she had the gift of flattering in a very delicate and subtle manner: thus in the famous anecdote of Antony’s fishing excursion, when one of her divers placed a salt fish on his hook, and he drew it up amidst general merriment (an incident which Shakspeare makes use of in the play), her comment was an instance of consummate tact in this direction—"Go, general!" said she, "leave fishing to us petty princes of Pharos and Canopus; your game is cities, kingdoms, and provinces."

Cleopatra completely enslaved the affections of Antony, and carried him in triumph with her to Alexandria, where they passed their time in feasts and revels, and established a society of their friends, whom they called the Inimitable Livres.

Antony’s marriage with Octavia after the death of his first wife, Fulvia, was merely an act of political expediency; we feel that Enobarbus is right, when he says, Antony “will to his Egyptian dish again.” In the play the incidents are drawn closely together, and Antony’s desertion of Octavia seems immediately to follow his marriage, but this was not the case; he had lived with her long enough to become the father of three children, before he left her for the embraces of Cleopatra, to whom, on his return, he bestowed kingdoms for presents, and in his inordinate vanity, gave the names of the sun and the moon to the twins she bore him. Octavius Caesar was glad of a pretext to quarrel with Antony; he had disposed of his colleague, Lepidus, and could he also dispose of Antony, the whole Roman Empire would be under his authority; he therefore availed himself of the insult offered to his sister, and made war upon Cleopatra; the final result of which was the ruin and suicide both of her and her princely paramour. The superstition of the times heralded in this event with omens and prodigies, in the same manner as they did the assassination of Julius Caesar; Pisaurum, a colony of Antony’s on the Adriatic, was swallowed by an earthquake, and his statue at Alba was said to have been covered with sweat for many days, although it was frequently wiped off; the statue thus shewing a sympathy for the coming fall of its original.

Antony’s power was sufficient to have made him conqueror of the civilised world; he had five hundred army of vessels, each with eight or ten banks of oars, a hundred thousand foot soldiers, and twelve thousand horse; and Shakspere has in the play, enumerated the kings and princes who fought under his banner. But his affection for Cleopatra had subdued both his judgment and his valour, and he fled disgracefully before Cæsar; for a time he was deeply dejected, and lived in melancholy retirement, but he soon returned to Alexandria, and again gave way to festivity and enjoyment. In conjunction with Cleopatra, ho now established a society which they called The Companions in Death, into which they admitted their immediate adherents, and spent their time in continual feasting and diversions.

After Octavius had returned a haughty refusal to Antony's challenge to single combat, the latter determined to risk all on one last battle; he did so, and lost it, for his fleet and cavalry deserted him, while his infantry were defeated. The rest of the story is both faithfully and elaborately told in Shakspere's tragedy.

In the play there are four characters which stand out prominently from the canvas—Cleopatra, Antony, Cæsar, and Enobarbus. Of Cleopatra, as painted by the pencil of history, I have already spoken; how exquisitely she is depicted by Shakspere; what a soft glow of voluptuous languor is thrown around her, and with what irresistible fascinations she is invested, the reader of the tragedy can alone feel and appreciate. Great as her faults are, for her life is but a tissue of refined and poetical sensuality, such is her devotion to Antony, and so winning is the gigantic extravagance of her affection for him, that we not only forgive her errors, but admire and applaud the actor of them.

Antony and Cæsar are placed in strong contrast to each other; the one brave, reckless and prodigal, the other cool, prudent, and avaricious. "Cæsar gets money," says Pompey, "where he loses hearts." Antony is a warrior and a prodigal, and Octavius a statesman, whose feelings are strictly under command. Something of predestination reigns through this play; everything tends towards the downfall of Antony and the advancement of Cæsar.

Enobarbus, although an historical character, and to be found in Plutarch, does not there appear very prominently, and may, to no small extent, be called a creation of the pen of Shakspere. He found the name in history, but not the man he pictured. Enobarbus forms one of the rich sunlights of the picture; his plain bluntness has all the cheering hilarity of comedy. But his jocularity would be out of place in the latter scenes of the tragedy: how admirably does Shakspere obviate this. The dotage and ill-fortune of Antony transform Enobarbus to a serious man, and finally corrupt this hitherto faithful soldier; he deserts his master, and flies to the service of Cæsar. The munificent Antony sends after him his cheests and treasure, which, in the hurry of flight, he had left behind; this act of kindness strikes the penitent fugitive to the heart, and wasting in grief, he goes forth to die; and alone, without the camp, breathing his deep sorrow to the cold moon, does Enobarbus end his life in the bitterness of despair.

As his final ruin draws on, Antony is alternately "valiant and dejected;" looking upon his high rank and qualities, his unbounded but dazzling dissipation, his imperial generosity, great personal courage, and his gorgeous career; when hearing of his death, we feel inclined to say with Cæsar—

The death of Antony
Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

That of Cleopatra follows; it is consistent with her brilliant and luxurious life; she robs death of its hideousness, and, enveloped in her royal robes and crown, still radiant in that seductive beauty which subdued Cæsar and ruined Antony, she applies to her bosom the envenomed instrument of death, and falls into an everlastling slumber "as sweet as balm, as soft as air," where she yet looks:—

As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

This tragedy is attributed to the year 1608.

Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—Dispersed; in several Parts of the Roman Empire.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's, O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes, That o'er the files and muster's of the war Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn, The office and devotion of their view Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst The buckles on his breast, renges all temper; And is become the bellows, and the fan, To cool a gypsy's lust. Look, where they come!

Flourish. Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform'd Into a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.
Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.
Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.
Ant. Grates me:—The sum.
Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony: Fulvia, perchance, is angry: Or, who knows If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent His powerful mandanty to you, "Do this, or this; Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that; Perform 't, or else we damn thee."

Ant. How, my love!
Cleo. Perchance,—may, and most like, You must not stay here longer, your dismission Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony,— Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's, I would say?— Both?—
Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen, Thou bluest, Antony; and that blood of thine Is Caesar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame, When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds.—The messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt! and the wide arch Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space; Kingdoms are clay: our duny earth alike Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life Is, to do thus; when such a mutual pair, [Embracing.

And such a twain can do 't, in which, I bind
On pain of punishment, the world to weet,—
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?— I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.—
Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours, Let's not confound the time with conference harsh:
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now: What sport to-night?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fye, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh, To weep; whose every passion fully strifes To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd! No messenger; but thine and all alone, To-night, we'll wander through the streets, and note The qualities of people. Come, my queen; Last night you did desire it:—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt Ant. and Cleo. with their Train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight? Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony, He comes too short of that great property Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I'm full sorry, That he approves the common liar, who Thus speaks of him at Rome: But I will hope Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!

[Exeunt.
SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where’s the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen?  O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must change his horns with garlands!
Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature’s infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough, Cleopatra’s health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means, in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more beloving, than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune! Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune
Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names? Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb, And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think, none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be—drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the overflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband’s nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend! Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune.—O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee! And let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave unceulked; Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't.

Char. Not he, the queen.

Enter Cleopatra.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was dispos’d to mirth; but on the sudden
A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus—

Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where’s Alexas?
Enter Antony, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: Go with us. [Exit Cleo, Eno., Alex., Har., Char., Sooth., and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst
Cæsar;
Whose better issue in the war, from Italy,
Upon the first encounter, drave them. 10

Ant. Well, What worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward.—On:

Things, that are past, are done, with me.—'Tis thus;
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus

(This is stiff news) hath, with his Parthian force,

Extended Asia from Euphrates; 11

His conquering banner shook, from Syria
To Lydia, and to Ionia;

Whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou would'st say,—

Mess. O, my lord!

Ant. Speak to me home, mine not the general

Name Cleopatra as she's call'd in Rome:

Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults

With such full licence, as both truth and malice

Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds,

When our quick winds lie still; 12 and our ills told us,

Is as our daring. Fare thee well a while.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit.

Ant. From Siclon how the news? Speak there.

1st Att. The man from Siclon.—Is there such an one?

2nd Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear,—

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where did she?

2nd Mess. In Siclon:

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious

Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Gives a letter.
brings forth a new petticoat:—and, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state, Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers Have notice what we purpose. I shall break The cause of our expedition to the queen, And get her love to part. For not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us; but the letters too Of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver, Till his deserts are past,) begin to throw Pompey the great, and all his dignities, Upon his son; who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier: whose quality, going on, The sides o'theworld may danger: Much is breeding, Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life, And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure, To such whose place is under us, requires Our quick remove from hence. [Exeunt.

Eno. I shall do't.

SCENE III.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:

I did not send you;—If you find him sad,
Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick: Quick, and return.

[Exit Alex.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so far: I wish, forbear;
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Antony.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fail;
It cannot be thus long, the side of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman?—You may go;
'Would, she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say, 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you; hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know,—

Cleo. O, never was there queen
So mightily betray'd! Yet, at the first,
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think, you can be mine, and true,
Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying,
Then was the time for words: No going then;—
Eternity was in our lips, and eyes;
Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor,
But was a race of heaven: They are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady!

Cleo. I would, I had thy inches; thou should'st know,
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen:
The strong necessity of time commands
Our services a while; but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome:
Equality of two domestic powers
Breeds scrupulous faction: The hated, grown to strength,
Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his father's honour, creeps space
Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change: My more particular,
And that which most with you should safety going, is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,
It does from childishness:—Can Fulvia die?
Ant. She's dead, my queen:
Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read
The garbils she awak'd; at the last, best:
See, when, and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!
Where be the sacred vials thou should'st fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.
Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know
The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice: Now, by the fire,
That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence,
Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war,
As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;—
But let it be.—I am quickly ill, and well:
So Antony loves.
Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true evidence to his love, which stands
An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I pr'ythee, turn aside, and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say, the tears
Belong to Egypt: Good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissemblying; and let it look
Like perfect honour.
Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more.

Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.
Ant. Now, by my sword,—

Cleo. And target.—Still he mends;
But this is not the best: Look, pr'ythee, Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.
Ant. I'll leave you, lady.
Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part,—but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there's not it;
That you know well: Something it is I would, O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty
Holdst idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.
As his own state, and ours,—'tis to be chid
As we rate boys; who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger

Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,
Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears, he is below'd of those
That only have fear'd Caesar, to the ports
The discontented repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cas. I should have known no less:
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were;
And the cbb'd man, ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth love,
Comes dear'd, by being lack'd. This common body,
Like a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to, and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To ret itself with motion.

Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them; which they ear and wound
With keels of every kind: Many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on 't, and flush youth revolt:
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Cas. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassals. When thou once
Was beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: Thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou browsed'st; on the Alps
It is reported, thou diest eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: And all this
(It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now.)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. It is pity of him.

Cas. Let his shames quickly

Drive him to Rome: 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves 't the field; and, to that end, Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To 'front this present time.

Cas. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: What you shall know mean time
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cas. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian,—
Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha!—
Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam?
Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time,
My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him
Too much.

Cleo. O, treason!
Char. Madam, I trust, not so.
Cleo. Thou, eunuch! Mardian!

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure
In aught an eunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That, being unseemly'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing
But what in deed is honest to be done:
Yet have I fierce affections, and think,
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?
ACT II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men.—He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, "Where's my serpent of old Nile?"
For so he calls me; now I feed myself
With most delicious poison:—Think on me,
That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey
Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow;
There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony!
Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath
With his tinct gilded thee.—
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?
Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kissed,—the last of many doubled kisses,—
This orient pearl;—His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. Good friend, quoth he,
Say, "the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms; All the cast,"
Say thou, "shall call her mistress." So he nodded,
And soberly did mount a termagent steed.24
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spo'd
Was beastly dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What, was he sad, or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes
Of hot and cold; he was nor sad, nor merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition!—Note him,
Noto him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note
him:
He was not sad; for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his: he was not merry;
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy: but between both:
O heavenly mingling!—Be'st thou sad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes;
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts?
Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers:
Why do you send so thick?

Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.
Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian,
Ever love Caesar so?

Char. O that brave Caesar!

Cleo. Bo chok'd with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Caesar!

Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Caesar paragon again
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My salad days;
When I was green in judgment:—Cold in blood,
To say, as I said then!—But, come, away:
Get me ink and paper: he shall have every day
A several greeting, or I'll unpease Egypt. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina. A Room in Pompey's
House.

Enter Pompey, Menocrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods do just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays
The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers

t. 3 o

Deny us for our good; so find we profit,
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My power's a crescent, and my auguring hope
Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors: Cesar gets money, where He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Men. Caesar and Lepidus
Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry.
ACT II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE II.

Enter Varrius.

Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver: Mark Antony is every hour in Rome Expected; since he went from Egypt, 'tis A space for further travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter A better ear.—Menas, I did not think, This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm For such a petty war: his soldierish Is twice the other twain: But let us rear The higher our opinion, that our stirring Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck The nec'rer lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope, Caesar and Antony shall well greet together: His wife, that's dead, did trespass to Caesar; His brother warr'd upon him; although, I think, Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas, How lesser enmities may give way to greater. Wero 't not that we stand up against them all, 'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves; For they have entertained cause enough To draw their swords: but how the fear of us May cement their divisions, and bind up The petty difference, we yet not know. Be it as our gods will have it! It only stands Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands.

Come, Menas. [Exit.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed, And shall become you well, to entreat your captain To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him To answer like himself: if Caesar move him,

Let Antony look over Cesar's head, And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter, Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard, I would not shave to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in it.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion: But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes The noble Antony.

Enter Antony and Ventidius.

Eno. And yonder, Caesar.

Enter Caesar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark you, Ventidius.

Cas. I do not know, Mecenas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends, That which combin'd us was most great, and let not A leaner action rend us. What's amiss, May it be gently heard: When we debate Our trivial difference loud, we do commit Murder in healing wounds: Then, noble partners, (The rather, for I earnestly beseech,) Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms, Nor curstness grow to the matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well: Were we before our armies, and to fight, I should do thus.

Cas. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cas. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Cas. Nay,

Then—

Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so; Or, being, concern you not.

Cas. I must be laugh'd at, If, or for nothing, or a little, I Should say myself offended; and with you Chiefly 't the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar, What was't to you?

Cas. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: Yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practised?

Ces. You may be pleas’d to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befall me. Your wife, and brother,
Made wars upon me; and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war. It

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never
Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours;
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this, my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you’ll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Ces. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me; but
You patch’d up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain ou’t,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause’gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars.
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o’ the world is yours; which with a snaffle
You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurable, her garboils, Caesar,
Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted Shrewdness of policy too,) I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet; for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

Ces. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gib my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
If fell upon me, ere admitted; then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i’ the morning: but, next day,
I told him of myself; which was as much
As to have ask’d him pardon: Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

Ces. You have broken

The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Caesar.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak;
The honour’s sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack’d it: But on, Caesar;
The article of my oath,—

Ces. To lend me arms, and aid, when I requir’d
them;
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then, when poison’d hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I’ll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it: Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour,
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. ’Tis nobly spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between you: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.

Lep. Worthily spoke, Mecenas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another’s love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence, therefore speak
no more.

Eno. Go to then; your considerate stone.

Ces. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for it cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hook should hold us staunch, from edge to edge
O’ the world I would pursue it.

Agr. Give me leave, Caesar,—

Ces. Speak, Agrippa.

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother’s side,
Admir’d Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Ces. Say not so, Agrippa;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserve’d of rashness.
Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear
Agrippa further speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men;
Whose virtue, and whose general graces, speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing: truths would be but tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would, each to other, and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke;
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speak?

Ces. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, "Agrippa, be it so,"
To make this good?

Ces. The power of Caesar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment!—Let me have thy hand:
Further this act of grace; and, from this hour,
The heart of brothers govern in our loves,
And sway our great designs!

Ces. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly: Let her live
To join our kingdoms, and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great,
Of late upon me: I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. And where lies he?

Ces. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Ces. Great, and increasing: but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.

'Would, we had spoke together? haste we for it:
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Ces. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I will lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecenas!—my honourable friend, Agrippa!—

Agr. Good Eonobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested. You stayed well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthy deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnas.99

Agr. There she appeared indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you:
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that
The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were silver;
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water, which they heat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth of gold, of tissue,) O'er-picturing that Venus, where we see,
The fancy out-work nature: on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With diverse-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem to blow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
And what they undid, did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her i' the eyes,
And made their heads adornings: at the helm
A seeming Mermaid steers; the silken tackle
Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands,
That yarely frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd in the market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air: which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

_Agr._ Rare Egyptian!

_Eno._ Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better, he became her guest;
Which she entreated: Our courteous Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of "No" woman heard
speak,
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;
And, for his ordinary, pays his heart,
For what his eyes eat only.

_Agr._ Royal wench!

_She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed;
Ho plough'd her, and she eropp'd._

_Eno._ I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street:
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect, perfection,
And breathless, power breathe forth.

_Mec._ Now Antony must leave her utterly

_Eno._ Never; he will not;
Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: Other women
Cloy th' appetites they feed; but she makes hungry,
Where most she satisfies. For vilest things
Become themselves in her; that the holy priests
Bless her, when she is riggish.

_Mec._ If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A bussed lottery to him.

_Agr._ Let us go.—
Good Enobarbus make yourself my guest,
Whilst you abide here.

_Eno._ Humbly, sir, I thank you.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. A Room in Caesar's House.

_Enter Cæsar, Antony, Octavia between them;
Attendants and a Soothsayer._

_Ant._ The world, and my great office, will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.

_Octa._ All which time

Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

_Ant._ Good night, sir.—My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square: but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.—

_Octa._ Good night, sir.

_Cæs._ Good night. [Exit Cæs. and Octa._

_Ant._ Now, sirrah! you do wish yourself in Egypt?

_Sooth._ 'Would I had never come from thee, nor you
Thither!'

_Ant._ If you can, your reason?

_Sooth._ Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Caesar's, or mine?

_Ant._ Say to me,
Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side:
Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Caesar's is not; but, near him, thy angel Becomes a Fear, as being o'erpower'd: therefore Make space enough between you.

_Ant._ Speak this no more.

_Sooth._ To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose! and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds; thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

_Ant._ Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him:—

[Exit Sooth.

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true; The very dice obey him;
And, in our sports, my better cunning faints
Under his chance: If we draw lots, he speeds;
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails even Beat mine, in hoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,

_Enter Ventidius._

I' the east my pleasure lies:—O, come, Ventidius,

You must to Parthia; your commission's ready:
Follow me, and receive it.

[Exeunt.
SCENE IV.—The same. A street.

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress, Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall, As I conceive the journey, be at mount Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter, My purposes do draw me much about; You'll win two days upon me.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iris, and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, moody food Of us that trade in love.

Attend. The music, ho!

Enter Mardian.

Cleo. Let it alone; let us to billiards. Come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eenuch play'd, As with a woman;—Come, you'll play with me, sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though it come too short, The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now:— Give me mine angle,—We'll to the river: there, My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up, I'll think them every one an Antony, And say, Ah, ah! you're caught.

Char. 'Twas merry, when You wager'd on your angling; when your diver Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time!—O times!— I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn, Ere the ninth hour, I drank him to his bed; Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst I wore his sword Philippan. O! from Italy;

Enter a Messenger.

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears, That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,—

Cleo. Antony's dead?—

If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress: But well and free,

If thou so yield him, there is gold, and hero My bluest veins to kiss; a hand, that kings Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he's well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold. But, sirrah, mark; we use To say, the dead are well: bring it to that, The gold I give thee, will I melt, and pour Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will; But there's no goodness in thy face: If Antony Be free, and healthful,—why so tart a favour To trumpet such good tidings? If not well, Thou shouldst come like a fury crown'd with snakes, Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou speak'st:

Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, is well, Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him, I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Caesar.

Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like "but yet," it does alay The good precedence; fie upon "but yet:" "But yet" is as a gosier to bring forth Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend, Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear, The good and bad together: He's friend with Caesar;

In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report: He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn i' the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee!
[Strikes him down.
Mess. Good madam, patience.
Cleo. What say you?—Hence,
[Strikes him again.
Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head;
[She hales him up and down.
Thou shalt be whip'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in ling'ring pickle.
Mess.
Gracious madam,
I, that do bring the news, made not the match.
Cleo. Say, 'tis not so, a province I will give thee,
And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou hadst
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage;
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty cau beg.
Mess.
He's married, madam.
Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long.
[Draws a Dagger.
Mess.
Nay, then I'll run:—
What mean you, madam? I have made no fault.
[Exit.
Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself;
The man is innocent.
Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.—
Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures.
Turn all to serpents!—Call the slave again;
Though I am mad, I will not bite him:—Call.
Char. He is afraid to come.
Cleo. I will not hurt him:—
These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.—Come hither, sir.
Re-enter Messenger.
Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news: Give to a gracious message
An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell
Themselves, when they be felt.
Mess.
I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worser than I do,
If thou again say, Yes.
Mess.
He is married, madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?
Mess. Should I lie, madam?
Cleo. O, I would, thou didst;
So half my Egypt were submerged, and made
A cistern for seal'd snakes! Go, get thee hence;
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou would'st appear most ugly. He is married?
Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend you:
To punish me for what you make me do,
Seems much unequal: He is married to Octavia.
Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knife of thee,
That art not!—What? thou'rt sure of't?—Get thee hence:
The merchandisc which thou hast brought from Rome,
Are all too deare for me; Lie they upon thy hand,
And be undone by 'em!
[Exit Mess.
Char. Good your highness, patience.
Cleo. In praising Antony, I have disgrac'd Cesar.
Char. Many times, madam.
Cleo. I am paid for 't now.
Lead me from hence,
I sliu; O Iras, Charmian,—'Tis no matter:—
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair:—bring me word quickly.—
[Exit Alex.
Let him for ever go:—Let him not—Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
T'other way he's a Mars:—Bid you Alexas.
[To Mar.
Bring me word, how tall she is.—Pity me, Charmian,
But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber.
[Exit.

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.
Enter Pompey and Menas, at one side, with Drum and Trumpet: at another, Cesar, Lepidus, Antony, Enobarbus, Mecenas, with Soldiers marching.
Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight.
Ces.
Most meet,
That first we come to words; and therefore have we
Our written purposes before us sent;
Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 'twill raise up thy discontented sword;
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
That else must perish here.
Pom.
To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods,—I do not know,
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son, and friends; since Julius Caesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,54
There saw you labouring for him. What was it,
That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what Made the all-honour'd, honest, Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freed-
To drench the Capitol; but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it,
Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burden
The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant
To scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome
Cast on my noble father.

Ces. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails,
We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'rt
How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed,
Thou dost o'ercount me of my father's house;55
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in 't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the present,) how you take
The offers we have sent you.

Ces. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embrac'd.

Ces. And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: This 'greed upon,
To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our targe undinted.

Pom. Know then,
I came before you here, a man prepar'd
To take this offer: But Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience:—Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, You must know,
When Caesar and your brothers were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds 't the east are soft; and thanks to you,

ACT II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE VII.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me: though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: If our eyes had authority here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoever their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here; Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Caesar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Caesar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together, will be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is; he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

T. 3 d

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—On Board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter Two or Three Servants, with a Banquet.

1st Serv. Here they'll be, man: Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already, the least wind the world will blow them down.

2nd Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1st Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink. 2nd Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, "no more?" reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1st Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2nd Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a read that will do me no service, as a partizan I could not have.

1st Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in 't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A Senet sounded. Enter Caesar, Antony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mezentius, Enobarsmus, Menas, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, sir: [To Caes.] They take the flow o' the Nile

By certain scales i' the pyramid; they know,

By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth,

Or foison, follow: The higher Nilus swells,

The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsmen

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,

And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine.—A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll never out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me, you'll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptolemies' pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

385
ACT II.

ANDREX AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE VII.

Men. Pompey, a word. [Aside.

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon.—

This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile? Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet,

Cas. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [To Men. aside.] Go, hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that? away!

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me, Rise from thy stool. [Aside.

Pom. I think, thou'rt mad. The matter?

Cas. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith: What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,

Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?

Ant. That's twice.

Men. How should that be?

But entertain it, and,

Although thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup. Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove: Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky melips, Is thine, if thou wilt have 't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world sharers, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel: Let me cut the cable;

And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:

All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou should'st have done,

And not have spoke on 't! In me, 'tis villany;

In thee, it had been good service. Thou must know,
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour;

Mine honour, it. Repent, that e'er thy tongue
Hath so betray'd thine act: Being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done;

But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. For this, [Aside.

I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.—

Who seeks, and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd,

Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore—I'll pledge it for him,

Pom. Elno. Here's to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill, till the cup be bid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Painting to the Attend., who carries off Lep.

Men. Why? Eno. He bears The third part of the world, man; See'st not?

Men. The third part then is drunk: 'Would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reeks.

Men. Comc.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the vessels, ho! Here is to Caesar.

Cas. I could well forbear it.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,

And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Cas. Possess it, I'll make answer: but I had rather fast

From all, four days, than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To Ant.

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchans,

And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha'nt, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all take hands;

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our

In soft and delicate Loothe.

Eno. All take hands.—

Make battery to our ears with the loud music:

The while, I'll place you: Then the boy shall sing;

The holding every man shall bear, as loud

—As his strong sides can volley. [Music plays.

Eno. places them hand in hand.
ANTHONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIIUS, as after Conquest, with SILIUS, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead Body of Parthia borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck; and now
Pleas’d fortune does of Marcus Crassus’ death
Make me revenger.—Fear the king’s son’s body
Before our army:—Thy Parthia, Orodes,
Pays this for Marcus Crassus.40

Sil. Noble Ventidius,
Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,
The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,
Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly; so thy grand captain Antony Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius,
I have done enough: A lower place, note well,
May make too great an act: For learn this, Silius;
Better leave undone, than by our deed acquire
Too high a fame, when him we serve’s away.
Cesar, and Antony, have ever won
More in their officer, than person: Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev’d by the minute, lost his favour.

Who does i’ the wars more than his captain can,
Becomes his captain’s captain; and ambition,
The soldier’s virtue, rather makes choice of loss,
Than gain, which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But ’twould offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius,
That without which a soldier, and his sword,
Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony ?

Ven. I’ll humbly signify what in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effected;
How, with his banners, and his well-paid ranks,
The no’er-yet-benten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out o’ the field.

Sil. Where is he now ?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens: whither with what haste
The weight we must convey with us will permit,
We shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. An Anti-Chamber in Cæsar’s House.

Enter AGRIPPA, and ENOBARRUS, meeting.

Agr. What, are the brothers parted?

[387]
ACT III.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE III.

Eno. They have despatch'd with Pompey, he is gone; The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps To part from Rome: Caesar is sad; and Lepidus, Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled With the green sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus. Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Caesar! Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony.

Eno. But he loves Caesar best; yet he loves Antony: Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho, his love To Antony. But as for Caesar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves. Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle. This is to horse.—Adieu, noble Agrippa.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Ant. No further, sir.

Ces. You take from me a great part of myself; Use me well in it.—Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest band Shall pass on thy approval.—Most noble Antony, Let not the piece of virtue, which is set Betwixt us, as the cement of our love, To keep it builded, be the rain, to batter The fortress of it: for better might we Have loved without this mean, if on both parts This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended In your distrust.

Ces. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find, Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear: So, the gods keep you, And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends! We will here part.

Ces. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well; The elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Octa. My noble brother!—

Ant. The April's in her eyes: It is love's spring, And these the showers to bring it on.—Be cheerful.

Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Ces. What, Octavia?

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can Her heart inform her tongue: the swan's down feather,

That stands upon the swell at full of tide, And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Caesar weep? [Aside to Agr. Agr. He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worse for that, were he a horse;

So is he, being a man.

Agr. Why, Enobarbus?

When Antony found Julius Caesar dead, He cried almost to roaring: and he wept, When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rieum:

What willingly he did confound, he wail'd:

Believe it, till I weep too.

Ces. No, sweet Octavia, You shall hear from me still; the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come; I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love Look, here I have you; thus I let you go, And give you to the gods.

Ces. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light To thy fair way!

Ces. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octa.

Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afraid to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to:—Come hither, sir.

Enter a Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you, But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head
ACT III.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE IV.

I’ll have: But how? when Antony is gone
Through whom I might command it.—Come thou near.
Mess. Most gracious majesty,—
Cleo. Didst thou behold
Octavia?
Mess. Ay, dread queen.
Cleo. Where?
Mess. Madam, in Rome
I look’d her in the face; and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.
Cleo. Is she as tall as me?
Mess. She is not, madam.
Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tongued, or low?
Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voic’d.
Cleo. That’s not so good:—he cannot like her long.
Char. Like her? O Isis! ’tis impossible.
Cleo. I think so, Charmian: Dull of tongue, and dwarfish!—
What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If e’er thou look’dst on majesty.
Mess. She creeps;
Her motion and her station are as one;
She shows a body rather than a life;
A statue, than a breather.
Cleo. Is this certain?
Mess. Or I have no observance.
Char. Three in Egypt
Cannot make better note.
Cleo. He’s very knowing,
I do perceiv’t:—There’s nothing in her yet:—
The fellow has good judgment.
Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Guess at her years, I pr’ythee.
Mess. Madam,
She was a widow.
Cleo. Widow?—Charmian, hark.
Mess. And I do think, she’s thirty.
Cleo. Bear’st thou her face in mind? is it long, or round?
Mess. Round even to faultiness.
Cleo. For the most part too
They are foolish that are so.—Her hair, what colour?
Mess. Brown, madam; And her forehead is as low
As she would wish it.
Cleo. There is gold for thee.
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill:—
I will employ thee back again; I find thee

Most fit for business: Go, make thee ready;
Our letters are prepar’d.
[Exit Mess.
Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repeat me much,
That so I harry’d him. Why, methinks, by him,
This creature’s no such thing.
Char. O, nothing, madam.
Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.
Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,
And serving you so long!
Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian:—
But ’tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me
Where I will write: All may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you, madam. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — Athens. A Room in Antony’s House.

Enter Antony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,—
That were excusable, that, and thousands more
Of semblable import,—but he hath wag’d
New wars ’gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it
To public ear:
Spoke scantily of me: when perforce he could not
But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly
He vented them; most narrow measure lent me:
When the best hint was given him, he not took’t,
Or did it from his teeth.
Octa. O my good lord,
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne’er stood between,
Praying for both parts:
And the good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, “O, bless my lord and husband!”
Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
“O, bless my brother!” Husband win, win brother,
Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
’Twill these extremes at all.
Ant. Gentle Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks Best to preserve it: If I lose mine honour,
I lose myself: better I were not yours,
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,
Yourself shall go between us: The mean time, lady,
I’ll raise the preparation of a war
Shall stain your brother; Make your soonest haste;
So your desires are yours.
Octa. Thanks to my lord.

389
The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be
As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should solder up the rilt.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going;
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. [Execunt.

SCENE V.—The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros?
Eros. There's strange news come, sir.
Eno. What, man?
Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon
Pompey.

Eno. This is old; What is the success?
Eros. Caesar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivality; would not let him partake in the glory of the action: and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey: upon his own appeal, seizes him: So the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no
more;
And throw between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns
The rush that lies before him; cries, "Fool, Lepi-dus!"
And threats the throat of that his officer,
That murder'd Pompey.

Eno. Our great navy's rigged.
Eros. For Italy, and Caesar. More, Domitius;
My lord desires you presently: my news
I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'Twill be naught:

But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. [Execunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in Caesar's House.

Enter Caesar, Aemilia, and Mecenas.

Ces. Contemning Rome, he has done all this:
And more;
In Alexandria,—here's the manner of it,—
I the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold

Were publickly enthrone'd: at the feet, sat
Cesarian, whom they call my father's son;
And all the unlawful issue, that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her
He gave the 'establishment of Egypt; made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,
Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye?
Ces. That the common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons he there proclaim'd, The kings of kings:
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia,
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd
Syria, Cilicia, and Phcenicia: She
In the habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience
As 'tis reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Agr. Who, queasy with his insolence
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.
Ces. The people know it; and have now receiv'd
His accusations.

Agr. Whom does he accuse?
Ces. Caesar: and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o' the isle: then does he say, he leant me
Some shipping unrestor'd; lastly, he frets,
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Ces. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.
I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;
That he his high authority abus'd,
And did deserve his change; for what I have conquered,
I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I
Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.
Ces. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter Octavia.

Octa. Hail, Caesar, and my lord! hail, most dear
Cesar!
Ces. That ever I should call thee, cast-away!
Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.
Ces. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not
Like Caesar's sister: The wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher, and
ACT III.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

The neighs of horse to tell of her approach,
Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way,
Should have borne men; and expectation fence,
Longing for what it had not: nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,
Rais’d by your populous troops: But you are come
A market-maid to Rome; and have prevented
The ostent of our love, which, left unshewn
Is often left unlov’d: we should have met you
By sea, and land; supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.
Octa. Good my lord,
To come thus was I not constrain’d, but did it
On my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony,
Hearing that you prepar’d for war, acquainted
My grieved ear withal: whereon, I begg’d
His pardon for return.
Ces. Which soon he granted,
Being an obstruct ’tween his lust and him.
Octa. Do not say so, my lord.
Ces. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind,
Where is he now?
Octa. My lord, in Athens.
Ces. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire
Up to a whore; who now are levyng
The kings o’ the earth for war: He hath assembled
Bocchus, the king of Lybia; Archelaus,
Of Cappadocia; Philadephos, king
Of Paphagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas:
King Malechus of Arabia; king of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king
Of Conagene; Polemon and Amintas,
The kings of Mede, and Laconia, with a
More larger list of sceptres.
Octa. Ah me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends,
That do afflict each other!
Ces. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth;
Till we perceiv’d, both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O’er your content these strong necessities;
But let determin’d things to destiny
Hold unbewail’d their way. Welcome to Rome:
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus’d
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods,
To do you justice, make them ministers
Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort;
And ever welcome to us.

| Agr. | Welcome, lady. |
| Mec. | Welcome, dear madam. |
| Each heart in Rome does love and pity you: | |
| Only the adulterous Antony, most large | |
| In his abominations, turns you oﬀ; | |
| And gives his potent regiment to a trull, | |
| That noises it against us. | |
| Octa. | Is it so, sir? |
| Ces. | Most certain. Sister, welcome: Pray you, | |
| Be ever known to patience: My dearest sister! | |
| [Exeunt. | |

SCENE VII.—Antony’s Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.
Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why?
Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars;
And say’st, it is not ﬁt.
Eno. Well, is it, is it?
Cleo. Is ’t not? Denounce against us, why should not we
Be there in person?
Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:—
If we should serve with horse and marces together,
The horse were merely lost; the marces would bear
A soldier, and his horse.
Cleo. What is ’t you say?
Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from his time,
What should not then be spar’d. He is already Traduc’d for levity; and ’tis said in Rome,
That Photinus au eunuch, and your maids,
Manage this war.
Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot,
That speak against us! A charge we bear i’ the war,
And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.
Eno. Nay, I have done:
Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antoyn and Camidius.
Ant. Is ’t not strange, Cædicius
That from Tarentum, and Brundusium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Tyre?—You have heard on ’t sweet?
Cleo. Celerity is never more admir’d,
Than by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom’d the best of men,
To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! What else?
Can. Why will my lord do so?
Ant. For he dares us to’t.

Eno. So hath my lord dar’d him to single fight.
Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey: But these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann’d:
Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people
Ingross’d by swift impress; in Caesar’s fleet
Are those, that often have ‘gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare; yours, heavy. No disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar’d for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiery you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark’d footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.

I’ll fight at sea.
Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.
Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full mann’d, from the head of Actium
Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fail,

Enter a Messenger.

We then can do’t at land.—Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;
Caesar has taken T York.

Ant. Can be he there in person? ’tis impossible;
Strange, that his power should be.—Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse:—We’ll to our ship;

Enter a Soldier.

Away, my Thetis!—How now, worthy soldier?

Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misbelieve
This sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians,
And the Phoenicians, go a ducking; we
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away.

[Exeunt Ant., Cleo., and Eno.
Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i’ the right.
Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows
Not in the power on ’t: So our leader’s led,
And we are women’s men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?
Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justicius,
Publicola, and Callius, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar’s Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions, as Beguil’d all spies.

Can. Who’s his lieutenant, hear you?
Sold. They say, one Taurus.
Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls for Canidius.
Can. With news the time’s with labour; and throses forth,
Each minute, some.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter Caesar, Taurus, Officers, and Others.

Ces. Taurus,—

Taur. My lord.
Ces. Strike not by land: keep whole:
Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll:
Our fortune lies upon this jump.

[Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Esopbarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on you’ side o’ the hill,
In eye of Caesar’s battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly.

[Exeunt.

Enter Canidius, marching with his Land Army one Way over the Stage; and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Caesar, the other Way. After their going in, is heard the Noise of a Sea-Fight.

Alarum. Re-enter Esopbarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold
no longer;
The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder;
To see ‘t, mine eyes are blasted.
Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods, and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!
Era. What's thy passion?
Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.
Era. How appears the fight?
Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,
Where death is sure. You'ribald-rig'd nag of Egypt,
Whom leprosy o'ertakes; 'tis the midst o' the fight,—
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,—
The brise upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.
Era. That I beheld: mine eyes
Did sicken at the sight on't, and could not Endure a further view.
Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting mallard,
Leaving the flight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.
Era. Alack, alack!

Enter Canidius.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O, he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.
Era. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why then, good night
Indeed.
Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled.
Scar. 'Tis easy to 't; and there I will attend
What further comes.
Can. To Caesar will I render
My legions, and my horse; six kings already Show me the way of yielding.
Era. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, and Attendants.

Ant. Hark, the land bids me tread no more upon 't,
It is ashamed to bear me;—Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever:—I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Caesar.
Att. Fly! not we.
Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards
To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolve'd upon a course,
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone; you shall Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that he left
Which leaves itself: to the sea side straightway:
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: 'pray you now:—
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you:—I'll see you by and by.
[Sits down.

Enter Eros, and Cleopatra, led by Charmian and Iras.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him:—Comfort him,
Iras. Do, most dear queen.
Char. Do! Why, what else?
Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, sir?
Ant. O fye, fye, fye.
Char. Madam,—
Iras. Madam; O good empress!—
Eros. Sir, sir,—
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes; He, at Philippi, kept
His sword even like a dancer; while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius: and 'twas I,
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: Yet now—No matter.
Cleo. Ah, stand by.
Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.
Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He is unqualified with very shame.
Cleo. Well then,—Sustain me:—O!
Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches;
ACT III.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE X.—XI.

Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her; but Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation;
A most unনoble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the queen.

Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back on what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought,
You would have followed.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well,
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou should'st tow me after: O'er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou knew'st; and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon.

Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness; who
With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring fortunes. You did know,
How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obev it on all cause.

Cleo. O pardon, pardon.

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates
All that is won and lost: Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.—We sent our schoolmaster,
Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead:—
Some wine, within there, and our viands:—Fortune knows,
We scorn her most, when most she offers blows.

[Exeunt.

SCENE X.—Caesar's Camp, in Egypt.

Enter Caesar, Dolabella, Thyreus, and Others.

Ces. Let him appear that's come from Antony.—
Know you him?

Dol. Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
Not many moons gone by.

Enter Euphronius.

Ces. Approach, and speak.

Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle-leaf
To his grand sen.

Ces. Be it so; Declare thine office.

Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt: which not granted,
He lessens his requests; and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: This for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;
Submits her to thy might; and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Ces. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience, nor desire, shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there: This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Ces. Bring him through the bands.

[Exit Eup.

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: Despatch;
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise, [To Thy.
And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention, offers: women are not,
In their best fortunes, strong; but want will perjure
The ne'er-touch'd vestal: Try thy cunning, Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Caesar, I go.

Ces. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw;
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Caesar, I shall. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iris.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What although you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The mercid question: 'Twas a shame no less
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Pr'ythee, peace.
Enter Antony, with Euphrionius.

Ant. Is this his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen Shall then have courtesy, so she will yield Us up.

Eup. 110 says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—
To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again; Tell him, he wears the rose
Of youth upon him; from which, the world should note
Something particular; his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child, as soon
As i' the command of Caesar: I dare him therefore To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
Ourselves alone: I'll write it; follow me.

[Execunt Ant. and Eup.

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the show, Against a swordsman. I see, men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar will Answer his emptiness!—Cæsar, thou hast subdu'd
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Cæsar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony?—See, my women!—
Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,
That kneel'd unto the buds.—Admit him, sir.

Eno. Mine honesty, and I, begin to square.

[Aside.

The loyalty, well held to fools, does make
Our faith mere folly:—Yet, he, that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i' the story.

Enter Thyreus.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends; say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has;
Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: For us, you know,
Whose he is, we are; and that's, Cæsar's.

Thyr. So.—
Thus then, thou most renown'd; Cæsar entreats,
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Further than he is Cæsar.

Cleo. Go on: Right royal.

Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O! Thy. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows
What is most right: Mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.

Eno. To be sure of that, [Aside.

I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee.

[Exit Eno.

Thyr. Shall I say to Cæsar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Cæsar this, In deputation
I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt
To lay my crown at his feet, and there to kneel:
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath, I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course.

Wisdome and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsar's father
Oft, when he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Restow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!—

What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One, that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey’d.

Eno. You will be whipp’d.

Ant. Approach, there:—Ay, you kite!—Now gods and devils!
Authority melts from me: Of late, when I cry’d,
"ho!"
Like boys unto a muss,² kings would start forth,
And cry, “Your will?" Have you no ears? I am

Enter Attendants.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.

Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion’s whelp,
Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!

Whip him:—Were ’t twenty of the greatest tribuntaries
That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of she here, (What’s her name,
Since she was Cleopatra?)—Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whine aloud for mercy: Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp’d,
Bring him again:—This Jack of Caesar’s shall Bear us an errand to him.—

[Exeunt Attend. with Thyr.

You were half blasted ere I knew you:—Ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress’d in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus’d
By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever:—
But when we in our viciousness grow hard,
(O misery on’t!) the wise gods seal our eyes;
In our own filth drop our clear judgments; make us
Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. O, is it come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon
Dead Caesar’s trencher: nay, you were a fragment
Of Cæcius Pompey’s; besides what hotter hours, Unregister’d in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick’d out:—For, I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards,
And say, “God quit you!” be familiar with

My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal,
And plighter of high hearts!—O, that I were
Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar
The horned herd! for I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly, were like
A halter’d neck, which does the hangman thank
For being yare about him.—Is he whipp’d?

Re-enter Attendants, with Thyreus.

1st Att. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. Cry’d he? and begg’d he pardon?
1st Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter and he thou
Sorry
To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp’d for following him: henceforth,
The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on’t.—Get thee back to Caesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: Look, thou say,
He makes me angry with him: for he seems
Proud and disdainful; harping on what I am;
Not what he knew I was: He makes me angry;
And at this time most easy 'tis to do 't;
When my good stars, that were my former guides
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abism of hell. If he dislike
My speech, and what is done; tell him, he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis’d bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me: Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes, begone. [Exit Thyr.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our terrene moon
Is now eclips’d; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source; and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so
Dissolve my life! The next Cæsarion smite!³³
Till, by degrees, the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless; till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.
ACT IV.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE I.—Cæsar's Camp at Alexandria.

Enter Cæsar, reading a Letter; Agrippa, Mecenas, and Others.

Cæs. He calls me boy; and chides, as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt:—my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods;—dares me to personal combat,
Cæsar to Antony:—Let the old ruffian know,
I have many other ways to die;—mean time,
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Caesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunt'd even to falling. Give him no breath; but now
Make boot of his distraction:—Never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight:—Within our files there are of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it be done;
And feast the army:—we have store to do 't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!

[I Exeunt.

I had thought, to have held it poor; but, since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We'll yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so; we'll speak to them; and to-night
I'll force
The wine peep through their scars.—Come on, my queen;
There's sap in 't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me;—for I will contend
Even with his pestilential sceptre.

[Exeunt Ant., Cleo., and Attendant.

Eno. Now he'll out-stare the lightning. To be furious,
Is, to be frighted out of fear: and in that mood,
The dove will peck the cartridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart:—When valour preys on reason,
It cats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.

[Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Eobardus, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and Others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight:—or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woot thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike; and cry, "Take all."

Ant. Well said; come on.—
Call forth my household servants; let 's to-night.

Enter Servants.

Be bounteous at our meal.—Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast thou:—
And thou,—and thou, and thou:—you have serv'd me well,
And kings have been your fellows.
ACT IV.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

.scene III.—IV.

Cleo. What means this?
Eno. 'Tis one of those odd tricks, which sorrow shoots
[Aside.]
Out of the mind.
Ant. And thou art honest too.
I wish, I could be made so many men; And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony; that I might do you service So good as you have done.
Serv. The gods forbid!
Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night:
Scant not my cups; and make as much of me, As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command.
Cleo. What does he mean?
Eno. To make his followers weep.
Ant. Tend me to-night;
May be, it is the period of your duty: Haply, you shall not see me more; or, A mangled shadow: perchance, to-morrow You'll serve another master. I look on you, As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends, I turn you not away; but, like a master Married to your good service, stay till death: Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more, And the gods yield you for't!
Eno. What mean you, sir, To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep; And I, an ass, am onion-eyed; for shame, Transform us not to women.
Ant. No, ho, ho, ho!
Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus! Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends, You take me in too dolorous a sense: I spake to you for your comfort: did desire you To burn this night with torches: Know, my hearts, I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you, Where rather I'll expect victorious life, Than death and honour. Let's to supper; come, And drown consideration.

Execute.

SCENE III.—The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Two Soldiers, to their Guard.

1st Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.

2nd Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?
1st Sold. Nothing: What news?

2nd Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour:
Good night to you.
1st Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter Two other Soldiers.

2nd Sold. Soldiers, Have careful watch.
3rd Sold. And you: Good night, good night. [The first Two place themselves at their Posts.
4th Sold. Here we: [They take their Posts.] and if to-morrow Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope Our landmen will stand up.
3rd Sold. 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music of Harps under the Stage.
4th Sold. Peace, what noise?
1st Sold. List, list!
2nd Sold. Hark:
1st Sold. Music i' the air.
3rd Sold. Under the earth.
4th Sold. It signs well,14 Does't not?
3rd Sold. No.
1st Sold. Peace, I say. What should this mean?
2nd Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd,
Now leaves him.
1st Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen Do hear what we do.
[They advance to another Post.
2nd Sold. How now, masters?
Sold. How now?
How now? do you hear this?
[Several speaking together.
1st Sold. Ay; Is't not strange?
3rd Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?
1st Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter; Let's see how 'twill give off.
Sold. [Several speaking.] Content: 'Tis strange.25 [Execute.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, and Cleopatra; Charmian and Others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!
Cleo. Sleep a little.
Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!
Enter Eros, with Armour.

Come, my good fellow, put thine iron on:—
If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her.—Come.
Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.
What's this for?
Ant. Ah, let bo, let be! thou art
The arroner of my heart.—False, false; this, this.
Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: Thus it must be.
Ant. Well, well;
We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow?
Go, put on thy defences.
Eros. Briefly, sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well?
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbucks this, till we do please
To doff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.—
Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a square
More tight at this, than thou: Despatch.—O love,
That thou could'st see my wars to-day, and knew'st
The royal occupation! thou should'st see

Enter an Officer, armed.
A workman in't.—Good morrow to thee; welcome:
Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge:
To business that we love, we rise betime,
And go to it with delight.
1st Off. A thousand, sir,
Early though it be, have on their riveted trim,
And at the port expect you.

Enter other Officers, and Soldiers.
2nd Off. The morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.
All. Good morrow, general.
Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads.
This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.—
So, so; come, give me that: this way; well said.
Pare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me:
This is a soldier's kiss: rebukable, [Kisses her.
And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more mechanic compliment: I'll leave thee
Now, like a man of steel.—You, that will fight,
Follow me close; I'll bring you to 't.—Adieu.

[Exeunt Ant., Eros., Off., and Sold.
Char. Please you, retire to your chamber?
Cleo. Lead me.
He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cesar might Determine this great war in single fight!
Then, Antony.—But now,—Well, on. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antony's Camp near Alexandria.
Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.
Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!
Ant. 'Would, thou and those thy scars had once
To make me fight at land!
Sold. Had'st thou done so,
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels.
Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Sold. One ever near thee: Call for Enobarbus,
He shall not hear thee; or from Cesar's camp
Say, "I am none of thine."
Ant. What say'st thou? Sir,
He is with Cesar.
Eros. Sir, his cheasts and treasure
He has not with him.
Ant. Is he gone?
Sold. Most certain
Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;
Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to him
(I will subscribe) gentle adieux, and greetings:
Say, that I wish he never find moro cause
To change a master.—O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men:—Eros, despatch. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Cesar's Camp before Alexandria.
Flourish. Enter Cesar, with Agrippa, Enobarbus, and Others.
Cesar. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is, Antony be took alive;
Make it so known.
Agri. Cesar, I shall. [Exit Agri.
Cesar. The time of universal peace is near:
Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd world
Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.
Mess. Antony
Is come into the field.
Cesar. Go, charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the van,
That Antony may seem to spend his fury
Upon himself. [Exeunt Cesar. and his Train.
Enos. Alexas did revolt— and went to Jewry,
On affairs of Antony; there did persuade
Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar,
And leave his master Antony: for this pains,
Caesar hath hang'd him. Canidius, and the rest
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill;
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Caesar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus: The messenger
 Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now,
Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.
I tell you true: Best that you saf'd the bringer
Out of the host; I must attend mine office.
Or would have done 't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove.

[Exit Sold.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most. O Antony,
Thou mine of bounty, how would'st thou have paid
My better service, when my turpitude
Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart:
If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
Shall outstrike thought: but thought will do't, I feel.
I fight against thee!—No: I will go seek
Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and Trumpets. Enter Agrippa,
and Others.

Agr. Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too far:
Cesar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected.

[Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Antony and Scarus, wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had driven them home
With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes; I have yet
Room for six scotches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind;
'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy spritely comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halter after. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter Antony, marching; Scarus, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp; Run one before,
And let the queen know of our guests.—To-morrow,
Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all:
For doughty-handed are you; and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but has it been
Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.
Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
The honoured gashes whole.—Give me thy hand:
[To Scar.

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee.—O thou day o' the world,
Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and all,
Through proof of harness to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphant.

Cleo. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl? though grey
Do something mingle with our brown; yet have we
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;
Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand;—
Kiss it, my warrior:—He hath fought to-day,
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.
I'll give thee, friend, an armour all of gold; it was a king's.
Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled like holy Phæbus' car. Give me thy hand;Through Alexandria make a jolly march;Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them;Had our great palace the capacityTo camp this host, we all would sup together;And drink carouses to the next day's fate,Which promises royal peril. — Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear;Make mingle with our rattling tabourines; That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together,
Applauding our approach. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Caesar's Camp.

Sentinels on their post. Enter Enobarbus.

1st Sold. If we be not relieved within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard: The night
Is shiny; and they say we shall embattle
By the second hour it the morn.

2nd Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to us.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night,—
3rd Sold. What man is this?
2nd Sold. Stand close, and list to him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent!—
1st Sold. Enobarbus! Peace;
Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy
The poisonous damp of night dispense upon me:
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me: Throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault:
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive:
O Antony! O Antony! [Dies.

2nd Sold. Let's speak To him.

1st Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Caesar.

3rd Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps,

1st Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet for sleeping.

2nd Sold. Go we to him.

3rd Sold. Awake, awake, sir; speak to us.

2nd Sold. Hear you, sir?

1st Sold. The hand of death hath raught him.

Hark, the drums [Drums afar off
Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him To the court of guard; he is of note; our hour Is fully out.

3rd Sold. Come on then:
Ho may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter Antony and Scæbus, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.

Sca. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would, they 'd fight i' the fire, or in the air;
Wo 'd fight there too. But this it is; Our foot Upon the hills adjoining to the city,
Shall stay with us: order for sea is given;
They have put forth the haven: Further on, Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, and his Forces, marching.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will be still by land, Which, as I take 't, we shall; for his best force Is forth to man his galleys. To tho' vales, And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.

Re-enter Antony and Scæbus.

Ant. Yet they 're not join'd: Where yonder pine does stand,
I shall discover all; I'll bring thee word Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.

Sca. Swallows have built In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers Say, they know not, — they cannot tell; — look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony Is valiant, and dejected; and, by starts, His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear, Of what he has, and has not.

Alarum afar off, as at a Sea Fight.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. All is lost;
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Tripel-turn'd whore! 'tis doth
Has sold to this novice; and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all:—Bid them all fly, be gone.

[Exit Scar.

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands.—All come to this?—The hearts
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, to disband, melt their sweets
On blossoming Caesar; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am:
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,
Whose eye bek'd forth my wars, and call'd them
home;
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,
Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.—
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt.

Cleo. Why is my lord enraged against his love?
Ant. Vanish; or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee
And hoist thee up to the shouting Plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, to dolts; and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleo.] 'Tis well thou 'rt gone,
If it be well to live: But better 'tvere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho!—
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: Teach me,
Alecs, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die;
To the Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot: she dies for 't.—Eros, ho! [Exit.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras and Mardian.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O, he is more mad

Than Tidammon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.

Char. To the monument:
There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.
The soul and body rive not more in parting,
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument:—
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was, Antony,
And word it, pr'ythee, piteously: Hence, Mardian;
and bring me how he takes my death.—
To the monument. [Exit.

SCENE XII.—The same. Another Room.

Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros. Ay, noble lord.
Ant. Sometime, we see a cloud that's dragonish;
A vapour, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forkt mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: Thou hast seen these signs;
They are black vesper's pageants.
Eros. Ay, my lord.
Ant. That, which is now a horse, even with a thought,
The rack dislimns; and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.
Eros. It does, my lord.
Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony;
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,—
Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had mine
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto 't
A million more, now lost,—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph.—
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.—O, thy vile lady!

Enter Mardian.

She has robb'd me of my sword.
Mar. No, Antony; My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.
Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace;
She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.
Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once
And that she has discharged; what thou would'st do,
Is done unto thy hand; the last she spake
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!
Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?
Mark. Dead.

Ant. Eros, unarm; the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep:—that thou depart'st hence safe,
Does pay thy labour richly: Go.—Off, pluck off;—

[Exit Mark.

The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!
Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case!—Ajax, Eros, apace.—
No more a soldier:—Bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne.—From me a while.—

[Exit Eros.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture:—Since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stay no further: Now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: Seal then, and all is done.—
Eros!—I come, my queen:—Eros!—Stay for me:
Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros?

Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?
Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword
Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, condemn myself, to lack
The courage of a woman; less noble mind
Than she, which, by her death, our Caesar tells,
"I am conqueror of myself." Thou art sworn, Eros,
That, when the exigent should come, (which now
Is come, indeed,) when I should see behind me
The inevitable proscription of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command,
Thou then would'st kill me: do't; the time is come:
Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Caesar thou defeat'st.
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!

Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Ant. Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy master thus with pleas'd arms, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face subdued
To penetrative shame; whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see't.
Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir, pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swear'st thou not then
To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee. [Turning from him.

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor! let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man;—and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then:—[Falls on his Sword
Thus do I escape the sorrow
Of Antony's death.

[Dies.

Ant. Thrice nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what I should, and thou could'st not. My queen and Eros
Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me
A nobleness in record: But I will be
A bridgroom in my death, and run into't
As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar; to do thus [Falling on his Sword.

I learn'd of thee. How; not yet dead? not dead?—
The guard!—ho!—despatch me.

Enter Dercetas and Guard.

1st Guard. What's the noise?
Ant. I have done my work ill, friends; O, make an end
Of what I have begun.
I have led you oft: carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. [Exeunt, bearing Ant.

SCENE XIII.—The same. A Monument.

Enter above, Cleopatra, Charmian, and Ibas.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence.
Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not;
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great

Enter Diomedes.

As that which makes it,—How now? is he dead?
Cleo. His death's upon him, but not dead.
Look out 'o' the other side your monument,
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter Antony, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O thou sun
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!—Darkling stand
The varying shore o' the world! —O Antony!
Antony, Antony!—Charmian, help; help, Ibas;
Help, friends below; let's draw him hither.

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying: only
I here impotent death a while, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.—

Cleo. I dare not, dear,
Dear my lord, pardon,) I dare not,
Lest I be taken; not the imperious show
Of the full-fortune'd Caesar ever shall Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And still conclusion, shall require no honour
Demnring upon me.—But come, come, Antony,—
Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up;
Assist, good friends.

Ant. O quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport, indeed!—How heavy weighs my lord!
Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight: Had I great Jove's power,
The strong-winged Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishers were ever fools;—O, come, come, come;
[They draw Ant. up.
And welcome, welcome! die, where thou hast liv'd;
Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.
All.
Ant. A heavy sight!
Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.
Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me raise so high,
That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,
Provok'd by my offence.
Ant. One word, sweet queen:
Of Caesar seek your honour, with your safety.—O!
Cleo. They do not go together.
Ant. Gentle, hear me:
None about Caesar trust, but Proculeius.
Cleo. My resolution, and my hands, I'll trust;
None about Caesar.
Ant. The miserable change now at my end,
Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts,
In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world,
The noblest: and do now not basely die,
Nor cowardly; put off my helmet to
My countryman, a Roman, by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going;
I can no more. [Dies.
Cleo. Noblest of men, woo 't die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better than a sty?—O, see, my women,
The crown o' the earth doth melt.—My lord!—
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen:63 young boys, and girls
Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon. [She faints.
Char. O, quietness, lady!
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.
Char. Lady.—
Iras. Madam,—
Char. O madam, madam, madam!
Iras. Royal Egypt! Empress!
Char. Peace, peace, Iras.
Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; and commanded
By such poor passion as the maid that milks,
And does the meanest chores.—It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them, that this world did equal theirs,
Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but naught
Patience is sottish; and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: Then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us?—How do you, women?
What, what? good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian?
My noble girls!—Ah, women, women! look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out:—Good sirs, take heart:—
[To the Guard below.
We'll bury him: and then, what's brave what's noble,
Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away:
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.
[Exeunt; those above bearing off Antony's Body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Cesar's Camp before Alexandria.

Enter Cesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mecenas,
Gallus, Proculeius, and Others.

Ces. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him, he mocks us by
The pauses he makes.

Dol. Cesar, I shall. [Exit Dol.

Enter Derceetas, with the Sword of Antony.

Ces. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that Dar'st
Appear thus to us?

3 g 2

Der. I am call'd Derceetas;
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up, and spoke,
He was my master; and I wore my life,
To spend upon his haters: If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Cesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Ces. What is 't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Cesar, Antony is dead.

Ces. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack: The round world should have shook Lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens:—The death of Antony
Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Caesar;
Nor by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart.—This is his sword,
I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Ces. Look you sad, friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is a tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours
Waged equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us
Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Ces. O Antony!
I have follow'd thee to this;—But we do lance
Diseases in our bodies: I must performe
Have shown to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine; we could not stand together
In the whole world: But yet let me lament
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle,—that our stars,
Unreconcilable, should divide
Our equalness to this.—Hear me, good friends,—
But I will tell you at some meetest season;

Enter a Messenger.
The business of this man looks out of him,
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are you?

Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,
Confus'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction;
That she preparily may frame herself
To the way she's forced to.

Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt;
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. [Within.] What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. [Within.] Antony
Did tell me of you, bade me trust you: but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquered Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of my own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer;
You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing:
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need; Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy; and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where ho for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. [Within.] Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience: and would gladly
Look him i' the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.
If have comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitted
Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpriz'd;
[Here Proc., and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a Ladder placed against a Window, and having descended, come behind
Cleo. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

Guard her till Cesar come.

[To Pro. and the Guard. Exit Gal.

Iras. Royal queen!
Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!—
Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a Dagger.

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold:
[Seizes and disarms her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this
Relieved, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too
That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master's bounty, by
The undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O, temperance, lady!

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;
If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither: This mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Cesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court;
Nor once be chaste'd with the sober eye

Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me to the shouting variety
Of cursing Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the waters-flies
Blow me into abhorrung! rather make
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,64
And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Cesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Cesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.
To Cesar I will speak what you shall please,

[To Cleo.

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.
[Execute Pro. and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?
Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.
Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard, or known,
You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams;
Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.
Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony;—
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,— Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stood
A sun, and moon; which kept their course, and lighted
The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,— Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd arm
Crested the world: his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas,
That grew the more by reaping: His delights
Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above
The element they liv'd in: In his livery Walk'd crowns, and crownets; realms and islands were
As plates dropp'd from his pocket.
Dol.  Cleopatra,—
Cleo. Think you, there was, or might be, such a man
As this I dream'd of?
Dol. Gentle madam, no.
Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
But, if there be, or ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants stuff
To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine
An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.
Dol. Hear me, good madam:
Your loss is as yourself, great; and you hear it
As answering to the weight: 'Would I might never O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that shoots
My very heart at root.
Cleo. I thank you, sir.
Know you, what Caesar means to do with me?
Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.
Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—
Dol. Though he be honourable,—
Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph?
Dol. Madam, he will;
I know it.
Within. Make way there,—Cesar.
Enter Cesar, Gallus, Proculeius, Mecenas,
Seleucus, and Attendants.
Ces. Which is the queen
Of Egypt?
Dol. 'Tis the emperor, madam.
[Cleo. kneels.]
Ces. You shall not kneel:———
I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.
Cleo. Sir, the gods
Will have it thus: my master and my lord
I must obey.
Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.
Cleo. Sole sir o'the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear; but do confess, I have Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often sham'd our sex.
Ces. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:
If you apply yourself to our intents,
(Which towards you are most gentle,) you shall find
A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.
Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours;
and we
Your 'scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.
Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,
I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;
Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus?
Sel. Here, madam.
Cleo. This is my treasurer; let him speak, my lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.
Sel. Madam,
I had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril,
Speak that which is not.
Cleo. What have I kept back?
Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.
Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.
Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold,
How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours;
And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild:—O slave, of no more trust
Than love that's hir'd;—What, goest thou back; thou shalt
Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes, Though they had wings: Slave, soul-less villain,
dog!
O rarely base!
Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.
Cleo. O Caesar, what a wounding shame is this
That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness
To one so meek,65 that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Caesar,
That I some lady trysts have reserv'd,
Immemorial toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern friends withal; and say,
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livin, and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred? The gods! It smites
me
Beneath the fall I have. Pr'rythee, go hence;
[To Sel.
Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance;—Wert thou a
man,
Thou would'st have mercy on me.
Ces.
Forbear, Seleucus.
[Exit Sel.
Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are mistruth
For things that others do; and, when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.
Ces. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,
Put we i' the roll of conquest; still be it yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe,
Cesar's no merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;
Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen;
For we intend so to dispose you, as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:
Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend; And so adieu.
Cleo. My master, and my lord!
Ces. Not so: Adien.
[Exeunt Ces. and his Train.
Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not
Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian.
[Whispers Char.
Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.
Cleo. I'llie thee again
I have spoke already, and it is provided;
Go, put it to the haste.
Char. Madam, I will.
Re-enter Dolabella.
Dol. Where is the queen?
Char. Behold, sir. [Exit Char.
Cleo. Dolabella?
Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,
Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Caesar through Syria

Intends his journey; and, within three days,
You with your children will be send before:
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.
Cleo. Dolabella,
I shall remain your debtor.
Dol. 1 your servant.
Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Cesar.
Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol.] Now,
Iras, what think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown
In Rome, as well as I: mechanic slaves
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And for'd to drink their vapour.
Iras. The gods forbid!
Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras: Sausy lictors
Will catch at us, like drumsticks; and scald rhymer
Baal'd us out o' tune: the quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I' the posture of a whore.
Iras. O the good gods!
Cleo. Nay, that is certain.
Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.
Cleo. Why, that's the way
To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.—Now, Charmian?—

Enter Charmian.
Show me, my women, like a queen;—Go fetch
My best attires;—I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony:—Sirrah, Iras, go —
Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed:
And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave
To play till dooms-day.—Bring our crown and all.
Wherefore 's this noise?
[Exit Iras. A Noise within.

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow,
That will not be denied your highness' presence;
He brings you figs.
Cleo. Let him come in. How poor an instrument
[Exit Guard.
May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: Now from head to foot
I am marble-constant: now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing a Basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit Guard.

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him; for his biting is immortal; those, that do die of it, do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty:
how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt,
—Truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm:
But he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: But this is most fallible, the worm 's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell. [Clown sets down the Basket.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people! for, indeed,
there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thon no care; it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good: give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.

Re-enter Cleo, with a Robe, Crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have
Immortal longings in me: Now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:—
Yare, yare, good Iras; quick,—Methinks, I hear
Antony call! I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock

The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath: Husband, I come:
Now to that name my courage prove my title!
I am fire, and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.—So,—have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
Farewell, kind Charmian;—Iras, long farewell.

[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies.

Have I the aspick in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say,
The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her; and spend that kiss,
Which is my heaven to have. Come, mortal wretch,

[To the Aps, which she applies to her Breast.

With thy sharp teeth this knot instrinsicke
Of life at once untie: poor venemous fool,
Be angry, and despatch. O, could'st thou speak!
That I might hear thee call great Caesar, ass Unpoliced!

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace
Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break!

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle,—
O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too:

[Applying another Aps to her Arm.

What should I stay— [Falls on a Bed, and dies.

Char. In this wise world?—So, fare thee well.—
Now boast thee, death! in thy possession lies
A lass unparall'd.—Downy windows, close;
And golden Phoebus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1st Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

1st Guard. Caesar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies the Aps.

O, come; apace, despatch; I partly feel thee.

1st Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Caesar's beguill'd.
2nd Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Caesar;—
call him.
1st Guard. What work is here?—Charmian, is this well done?
Cher. It is well done, and fitting for a princess
Descended of so many royal kings.
Ah, soldier! [Dies.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?
2nd Guard. All dead.
Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: Thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act, which thou
So soughts to hinder.
Within. A way there, way for Caesar!

Enter Caesar, and Attendants.

Dol. O, sir, you are too sure an augurer;
That you did fear, is done.
Cas. Bravest at the last:
She level'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.
Dol. Who was last with them?
1st Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs;
This was his basket.
Cas. Poison'd then.
1st Guard. O Caesar,

This Charmian lived but now; she stood, and spake:
I found her trimming up the dimem
On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood,
And on a sudden dropp'd.

Cas. O noble weakness!—If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear
By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown:
The like is on her arm,

1st Guard. This is an aspick's trail; and these fig-leaves
Have slain upon them, such as the aspick leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Cas. Most probable,
That so she died; for her physician tells me,
She hath pursued conclusions infinito
Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument:—
She shall be buried by her Antony:
No grave upon the earth shall slip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them: and their story is No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our array shall,
In solemn show, attend this funeral;
And then to Rome.—Come Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity. [Exeunt.
NOTES TO ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

1 Renages, i.e. disowns, casts off.
2 The triple pillar of the world.
Triple is used inaccurately for third. The third pillar of the world; one of the triumvir, or rulers of the civilized world.
3 Then must thou needst find out new heaven, new earth.
Antony means, there is no boundary to my love in the known universe; if you would limit my affection for you, that limit must be placed at a greater distance than the present visible universe affords.
4 Where’s Fulvia’s process.
Process is summons. Her summons or command to Antony to return to Rome.
5 To sect, i.e. know.
6 But stirr’d by Cleopatra.
Cleopatra has just said, “Antony will be himself.” To which he replies as above; that is, if I am desired or stirred to it by Cleopatra, I will assert my dignity and my power.
7 That he approves the common liar.
The common liar is rumour; Antony by his conduct proves the truth of the reports current in Rome respecting him.
8 O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must change his horns with garlands.
Several emendations of this passage have been offered, but the following explanation by Mr. Steevens appears the most satisfactory:— “To change his horns with (i.e. for) garlands, signifies, to be a triumphant cuckold; a cuckold who will consider his state as an honourable one. Thus, says Benedick, in Much Ado about Nothing, ‘There is no staff more honourable than one tipt with horn.’ We are not to look for serious argument in such a ‘skipping dialogue’ as that before us.”
9 Then, believe, my children shall have no names.
That is, perhaps they shall be illegitimate.
10 Upon the first encounter, draw them.
Drake is the ancient preterite of the verb to drive, and frequently occurs in the Bible. Thus in Joshua, xxiv. 12, “and drave them out before you.”
11 Extended Asia from Euphrates.
Extended his dominions, by conquest, in Asia from Euphrates to, &c. Dr. Johnson, however, says that to extend is a term used for to seize, and he thinks that is the sense in which it is employed here.
12 —— O, then we bring forth weeds,
When our quick winds lie still, &c.
Dr. Warburton has proposed to read minds for winds; we bring forth weeds when our minds are Idle; but the following elucidation by Mr. Henley is so happy that I prefer it. Antony himself, “figuratively, is the idle soil; the malice that speaks home, the quick or cutting winds, whose frosty blasts destroy the profusion of weeds; whilst our ills (that is the truth faithfully told us) are a representation of our vices in their naked odiousness—is as our earing; serves to plough up the neglected soil, and enables it to produce a profitable crop. When the quick winds lie still, that is, in a mild winter, those weeds which ‘the tyrannous breathings of the north’ would have cut off, will continue to grow and feed, to the no small detriment of the crop to follow.”
13 Expedience, erroneously used for expedition.
14 —— Much is breeding,
Which, like the courteous hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent’s poison.
This is an allusion to the idle notion still prevalent in some ignorant rural districts, that the hair of a horse dropt into corrupted water will turn to a worm or serpent. Mr. Coleridge says that this is true, so far as appearances go, and that the hair “will become the supporter of seemingly one worm, though probably of an immense number of small slimy water-lice. The hair will twirl round a finger, and sensibly compress it. It is a common experiment with school-boys in Cumberland and Westmorland.” Dr. Lister, in the Philosophical Transactions, showed that what were vulgarly called animated horseshairs, are real insects. It was also affirmed that they moved like serpents, and were poisonous to swallow. This old supposition is alluded to in Holinshed’s Description of England, p. 224:— “A horse-haire laid in a pale full of the like water will in a short time stirre and become a living creature. But sith the certaintie of these things is rather proved by few,” &c. Also in Churchyard’s Discourse of Rebellion, &c., 1570:—
Hit is of kinde much worse than horses’ heare
That lyca in donge, where are vaine serpents breede.
15 But was a race of heaven.
That is, had a taste or favour of heavenly enjoyment.
16 And that which most with you should safe my going.
That is, reconcile you to my going; make my departure not likely to produce mischief to you.
NOTES TO ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

17 Where be the sacred vials thou should'st fill
    With sorrowful water?

An allusion to the lachrymatory vials, or bottles of tears, which the Romans sometimes put into the urn of a friend. So, in The Two Noble Kinsmen, said to be written by Fletcher and Shakspeare:

Balsams and gums, and heavy cheers,
Sacred vials filled with tears.

18 How this Hieroebian Roman.

Antony was very proud of his supposed descent from Anteon, a son of Hercules. This has been alluded to in the introduction to this play. He sought to give a colouring to this report by his dress and manners.

"Thus," says Plutarch, "when he appeared in public, he wore his vest gilt on the hips, a large sword, and over all a coarse mantle. That kind of conduct which would seem disagreeable to others, rendered him the darling of the army. He talked with the soldiers in their own swaggering and ribald strain, ate and drank with them in public, and would stand to take his victuals at their common table."

19 O, my oblication is a very Antony,
    And I am all forgotten.

Oblivion or forgetfulness, as if it were another Antony, so entirely possesses her, that she has quite forgotten what she wished to utter.

20 ——— He is belov'd of those
    That only have fear'd Caesar.

That is, Pompey is loved and followed by those who from fear have professed allegiance to Caesar.

21 ——— The gilded puddle.

"There is frequently observable," says Mr. Henley, "on the surface of stagnant pools that have remained long undisturbed, a reddish gold-coloured slime—to this appearance the poet here refers."

22 I knew it for my bond.

That is, I knew it to be my agreement, recognize it for my duty.

23 And burgonet of men.

That is, the cap or chief of men; a burgonet is a kind of helmet.

24 And soberly did mount a termagant steed.

That is, a fiery, impatient steed. The furious Douglas, in Henry IV., is called the termagant Scot.

25 ——— And their contestation
    Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Shakspeare has here committed one of those errors in expression, which are not unfrequent in his writings. The quarrel of the wife and brother of Antony was not a theme for him; he did not in any way assist them against Caesar, or indeed trouble himself at all about the matter. What the poet means is, that Antony was their theme, or subject of war; he was the cause of the dispute.

26 ——— My brother never Did urge me in his act.

That is, never did make use of my name as an excuse for his war upon you.

27 And made the wars alike against my stomach
    Having alike your cause.

It must be remembered that Antony and Caesar are joined in office as triumvirs; the wars which were made against Caesar also set the authority of Antony at defiance. The sense is clear, if we read—I having alike your cause. Dr. Johnson proposes to read—Hating alike our cause; but the alteration is, I think, needless.

28 Go to then: your considerate stone.

Mr. Steevens says, this passage, "I believe means only this:—If I must be chidden, henceforward I will be mute as a marble statue, which seems to think, though it can say nothing. As silent as a stone, however, might have been once a common phrase."

29 When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

The poet is here inconsistent with himself; from Enobarbus's own description, it appears that Antony had not seen Cleopatra on the river; for, that while she was there, Antony was sitting alone, enthroned in the market-place, whistling to the air, all the people having left him, that they might witness her approach.

30 Bless her, when she is riggish.

Rigg is an ancient word, meaning a strumpet. So, in Whetstone's Castle of Delight, 1576:—

Then looth they will both lust and wanton love,
Or else he sure such ryches my care shall prove.

Dryden, who has given an emulative imitation of this exquisite description of Cleopatra, expresses this passage more delicately, thus:—

The holy priests gaze on her when she smiles;
And with heav'd hands, forgetting gravity,
They bless her wanton eyes.

31 Would I had never come from thence, nor you
    Thither.

Mr. M. Mason very justly observes that both sense and grammar require that we should read either instead of *thither."

32 Beat mine, inhoop'd at odds.

Inhoop'd is an obsolete word, meaning enclosed, confined. Placed within a hoop or circle that they may fight.

33 Let us to billiards.

This is one of the numerous anachronisms to be found in our poet; this game was unknown in ancient times.

34 Ghosted, i.e. haunted.

35 At land indeed,
    Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house.

O'er-count is here probably used equivocally to mean you have over-reached me of my father’s house; obtained it dishonestly, which was literally the truth. Plutarch tells us “Antony purchased Pompey’s house; but, when he was required to make the payment, he expressed himself in very angry terms; and this he tells us was the reason why he would not go with Cæsar into Africa. His former services he thought insufficiently repaid.” Again:—“when Antony asked him (Sextus Pompey,) where they should sup: ‘There,’ said he, pointing to the admiral-galley of six oars, ‘that is the only patrimonial mansion-house that is left to Pompey;’ and it implied, at the same time, a sarcasm on Antony, who was then in possession of his father’s house.”

56 Some of their plants are ill-rooted already.
Plants is used metaphorically for feet; they stagger in their walk, are unsteady from the effects of intoxication.

57 They have made him drink alms-drink.
To drink alms-drink, is when one man at a feast will drink another’s share, to relieve him of that which is not good for his health. He out of kindness will drink what his companion cannot. Antony and the rest were playing upon Lepidus, by making him in his nearly intoxicated state, drink both his own wine and theirs also.

58 Strike the vessels, ho!
This is not an order relating to the ships, as they were under the command of Pompey, but an invitation to his fellow-revellers to chink the drinking vessels one against the other, as a mark of sociality and friendship. The custom is still common in modern society.

59 The holding every man shall bear, as loud
As his strong sides can volley.
That is, every man was to join in the burden or chorus of the song, which the poet styles the holding. The breast and sides are called into action in an attempt to sing loud and forcibly.

60 Thy Pacorus, Orodos,
Pays this for Marcus Cæsus.

Pacorus was the son of Orodos, King of Parthia. Cæsus was a Roman general, who was defeated and treacherously murdered by the Parthians. Orodos grieved so much on account of the death of his son Pacorus, that he fell into a languishing illness; when his second son Phraates, anxious for his death, administered poison to him, but not finding it effectual, afterwards strangled him.

61 O thou Arabian bird.
That is, the phoenix. The immortal bird which was supposed to live single, and to rise again from its own ashes.

62 They are his shards, and he their beetle.
The wings of the beetle are called his shards, as they are hard and brittle, like a tile or shard, i.e. a fragment of an earthen vessel; thus, in Macbeth, we have, “the shard-borne beetle.” Enobarbus likens Lepidus to a beetle, which is a dull, heavy insect, and Antony and Cæsar to the wings by which he is maintained in his elevated position.

63 Denied him rivalry.
Rivalry, from the Latin rivalités; an obsolete word meaning emulation, competition. Shakspere here uses it for equal rank or glory in the action.

64 Upon his own appeal.
To appeal, is used by Shakspere in the sense of to accuse; upon his own accusation of Lepidus does Cæsar arrest him; thus being both complainant and judge.

65 And gives his potent regiment.
Regiment, is government, authority; he gives up his power into the hands of an abandoned woman.

66 Away my Theis!
Antony probably addresses Cleopatra by the name of this sea-nymph, because she was about to assist in his naval expedition.

67 His power went out in such distractions.
In such minute detachments, small separate companies.

68 The greater cantle.
A cantle, says Pope, is a piece or lump; on which Dr. Johnson exclaims, “Cantle is rather a corner. Cæsar, in this play, mentions the ‘three-nook’d world.’ Of this triangular world, every triumvir had a corner.”

69 The brize upon her, like a cow in June.
The brize, is the gad-fly; the fly that stings cattle.

60 —— He alone
Dealt on lieutenanty.
Or is probably used in the sense of in. Cæsar fought chiefly by proxy, in the persons of his lieutenants. Thus in a former scene, Ventidius says:—
Cæsar and Antony have ever won
More in their officer, than person.

70 Tell him from his all-obeying breath.
This is an infelicitous expression; all-commanding breath, is what Cleopatra meant: but all-obeying breath is, in Shakspere’s language, breath which all obey Obeying, for obeyed.

71 Like boys unto a musk.
A musk, is a scramble. This word is used by Dryden in his prologue to The Widow Ranter, by Mrs. Behn.
Bumble and cap no sooner are thrown down
But there’s a musk of more than half the town.

72 The next Cesarion smite.
Cesarion was Cleopatra’s son by Julius Cæsar.

73 It signs well.
It is a good sign, a favourable omen.

74 ’Tis strange.
This curious phenomenon, which was received as ominous of the defeat of Antony, is thus related by Plutarch:—"At the dead of night, when universal silence reigned through the city, a silence that was deepened by the awful thought of the ensuing day, on a sudden was heard the sound of musical instruments, and a noise which resembled the exclamations of Bacchanals. This tumultuous procession seemed to pass through the whole city, and to go out at the gate which led to the enemy's camp. Those who reflected on this prodigy, concluded that Bacchus, the god whom Antony affected to imitate, had then forsaken him."

58 And our oppression.
That is, our opposition: the force by which we are oppressed or overpowered.

57 Our rattling tabourines.
A tabourin was a small drum. It is often mentioned in our ancient romances.

56 This grave charm.

Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in:—darkling stand
The varying shore o'the world.

"According to the philosophy," says Mr. Heath, "which prevailed from the age of Aristotle to that of Shakspeare, and long since, the sun was a planet, and was whirled round the earth by the motion of a solid sphere in which it was fixed. If the sun, therefore, was to set fire to the sphere, so as to consume it, the consequence must be, that itself, for want of support, must drop through, and wander in endless space; and in this case, the earth would be involved in endless night."

56 Dear my lord pardon, I dare not,
Least I be taken.
Both metre and sense are here defective; she does not fear to kiss Antony, as he requests, but she is apprehensive that if she descends from her monument she may be made a prisoner. Mr. Malone thinks that the poet wrote—I dare not descend. Mr. Theobald amends the passage differently, and reads—dare not come down.

That is, their standard, the object of their love and admiration.

54 My country's high pyramids my gibbet.
The poet intended we should read pyramides, Latin, instead of pyramids; the verse will otherwise be defective. There are several examples of the use of this word. Thus, in Dr. Faustus, 1604:—

Besides the gates and high pyramides,

Timon of Athens.

WHILE engaged in reading Plutarch, to obtain the facts on which he founded Antony and Cleopatra, Shakspere met with a passage which furnished him with a subject for a separate and very dissimilar tragedy. In Antony’s reverse of fortune, after one of his defeats by Octavius Caesar, he retired to a small house which he had built near Pharos, on a mound he had cast up in the sea, where he affected to live like Timon. "This Timon," says the chatty Greek biographer, "was a citizen of Athens, and lived about the time of the Peloponnesian war, as appears from the comedies of Aristophanes and Plato, in which he is exposed as the hater of mankind. Yet though he hated mankind in general, he caressed the bold and impudent boy Alcibiades, and being asked the reason of this by Apemantus, who expressed some surprise at it, he answered, it was because he foresaw that he would plague the people of Athens. Apemantus was the only one he admitted to his society, and he was his friend in point of principle. At the feast of sacrifices for the dead, these two dined by themselves, and when Apemantus observed that the feast was excellent, Timon answered, ‘It would be so if you were not here.’ Once in an assembly of the people, he mounted the rostrum, and the novelty of the thing occasioned an universal silence and expectation; at length he said, ‘People of Athens, there is a fig-tree in my yard, on which many worthy citizens have hanged themselves; and as I have determined to build upon the spot, I thought it necessary to give this public notice, that such as choose to have recourse to this tree for the aforesaid purpose may repair to it before it is cut down.’"

From this passage Shakspere derived that portion of his tragedy which relates to Timon, though, perhaps, he was also indebted to a manuscript play upon the same subject which "appears to have been written, or transcribed," says Mr. Malone, "about the year 1600. There is a scene in it resembling Shakspere’s banquet given by Timon to his flatterers. Instead of warm water he sets before them stones painted like artichokes, and afterwards beats them out of the room. He then retires to the woods, attended by his faithful steward, who (like Kent in King Lear) has disguised himself to continue his services to his master; Timon in the last act is followed by his sickle mistress, &c., after he was reported to have discovered a hidden treasure by digging. The piece itself (though it appears to be the work of an academic) is a very wretched one.”

The plot of Shakspere’s tragedy is very simple: the principal event is Timon’s loss of faith in humanity, and the consequent change of the generous and unsuspecting noble, who regrets that he has not kingdoms to bestow upon his friends, into the bitter and malignant misanthrope whose fearful denunciations of mankind strike his listeners into “strong shudders.” The play is full of violent contrasts; luxury and abstemiousness, pomp and poverty, prodigality and avarice, love and hate, succeed each other rapidly. It is like a dissolving view which melts from bright day, made lovely with natural beauties, the songs of birds, the fragrance of flowers, the rich and varied foliage, and the spray of the waterfall, gilded by the cheering sunshine; to black midnight in which even the stars are hid. The change is abrupt, startling, and complete, and the gay generous Timon disappears in the bitter savage, who repudiates civilization, and spends the residue of his life in breathing eloquent curses upon his ungrateful countrymen.

Timon’s is a wordy sorrow; he does not shut himself up in sullen impenetrability, but enters into converse with all who seek him, and relieves his feelings by bitter invectives. Like Coriolanus he abandons his native city, but he cannot, like the stern Roman, enfold himself in his own pride and estimation, and despise his countrymen. Coriolanus addressed himself to revenge his supposed wrongs: Timon contents himself with cursing the authors of his real ones. There is, besides, a quaintness and pithiness about the speeches of Timon that seems hardly consistent with a heart-broken and dying man. Like a spleenetic wrangler he is anxious to get the best of the argument; he endeavours to rival Apemantus in abuse, invents an apology for the thieves, and is bitterly pleasant with the poet and the painter. He is full of life and energy all the time he is before us; he disappears suddenly from the scene, and his death is a mystery. He calculates upon it, knows its precise period, and even builds his own tomb; but the immediate cause of it is unknown. Perhaps the poet intends to imply that Timon lays violent hands upon himself, for his death seems to follow too rapidly upon his misfortunes to be the mere effect of grief and passion.

Apemantus is another Diogenes, bitter and cynical by nature, naturally perverse, and loving singularity, but possessed of a keen caustic wit, and uttering many moral and wise aphorisms. He also has been called a misanthrope, though from different motives than Timon, but he rather dislikes and despises men than hates them. He dwells perpetually on what is gross and evil in the world, and his ideas become oblique and one-sided. He is keen in the detection of vice or folly, and on his first entrance we see that he knows the weakness of Timon's character, when he tells him, that "he who loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer." But Apemantus is dull and obtuse in the appreciation of virtue or loftiness of character; not understanding them he disbelieves their existence. His gaze is fixed for ever upon the earth; he cannot look up and see the heavens. He would sooner meet with deformity than beauty, and with vice than virtue, because he can more readily pour out his rancour upon it. Even in his religious moments he can scarcely be civil to the gods, and his prayer resembles a malediction.

Quiet virtue sometimes runs a risk of falling into insipidity and apathy or inaction: thus we find Flavius, the faithful steward, the single truly honest heart in the drama, a rather feeble character; he reserves his expostulations until his master's ruin, and then utters that which, if strongly urged before, might have checked Timon's wild course of reckless extravagance. The honesty of the weak is too often eclipsed by the worldliness of the strong, and energy of character is so admirable that it excuses many minor vices.

Even to the least important characters Shakspere has extended his fullest consideration. The poet and the painter each speaks his own peculiar language; the artist idolises his own work, and the poet describes it in elevated diction. The first speaks the language of every day life, and the latter that of the study; his words remind us of the chamber and the lamp, and like the speeches of the Roman orator Cicero, seemed studied for the occasion. Again the servants of Timon describe their master's ruin with great feeling; one says:—

And his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shun'd poverty,
Walks, like contempt, alone.

This is the language of a nameless character, a second servant; some authors would have given it to the hero of their play, but Shakspere was a very Timon in respect of his lavishness of poetical beauty; exquisite thoughts appear in his pages like the smaller stars, in radiant clusters. Still this liberalty seems to have been involuntary, for words of strength and beauty fall from his pen with the same profusion as diamonds and roses fall from the lips of the little girl in the fairy tale; which we have all read and wondered at when children. But the language of the poet is not a cloying collection of sweets; his power is greater than his beauty. The words of Timon in his adversity are like poisoned arrows, bitter, rancorous, and deadly. His curses are a collection of horrors, aimed without reservation upon all mankind, upon the young and laughing girl just bursting from childhood, and on the "old limping sire," tottering to the grave. He supplicates the demons of lust and murder to confound his native city, and to desolate the world, and implores the earth itself no longer to bring forth ungrateful man, but to "teem with new monsters," and "go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears," as being less corrupt and mischievous.
It is to be regretted, however, that Shakspere should so often have recurrence to offensive and loathsome ideas; Timon’s language is not only bitter and malignant, but frequently revolting; all that is disgusting in the annals of disease is eagerly seized upon by the misanthrope, and pictures are presented which make the vicious shudder and the pure recoil in amazement.

The tragedy includes two incidents, each arising from a similar cause,—the flight of Timon and the banishment of Alcibiades; let us now turn our attention to the latter. Shakspere also found his life in Plutarch, but the poet has not very fully elaborated the character of the Athenian general. Alcibiades was famous for his great personal beauty, his stubborn and ambitious temper, his eloquence, craftiness, and dissipation. His resolution was strongly shown even in his boyhood; for it is related that on one occasion he was playing at dice with some other boys in the street, when a loaded waggon coming up interrupted the game; Alcibiades called to the driver to stop, as it was his turn to throw, but the man disregarded him and drove on; while the other boys got out of the way, Alcibiades however was not to be so readily overcome, for throwing himself flat upon his face directly before the waggon, he told the rustic to drive on if he pleased. Upon this the man was so startled that he instantly stopped his horses, and the resolute boy got up and had his throw with the dice. Brought up in luxury, and universally courted, he gave way to every dissipation, but was still exceedingly attached to the philosopher Socrates.

When still a young man, Alcibiades happened to enter a grammar school, and asked the master for a copy of Homer. The pedagogue replied that he had nothing of Homer’s, and immediately received a box on the ear from the indignant young soldier, for his neglect of the works of the great father of ancient poetry. Another story is told of him which shows an unhealthy love of distinction of any kind. He purchased a dog of remarkable size and beauty, for the extravagant sum of seventy mine.* The chief beauty of this dog was his tail, which Alcibiades immediately caused to be cut off. This singular act furnished conversation for the whole city, and he was much censured for his folly and extravagance. He then laughed and said, “this is the very thing I wanted, for I would have the Athenians talk of this, lest they should find something worse to say of me.” Shakspere might have drawn a striking contrast between the characters of Alcibiades and Timon, but he has neglected the former for the perfect development of the latter. Both leave their native city through the ingratitude of their countrymen, but the resolute and worldly man returns in conquest and in honour, while the effeminate and feeble one perishes in solitude and despair. Plutarch compares Alcibiades with Coriolanus, but their circumstances only were alike, the men were widely different; both returned from banishment with an army at their heels, bent upon the destruction of their native cities; but the haughty and self-denying Roman is in most other matters the reverse of the subtle and luxurious Grecian, of whom Plutarch tells us that, “his great abilities in politics, his eloquence, his reach of genius, and keenness of apprehension, were tarnished by his luxurious living, his drinking and debauches, his effeminacy of dress, and his insolent profusion.”

Shakspere does not adhere to history respecting the cause of the banishment of Alcibiades. He was accused of sacrilege towards the goddesses Ceres and Proserpine, and condemned to death, but he saved himself by taking refuge among the Spartans; to whose hospitality he made a vile return by seducing the wife of their king Agis. After a life spent in dissipation, war, and political intrigue, he was at length assassinated by a secret order of the magistrates of Sparta. He was at that time living in a small village in Phrygia with his mistress Timandra. His murderers surrounded the house at night and set it on fire, and on his issuing out sword in hand they fled to a distance and slew him with their darts and arrows. He was buried by Timandra as honourably as her circumstances would permit.

Timon of Athens is supposed to have been written by Shakspere in the year 1600, and to have immediately followed the composition of Antony and Cleopatra.

SCENE.—ATHENS; and the Woods adjoining.
Act I.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several Doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long; how goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity? what strange,
Which manifold record not matches? see,
Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power
Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; 't other's a jeweller.

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord!

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath'd, as it were,
To an untirable and continue goodness:
He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here.

Mer. O, pray, let's see't: For the lord Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate? But, for that—

Poet. "When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse

Which aptly sings the good."

Mer. 'Tis a good form.

[Looking at the Jewel.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look you.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes
From whence 'tis nourished: The fire i' the flint
Shows not, till it be struck; our gentle flame
Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies
Each bound it chases. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir.—And when comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: How this grace

Squeaks his own standing! what a mental power

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination

Moves in this lip! to the dumberness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.

Here is a touch; Is 't good?

Poet. I'll say of it,

It tutors nature: artificial strife

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord's follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens:—Happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With ampest entertainment: My free drift

Halts not particularly, but moves itself

In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice

Infests one comma in the course I hold;

But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,

Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I'll unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,

(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as Of grave and lustre quality,) tender down

Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,

Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,

Subdues and properties to his love and tendance

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer
To Apenantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Tim. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: The base o'the mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states: amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of lord Timon's frame,
Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her;
Whose present grace to present slaves and servants
Translates his rivals.

Tim. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope. 5
This throne, this fortune, and this hill, methinks,
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bow'd his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on:
All those which were his fellows but of late,
(Some better than his value,) on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

Tim. Ay, marry, what of these?
Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood,
Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants,
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Tim. 'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show,
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of fortune
More pregnant than words. Yet you do well,
To show lord Timon, that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter Timon, attended; the Servant of Ventidius talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?
Ven. Serv. Ay my good lord: five talents is his debt;
His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires
To those who shut him up; which failing to him,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;
I am not of that feather, to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know him
A gentleman, that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free
him.

Tim. Command me to him: I will send his ransome;
And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me:—
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after.—Faro you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour! [Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: What of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lucilius!

Enter Lucilius.

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrive;
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a tenderer.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost,
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pr'ythee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort!

Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon: 6
His honesty rewards him in itself,
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
ACT I.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

SCENE I.

Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world, And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd, If she be mated with an equal husband? Old Ath. Three talents, on the present; in future, all. Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long; To build his fortune, I will strain a little, For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter: What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise, And make him weigh with her. Old Ath. Most noble lord, Pawn me to this your honour, she is his. Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise. Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: Never may That state or fortune fall into my keeping, Which is not ow'd to you!

[Execunt Luc. and old Ath. Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship! Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon: Go not away.—What have you there, my friend? Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech Your lordship to accept. Tim. Painting is welcome. The painting is almost the natural man: For since dishonour traffics with man's nature, He is but outside: These pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work; And you shall find, I like it: wait attendance Till you hear further from me. Pain. The gods preserve you! Tim. Well fare you, gentlemen: Give me your hand; We must needs dine together.—Sir, your jewel Hath suffer'd under praise. Jew. What, my lord? dispraise? Tim. A meer satiety of commendations. If I should pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd, It would unclaw me quite,7 Jew. My lord, 'tis rated As those, which sell, would give: But you well know, Things of like value, differing in the owners, Are prized by their masters: believe 't, dear lord, You mend the jewel by wearing it. Tim. Well mock'd. Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue, Which all men speak with him. Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?
TIMON OF ATHENs.

ACT I.

Apet. Art not a poet?

Pooet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest; look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Pooet. That's not feign'd, he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour; He, that loves to be flattered, is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What would'st do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord?—Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic 's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet 's that?

Serv. 'Tis Aleciabades, and some twenty horse, all of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them: give them guide to us.—[Exeunt some Attend. You must needs dine with me:—Go not you hence, Till I have thank'd you; and, when dinner 's done, Show me this piece.—I am joyful of your sights.—

Enter Alcibiades, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir! [They salute.

Apem. So, so; there!—Aches contract and starve your supple joints!—That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knives, And all this court'sy! The strain of man's bred out Into baboon and monkey.

Aleth. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I fead Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir: Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in. [Exeunt all but Apem.

Enter Two Lords.

1st Lord. What time a day is 't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1st Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The most accursed thou, that still omitt'st it.

2nd Lord. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools.

2nd Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool; to bid me farewell twice.

2nd Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Should'st have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1st Lord. Hang thyself.

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding; make thy requests to thy friend.

2nd Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the ass.

[Exeunt.

1st Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in,

And taste lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes The very heart of kindness.

2nd Lord. Ho pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold,
Is but his steward: no meed, but he repays Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him, But breeds the giver a return exceeding All use of quittance.

1st Lord. The noblest mind he carries, That ever govern'd man.

2nd Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?

1st Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in Timon's House.

Hautboys playing loud Music. A great Banquet served in; Flavius and others attending; then enter Timon, Alcibiades, Lucius, Lucullus, Sempronius, and other Athenian Senators, with Ventidius, and Attendants. Then comes, dropping after all, Apemantus, discontentedly.

Ten. Most honour'd Timon, 't hath pleas'd the gods remember
My father's age, and call him to long peace.
Ho is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents,
Doubled, with thanks; and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O, by no means,
Honest Ventidius: you mistake my love;
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say, he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them; Faults that are rich, are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit.

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on Tim.

Tim. Nay; my lords, ceremony
Was but devis'd at first, to set a gloss
On faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes,
Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.

1st Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.

Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it? hang'd it, have you not ?

Tim. O, Apemantus!—you are welcome.

Apem. No,

You shall not make me welcome:
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fye, thou art a churl: you have got a humour there

Does not become a man, 'tis much to blame—
They say, my lords, that ira furor brevis est,
But yond' man's ever angry.

Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for it, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine own peril, Timon;
I come to observe; I give thee warning on 't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian;
therefore welcome: I myself would have no power:
pr'ythee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for

I should

Ne'er flatter thee.—O you gods! what a number
Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not!
It grieves me, to see so many dip their meat
In one man's blood; and all the madness is,
He cheers them up too.

I wonder, men dare trust themselves with men;
Methinks, they should invite them without knives; 11
Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for 't; the fellow, that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges

The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him: it has been prov'd.
If I

Were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals;
Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes:

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

our own, than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water; methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Ape'm. Thou wepest to make them drink, Timon.

2nd Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes, And, at that instant, like a babo sprung up.

Ape'm. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3rd Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Ape'm. Much! [Tucket sounded.

Tim. What means that trump?—How now?

Enter a Servant.

Serr. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? What are their wills?

Serr. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon;—and to all That of his bounties taste!—The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron: and come freely To gratulate thy plentiful bosom: The ear, Taste, touch, smell, all pleas'd from thy table rise; They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let them have kind admittance:

Music, make their welcome. [Exit Cup.

1st Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you are belov'd.

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with Lutes in their Hands, dancing, and playing.

Ape'm. Hey day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil, and root.
We make ourselves fools, to disjoint ourselves;
And spend our flatteries, to drink those men, Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite, and envy. Who lives, that's not Depraved, or depraves? who dies, that bears
Not one spurn to their graves of their friend's gift?

I should fear, those, that dance before me now,
Would one day stamp upon me; It has been done;
Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from Table, with much adoring of Timon; and, to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, Men with Women, a lofty Strain or two to the Hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace,
Fair ladies,
Set a fair fashion on our entertainment;
Which 'was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto 't, and lively lustre,
And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for it.

1st Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Ape'm. 'Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet
Attends you: Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord.

[Exeunt Cup. and Lad.

Tim. Flavius,—

Flav. My lord.

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord. —More jewels yet!

There is no crossing him in his humour; [Aside.

Else I should tell him.—Well,—'t faith, I should,
When all 's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.
'Tis pity, bounty had not eyes behind;
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.

[Exit, and returns with the Casket.

1st Lord. Where be our men?

Serr. Here, my lord, in readiness.

2nd Lord. Our horses.

Tim. O my friends, I have one word
To say to you:—Look you, my good lord, I must Entreat you, honour me so much, as to Advance this jewel;
Accept, and wear it, kind my lord.

1st Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,—

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serr. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate
Newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flow. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near? why then another time I'll hear thee:
I pr'ythee, let us be provided
To show them entertainment.

Flav. I scarce know how. [Aside.

Enter another Servant.

2nd Serv. May it please your honour, the lord Lucius,
Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.
Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents

Enter a third Servant.

Be worthily entertain'd.—How now, what news?
3rd Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.
Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,
Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffer.—
Nor will he know his purse; or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good:
His promises fly so beyond his state,
That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes
For every word; he is so kind, that he now
Pays interest for 't; his land's put to their books.
Well, 'would I were gently put out of office,
Before I were forc'd out! Happiness is he that has no friend to feed,
Than such as do even enemies exceed.
I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit. Tim.

Tim. You do yourselves
Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:—
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.
2nd Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.
3rd Lord. O, he is the very soul of bounty!
Tim. And now I remember me, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser
I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.
2nd Lord. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know no man
Can justly praise, but what he does affect:
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;
I'll tell you true. I'll call on you.
All Lords. None so welcome.
Tim. I take all and your several visitsations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;
Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends
And ne'er be weary.—Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich,
It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living
Is 'monget the dead; and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, defiled land, my lord.
1st Lord. We are so virtuously bound,—
Tim. And so
Am I to you.
2nd Lord. So infinitely endear'd,—
Tim. All to you.—Lights, more lights.
1st Lord. The best of happiness,
Honour and fortunes, keep with you, lord Timon! [Exit
Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt Alc., Lords, &c. Apm.

Apm. What a coil's here!
Serving of becks, and jutting out of bums!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of drags:
Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,
I'd be good to thee.

Apm. No, I'll nothing: for
If I should be brib'd too, there would be none left
To rail upon thee; and then thou would'st sin the faster.

Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me thou
Wilt give away thyself in paper shortly:—
What need these feasts, pompes, and vain glories?

Tim. Nay,
An you begin to rail on society once,
I am sworn, not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.

Apm. Thou'lt not hear me now,—thou shalt not then, I'll lock Thy heaven from thee. O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. A room in a Senator's House.

Enter a Senator, with Papers in his Hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand to Varro; and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum, Which makes it five and twenty.—Still in motion Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not.
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog, And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold: If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon, Ask nothing, give it him, it fails me, straight, And able horses: No porter at his gate; But rather one that smiles, and still invites All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho! Caphis, I say!

Enter Caphis.

Caph. Here, sir; What is your pleasure? Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste to lord Timon;
Impórtune him for my monies; be not ceas'd With slight denial; nor then silence, when— "Commend me to your master"—and the cap Plays in the right hand, thus:—but tell him, sirrah, My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn Out of mine own; his days and times are past, And my reliances on his fracted dates Have smit my credit: I love, and honour him; But must not break my back, to heal his finger: Immediate are my needs; and my relief Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words, But find supply immediate. Get you gone: Put on a most importunate aspect, A visage of demand; for, I do fear, When every feather sticks in his own wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which flashes now a phénix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. I go, sir?—take the bonds along with you, And have the dates in compt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Hall in Timon's House.

Enter Flavius, with many Bills in his Hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense, That he will neither know how to maintain it, Nor cease his flow of riot: Takes no account How things go from him; nor resumes no care Of what is to continue; Never mind Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel: I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting. Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter Caphis, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good even, Varro:— What, You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is 't not your business too?

Caph. It is;— And yours, too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. 'Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter Timon, Alcibiades, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again, My Alcibiades.— With me? What's your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new days this month: My master is awak'd by great occasion, To call upon his own; and humbly prays you, That with your other noble parts you'll suit, In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend, I pr'ythee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore; He humbly prays your speedy payment,—

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks,

And past,—

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath:
ACT II.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

SCENE II.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

[Exit Alcibi. and Lords.

I 'li wait upon you instantly.—Come hitter, pray you,

[To Flav. How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd
With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,
And the detention of long-since due debts,
Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreable to this business:
Your importunity cease, till after dinner;
That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends:
See them well entertain'd.

[Exit Tim. Flav. I pray, draw near.

[Exit Flav. Enter Apeimantus and a Fool.39

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apeimantus; let's have some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apeim. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apeim. No; 'tis to thyself,—Come away.

[To the Fool.

Isid. Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apeim. No, thou stand'st single, thou art not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now.

Apeim. He last asked the question.—Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apeimantus?

Apeim. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apeim. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves.—Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Grumery, good fool: How does your mistress?

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. 'Would, we could see you at Corinth.

Apeim. Good! grumercy.

[Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain?
what do you in this wise company?—How dost thou, Apeimantus?

Apeim. 'Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr'ythee, Apeimantus, read me the super-scription of these letters; I know not which is which.

Apeim. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apeim. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to lord Timon; this to Aleibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog; and thou shalt famish, a dog's death. Answer not, I am gone.

[Exit Page.

Apeim. Even so thou out-run'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apeim. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; would they served us!

Apeim. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: My mistress is one, and I am her fool.
When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly:
The reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apeim. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster, and a knave; which notwithstanding, shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime, it appears like a lord; sometime, like a lawyer; sometime, like a philosopher, with two stones more than his artificial one:20 He is very often like a knight; and generally in all shapes, that man goes up and down in, from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as such foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apeim. That answer might have become Apeimantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes lord Timon.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Apeim. Come, with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime, the philosopher.

[Exit Apeim. and Fool.
Flav. 'Pray you, walk near; I'll speak with you anon.
Tim. You make me marvel: Wherefore, ere this time,
Had you not fully laid my state before me;
That I might so have rated my expense,
As I had leave of means?
Flav. You would not hear me,
At many leisure I propos'd.
Tim. Go to:
Perchance, some single vantages you took,
When my indisposition put you back;
And that unaptness made your minister,
Thus to excuse yourself.
Flav. O my good lord!
At many times I brought in my accounts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off,
And say, you found them in mine honesty.
When, for some trifling present, you have bid me
Return so much, I have shook my head, and wept;
Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you
To hold your hand more close: I did endure
Not seldom, nor no slight checks; when I have Prompted you, in the ebb of your estate,
And your great flow of debts. My dear-lov'd lord,
Though you hear now, (too late!) yet now's a time,
The greatest of your having lacks a half
To pay your present debts.
Tim. Let all my hand be sold.
Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone;
And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues: the future comes space;
What shall defend the interim? and at length
How goes our reckoning?
Tim. To Lacedaemon did my land extend.
Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a word;
Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone?
Tim. You tell me true.
Flav. If you suspect my husbandry, or falsehood,
Call me before the exactest auditors,
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our offices have been oppress'd
With riotous feeders; when our vaults have wept
With drunken spilth of wine; when every room
 Hath blazed with lights, and bray'd with minstrelsey;
I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock,
And set mine eyes at flow.
Tim. Pr'ythee, no more.
Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!
How many prodigal bits have slaves, and peasants,
This night englutted! Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is lord Timon's?
Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon?
Ah! when the means are gone, that buy this praise,
The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers,
These flies are couch'd.
Tim. Come, sermon me no further:
No villainous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.
Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,
To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart;
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use,
As I can bid thee speak.
Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!
Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,
That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends: You shall perceive, how you
Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there, ho!—Flaminus! Servilius!

Enter Flaminius, Servilius, and other Servants.
Serv. My lord, my lord,— Tim. I will despatch you severally.—You, to lord Lucius,—
To lord Lucullus you; I hunted with his Honour to-day;—You, to Sempronius;
Commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say
That my occasions have found time to use them
Toward a supply of money: let the request
Be fifty talents.
Flam. As you have said, my lord.
Flav. Lord Lucius, and lord Lucullus? Humph!

Tim. Go you, sir, [To another Serv.] to the senators;
(Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserr'd this hearing;) bid 'em send o'the instant
A thousand talents to me.
Flav. I have been bold,
(For that I knew it the most general way,)
To them to use your signet, and your name;
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.
Tim. Is't true? can it be?
Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot
ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in Lucullus’s House.

Flaminius waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you, he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Serv. Here’s my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of lord Timon’s men? A gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver bason and ever to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius; you are very respectively welcome, sir.—Fill me some wine.—[Exit Serv.] And how does that honourable complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir: And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. ‘Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord’s behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him; nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says he?

Go to Ventidius,—[To a Serv.] Pr’ythee, [To Flav.] be not sad, Thou art true, and honest; ingeniously I speak,²³ No blame belongs to thee:—[To Serv.] Ventidius lately Buried his father; by whose death, he’s stepp’d Into a great estate: when he was poor, Imprison’d, and in secrecy of friends, I clear’d him with five talents: Greet him from me; Bid him suppose, some good necessity Touches his friend, which craves to be remember’d With those five talents:—that had,—[To Flav.] give it these fellows To whom ‘tis instant due. Ne’er speak, or think, That Timon’s fortunes ’mong his friends can siuks.

Flav. I would, I could not think it: That thought is bounty’s foe; Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,—
But yet they could have wish’d—they know not—but Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—’tis pity—
And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,
With certain half-cups,²² and cold-moving nodes,
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!—
I pr’ythee, man, look cheerly; These old fellows Have their ingratitude in them hereditary: Their blood is cak’d, ’tis cold, it seldom flows: ’Tis lack of kindly warmth, they are not kind; And nature, as it grows again toward earth, Is fashion’d for the journey, dull, and heavy.—

alas, good lord! a noble gentleman ’tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I have dined with him, and told him on ’t; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less: and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his; I have told him on ’t, but I could never get him from it.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here’s to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit,—give thee thy due,—and one that knows what belongs to reason: and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee.—Get you gone, sirrah.—[To the Serv., who goes out.]—Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord’s a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money; especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here’s three solidares for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say, thou saw’st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is ’t possible, the world should so much differ;
And we alive that liv’d? Fly, damned baseness, To him that worshipst thee. [Throwing themoneyaway.

Luc. Ha! now I see, thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit Lucul.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scold thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, It turns in less than two nights? O you gods, I feel my master’s passion! This slave Unto his honour, has my lord’s meat in him; Why should it thrive, and turn to nutriment, When he is turn’d to poison?

O, may diseases only work upon ’t! And, when he is sick to death, let not that part of nature Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter Lucius, with Three Strangers.

Luc. Who, thou lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

1st Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours; now lord Timon’s happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. I-ie no, do not believe it; he cannot want money.

2nd Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for’t, and showed what necessity belonged to’t, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

2nd Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that? now, before the gods, I am ashamed on ’t. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour showed in’t. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like truffles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should never have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder’s my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honoured lord.—
[To Lucius.

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well:—Commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he’s ever sending: How shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting thy lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me; He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous, I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, ’tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable? how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour?— Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do’t; the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope, his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind:—And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest affections, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I will look you out a good turn, Servilius.—

[Exit Ser.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk, indeed; And he, that’s once denied, will hardly speed.

[Exit Luc.

1st Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2nd Stran. Ay, too well.

1st Stran. Why this Is the world’s soul; and just of the same piece Is every flatterer’s spirit. Who can call him His friend, that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord’s father, And kept his credit with his purse; Supported his estate; nay, Timon’s money Has paid his men their wages: He ne’er drinks,
ACT III.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

SCENE III.—IV.

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, (O, see the monstrosity of man
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!) He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.
3rd Stran. Religion groans at it.
1st Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,27
So much I love his heart: But, I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense:
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in Sempronius's House.

Enter SEMPRONIUS, and a Servant of Timon's.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't? Humph!
'Bove all others?
He might have tried lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: All these three Owe their estates unto him.
Serv. O my lord,
They have all been touch'd, and found base metal;
for
They have all denied him?
Sem. How! have they denied him?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?
And does he send to me? Three? Humph!—
It shows but little love or judgment in him.
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physici-sians,
Thrice give him over; Must I take the cure upon
me?
He has much disgrac'd me in't; I am angry at him,
That might have known my place: I see no sense
for't,
But his occasions might have woo'd me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e'er receiv'd gift from him: And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll require it last? No: So it may prove
An argument of laughter to the rest,
And I amongst the lords be thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;

I had such a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who bates mine honour, shall not know my coin.

Serv. Excellent! your lordship's a goodly villain.
The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politic; he crossed himself by't; and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear fool? takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire.
Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled,
Save the gods only: Now his friends are dead,
Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards
Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their master.
And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth, must keep his house.28

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Hall in Timon's House.

Enter Two Servants of Varro, and the Servant of Lucius, meeting Titus, Hortensius, and other Servants to Timon's Creditors, waiting his coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensius.
Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.
Hor. Lucius?
What, do we meet together?
Luc. Serv. Ay, and, I think,
One business does command us all; for mine
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS;

Luc. Serv. And sir

Philotus too!
Phi. Good day at one.
Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.
What do you think the hour?
Phi. Labouring for nine.
Luc. Serv. So much?
Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?
Luc. Serv. Not yet.
Phi. I wonder on't; he was wont to shine at seven.

432
Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him: You must consider, that a prodigal course Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable. I fear, 'Tis deepest winter in lord Timon's purse; That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that. Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange event. Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does. Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift, For which I wait for money. Hor. It is against my heart. Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, Timon in this should pay more than he owes: And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels, And send for money for 'em.

Hor. I am weary of this charge, the gods can witness:
I know, my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth, And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth. 1st Var. Serv. Yes, mine 's three thousand crowns: What's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine. 1st Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sum,
Your master's confidence was above mine; Else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of lord Timon's men. Luc. Serv. Flaminius! sir, a word: 'Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not. Tit. We attend his lordship; 'pray, signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows, you are too diligent. [Exit Flam.

Enter Flavius in a Cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him. Tit. Do you hear, sir?

1st Var. Serv. By your leave, sir,—

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. Ay, If money were as certain as your waiting, 'Twere sure enough. Why then prevent'd you not Your sums and bills, when your false masters eat

Of my lord's meat? Then they could smile, and fawn Upon his debts, and take down th' interest Into their glutinous maws. You do yourselves but wrong, To stir me up; let me pass quietly: Believe 't, my lord and I have made an end; I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve. Flav. If 'twill not, 'Tis not so base as you; for you serve knaves. [Exit.

1st Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter? 2nd Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings

Enter Servilius.

Tit. O, hero's Servilius; now we shall know Some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, To repair some other hour, I should much Derive from it; for, take it on my soul, My lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortably temper has forsook him; He is much out of health, and keeps his chamber. Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick: And, if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods.

Ser. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord! my lord!—

Enter Timon, in a rage; Flaminius following.

Tim. What, are my doors oppos'd against my passage? Have I ever been free, and must my house Be my retentive enemy, my gaol? The place, which I have feasted, does it now, Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em; cleave me to the girdle.

433
Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—
Tim. Cut my heart in suins.
Tit. Mine, fifty talents.
Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.
Tim. Five thousand drops pays that:—
What yours?—and yours ?
1st Var. Serv. My lord,—
2nd Var. Serv. My lord,—
Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.
Hor. 'Twere, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em.
[Exeunt.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Tim. They have o'en put my breath from me, the slaves:
Creditors!—devils.
Flav. My dear lord,—
Tim. What if it should be so?
Flav. My lord,—
Tim. I'll have it so:—My steward!
Flav. Here, my lord.
Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:
I'll once more feast the rascals.
Flav. O my lord,
You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left, to furnish out
A moderate table.
Tim. Be't not in thy care: go,
I charge thee; invite them all; let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Senate-House.

The Senate sitting. Enter Alcibiades attended.

1st Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's
Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die:
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.
2nd Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.
Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!
1st Sen. Now, captain?
Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time, and fortune, to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,

Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth.
To those that, without heed, do plunge into it.
He is a man, setting his fate aside,\(^9\)
Of comely virtues:
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice;
(An honour in him, which buys out his fault,)
But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe:
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1st Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such pains, as if they labour'd
To bring manslaughter into form, set quarrelling
Upon the head of valour; which, indeed,
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born;
He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe; and make his wrongs
His outsides; wear them like his raiment, carlessly;
And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill?
Alcib. My lord,—
1st Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.
Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me,
If I speak like a captain.—
Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threat'nings? sleep upon it,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy? but if there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? why, then, women are more valiant,
That stay at home, if bearing carry it;
And th' ass more captain than the lion; the felon,
Loaden with irons, wiser than the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;
But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just,\(^9\)
To be in anger, is impiety;
But who is man, that is not angry?
Weigh but the crime with this.
2nd Sen. You breathe in vain.
Alcib. In vain? his service done
At Lacedemon, and Byzantium,
Were a sufficient briber for his life.

1st Sen. What's that?

Aleib. Why, I say, my lords, 'a's done fair

service,

And slain in fight many of your enemies:

How full of valour did he bear himself

In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds?

2nd Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em, he

Is a sworn rforcer: 'h' as a sin that often

Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner:

If there were no foes, that were enough alone

To overcome him: in that beastly fury

He has been known to commit outrages,

And cherish factions: 'Tis infer'd to us,

His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1st Sen. He dies.

Aleib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him,

(Though his right arm might purchase his own time,

And be in debt to none,) yet, more to move you,

Tako my deserts to his, and join them both:

And, for I know, your reverend ages love

Security, I'll pawn my victories, all

My honour to you, upon his good returns.

If by this crime he owes the law his life,

Why, let the war receiv'd in valiant gore;

For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1st Sen. We are for law, he dies; urge it no more,

On height of our displeasure: Friend, or brother,

He forfeits his own blood, that spills another.

Aleib. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords,

I do beseech you, know me.

2nd Sen. How?

Aleib. Call me to your remembrances.

3rd Sen. What?

Aleib. I cannot think, but your age has forgot

me;

It could not else be, I should prove so base,

To sue, and be denied such common grace:

My wounds ache at you.

1st Sen. Do you daro our anger?

'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;

We banish thee for ever.

Aleib. Banish me?

Banish your dotage; banish usury,

That makes the senate ugly.

1st Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain

thee,

Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell

our spirit,

He shall be executed presently. [Exit Senators.

Aleib. Now the gods keep you old enough; that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you!

I am worse than mad: I have kept back their fees,

While they have told their money, and let out

Their coin upon large interest; I myself,

Rich only in large hurts;—All those, for this?

Is this the balsam, that the usuring senate

Pours into captivus' wounds? ha! banishment?

It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;

It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,

That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up

My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.

'Tis honour, with most lands to be at odds;

Soldiers should brook as little wrongs, as gods.

[Exit.

SCENE VI.—A magnificent Room in Timon's House.

Music. Tables set out: Servants attending. Enter diverse Lords, at several Doors.

1st Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

2nd Lord. I also wish it to you. I think, this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

1st Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring, when we encountered: I hope, it is not so low with him, as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

2nd Lord. It should not but by the persuasion of his new feasting.

1st Lord. I should think so: He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2nd Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1st Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2nd Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

1st Lord. A thousand pieces.

2nd Lord. A thousand pieces!

1st Lord. What of you?

3rd Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter Timon, and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both:—And how fare you?

1st Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.
2nd Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing, than we your lordship.

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men.—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile; if they will fire so harshly on the trumpet's sound: we shall to't presently.

1st Lord. I hope, it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

2nd Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah, my good friend! what cheer?

The Banquet brought in.

2nd Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on 't, sir.

2nd Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance.—Come, bring in all together.

2nd Lord. All covered dishes!

1st Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

3rd Lord. Doubt not that, if money, and the season can yield it.

3rd Lord. Alcibiades is banished: Hear you of it?

1st and 2nd Lord. Alcibiades banished!

3rd Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1st Lord. How? how?

2nd Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3rd Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

2nd Lord. This is the old man still.

3rd Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?

2nd Lord. It does: but time will—and so—

3rd Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: Sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your duties be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another: for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are.—The rest of your fees, O gods,—the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends,—as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing they are welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The Dishes uncovered are full of warm Water. Some speak. What does his lordship mean? Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold, You knot of mouth-friends! smoke, and lukewarm water Is your perfection. This is Timon's last; Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries, Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing water in their Faces. Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long, Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites, Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears, You fools of fortune, trencher friends, time's flies, Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks! Of man, and beast, the infinite malady Crust you quite o'er!—What, dost thou go? Soft, take thy physic first—thou too—and thou;—

[Threws the Dishes at them, and drives them out.

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.— What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest. Burn, house; sink, Athens! henceforth hated be Of Timon, man, and all humanity!

Re-enter the Lords, with other Lords and Senators.

1st Lord. How now, my lords?

2nd Lord. Know you the quality of lord Timon's fury?

3rd Lord. Fish! did you see my cap?

4th Lord. I have lost my gown.

3rd Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has cut it out of my hat:—Did you see my jewel?

4th Lord. Did you see my cap?

2nd Lord. Here 'tis.

4th Lord. Here lies my gown.

1st Lord. Let's make no stay.

2nd Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

3rd Lord. I feel 't upon my bones.

4th Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones.

[Exeunt.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the walls of Athens.

    Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall, That girdlest in those wolves! Dive in the earth, And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent; Obediences fail in children! slaves, and fools, Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench, And minister in their steads! to general filths Convert o’ the instant, green virginity! Do’t in your parents’ eyes! bankrupts, hold fast; Rather than render back, out with your knives, And cut your trusters’ throats! bound servants, steal! Large-handed robbers your grave masters are, And pill by law! maid, to thy master’s bed; Thy mistress is o’ the brothel! son of sixteen, Pluck the lin’d crutch from the old limping sire, With it beat out his brains! piety, and fear, Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth, Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood, Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades, Degrees, observances, customs, and laws, Decline to your confounding contraries, And yet confusion live! — Plagues, incident to men, Your potent and infectious fevers heap On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold sciacins, Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt As lamely as their manners! lust and liberty Creep in the minds and narrowings of our youth; That ’gainst the stream of virtue they may strive, And drown themselves in riot! itches, blains, Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop Be general leprosy! breath infect breath; That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison! Nothing I’ll bear from thee, But nakedness, thou detestable town! Take thou that too, with multiplying banns! Timon will to the woods; where he shall find The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind. The gods confound (hear me, you good gods all), The Athenians both within and out that wall! And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow To the whole race of mankind, high and low! Amen. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in Timon’s House.

    Enter Flavius, with Two or Three Servants.

1st Serv. Hear you, master steward, where’s our master? Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining? Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you? Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, I am as poor as you.

1st Serv. Such a house broke! So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not One friend, to take his fortune by the arm, And go along with him!

2nd Serv. As we do turn our backs From our companion, thrown into his grave; So his familiars to his buried fortunes Slink all away; leave their false vows with him, Like empty purses pick’d: and his poor self, A dedicated beggar to the air, With his disease of all-shunn’d poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

    Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin’d house. 3rd Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon’s livery, That see I by our faces; we are fellows still, Serving alike in sorrow: Leak’d is our bark; And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, Hearing the surges threat: we must all part Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all, The latest of my wealth I’ll share amongst you. Wherever we shall meet, for Timon’s sake, Let’s yet be fellows; let’s shake our heads, and say, As ‘twere a knell unto our master’s fortunes, “We have seen better days.” Let each take some: [Giving them money. Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more: Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor. [Execut Serv. O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us! Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt, Since riches point to misery and contempt? Who’d be so mock’d with glory? or to live But in a dream of friendship? To have his pomp, and all what state compounds, But only painted, like his varnish’d friends? Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart;
Undone by goodness! Strange, unusual blood,
When man's worst sin is, he does too much good!
Who then dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.
My dearest lord,—bless'd, to be most accurs'd,
Rich, only to be wretched; thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord!
He's flung in rage from this ungrateful seat
Of monstrous friends: nor has he with him to Supply his life, or that which can command it.
I'll follow, and inquire him out:
I'll serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Woods.

Enter Timon.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
Inflict the air! Twin'd brothers of one womb,—
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarce is dividant,—touch them with several fortunés;
The greater scorns the lesser: Not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,
But by contempt of nature,
Raise me this beggar, and deme that lord;
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
The beggar native honour.
It is the pasture lards the brother's sides,
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,
In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, "This man's a flatterer?" if one be
So are they all; for every grize of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: All is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
But direct villainy. Therefore, be abhor'd
All feasts, societies, and thronges of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
Destruction fang mankind! — Earth, yield me roots!

[Digging.

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate
With thy most operant poison! What is here?
Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods,
I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!
Thus much of this, will make black, white; foul, fair;
Wrong, right; base, noble; old, young; coward, valiant.
Ha, you gods! why this? What this, you gods?
Why this
Will lug your priests and servants from your sides;

Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads:
This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs'd;
Make the hear leprosy ador'd; place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation,
With senators on the bench: this is it,
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again;
She, whom the spital-house, and ulcerous sores
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices
To the April day again. Come, damned earth,
Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds
Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature.—[March after off.]—Hal a drum?—Thou'rt quick,
But yet I'll bury thee: Thou'lt go, strong thief,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:
Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some gold.

Enter Alcibiades, with Drum and Fife, in warlike manner; Phrynia and Timandra.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart,
For showing me again the eyes of man!
Alecib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,
That art thyself a man?
Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind.
For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.
Alecib. I know thee well;
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.
Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee,
I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules;
Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;
Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine
Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
For all her cherubin look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off
Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns
To thine own lips again.

Alecib. How came the noble Timon to this change?
Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:
But then renew I could not, like the moon;
There were no suns to borrow of.

Alecib. What friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion.
ACT IV.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

Scene III.

Timon.

What is it, Timon?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: If Thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for Thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, For thou’rt a man!

Aleib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw’st them, when I had prosperity.

Aleib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Timan. Is this the Athenian minion, whom the world

Voic’d so regardfully?

Tim. Art thou Timandra?

Timan. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still; they love thee not, that use thee.

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours: season the slaves

For tubs, and baths; bring down rose-checked youth

To the tub-fast, and the diet.

Timan. Hang thee, monster!

Aleib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra; for his wits

Are drown’d and lost in his calamities:—

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,

The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band: I have heard, and griev’d,

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,

Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,—

Tim. I pr’ythee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.

Aleib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Aleib. Why, fare thee well:

Here’s some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep’t, I cannot eat it.

Aleib. When I have hied proud Athens on a heap,—

Tim. Warr’st thou ‘gainst Athens?

Aleib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all i’ thy conquest;

and

Thee after, when thou hast conquer’d!

Aleib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That,

By killing villains, thou wast born to conquer

My country.

Put up thy gold: Go on,—here’s gold,—go on;

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove

Will o’er some high-vic’d city hang his poison

In the sick air: Let not thy sword skip one;

Pity not honour’d age for his white beard,

He’s an usurer: Strike me the counterfeit matron;

It is her habit only that is honest,

Herself’s a bawd: Let not the virgin’s cheek

Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk-paps,

That through the window-bars bore at men’s eyes,

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,

Set them down horrible traitors: Spare not the babe,

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy;

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle

Hath doubtfully pronounc’d thy throat shall cut,

And mince in sues remorse: Swear against objects;

Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes;

Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maidens, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,

Shall pierce a jot. There’s gold to pay thy soldiers:

Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent,

Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone.

Aleib. Hast thou gold yet? I’ll take the gold thou giv’st me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven’s curse upon thee!

Phr. and Timan. Give us some gold, good Timon:

Hast thou more?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,

And to make whores, a bawd. Hold up, you sluts,

Your aprons mountant; You are not oathable,—

Although, I know, you’ll swear, terribly swear,

Into strong shudders, and to heavenly ayes,

The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths,

I’ll trust to your conditions: Be whores still;

And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,

Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;

Let your close fire predominate his smoke,

And be no turncoats: Yet may your pains, six months,

Bo quite contrary: And thatch your poor thin roofs

With burdens of the dead;—some that were hang’d,

No matter:—wear them, betray with them: whore still;

Paint till a horse may mire upon your face:

A pox of wrinkles!

Phr. and Timan. Well, more gold;—What then?—

Believ’t, that we’ll do anything for gold.
ACT IV.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

SCENE III.

Timon. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,
That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quillets shrilly: hoar the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of flesh;
And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to foresee,
Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate ruffians bald;
And let the unsca'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: Plague all;
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection.—There's more gold:—
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!

Phr. and Timon. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whored, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.

Alcibiades. Strike up the drum towards Athens.
Farewell, Timon;

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.

Alcibiades. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'est well of me.

Alcibiades. Call'st thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it such. Got thee away,
And take thy beggars with thee.

Alcibiades. We but offend him.—

Strike.

[Drum beats. Exeunt Alcibiades, Phr., and Timon.]

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry!—Common mother, thou,

[Digging.]

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,
Toens, and feeds all; whose self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,
Engenders the black toad, and adder blue,
The gilded newt, and eyeless venom'd worm,
With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven?
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine:
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root:
Ensue thy fertile and conception womb,
Let it no more bring out ingratitude man!
Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented!—O, a root.—Dear thanks!
Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas;

Whereof ingratitude man, with liquorish draughts,
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips!

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: Men report,
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate: Consumption catch thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected;
A poor unmann'd melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft?
Hug their dises'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper,
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: binge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent: Thou wast told thus;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters, that bid welcome,
To knaves, and all approachers: 'Tis most just,
That thou turn rascal; had'st thou wealth again,
Rascals should have 't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself;
A madman so long, now a fool: What think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moss'd trees,
That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o'ert-night's surfeit? call the creatures—
Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wreakful heaven: whose bare unhoused trunks,
To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer more nature,—bid them flatter thee;
O! thou shalt find——

Tim. A fool of thee: Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.
Apen. I flatter not; but say, thou art a caitiff.
Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?
Apen. To vex thee.
Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in't?
Apen. Ay.
Tim. What! a knave too? 19
Apen. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforeedly; thou'dst courtier be again,
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: Best state, contentless,
 Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.
Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd: but bred a dog.
Hadst thou, like us, from our first swarth, proceded
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drugs of it
Freely command, thou would'st have harrow'd thyself
In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself
Who had the world as my confectionary;
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment;
That nummberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows;—I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden;
Thy nature did commence in sufferance; time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why should'st thou hate men?
They never flatter'd thee: What hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse,—thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff
To some she beggar, and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!—
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave; and flatterer.
Apen. Art thou proud yet?
Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.
Apen. No prodigal.
Tim. I, that I am one now;
Wero all the wealth I have, shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.—
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a Root.
Apen. Here; I will mend thy feast.
[Offering him something.
Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.
Apen. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.
Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.
Apen. What would'st thou have to Athens?
Tim. Thee, and thee in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.
Apen. Hero is no use for gold.
Tim. The best, and truest;
For hero it sleeps, and does no hired harm.
Apen. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon?
Tim. Under that's above me.
Where feedest thou o' days, Apemantus?
Apen. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it.
Tim. 'Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!
Apen. Where would'st thou send it?
Tim. To sauce thy dishes.
Apen. The middle of humanity thou never knowest, but the extremity of both ends: When thou wast in thy gill, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; 10 in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it.
Apen. Dost hate a medlar?
Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.
Apen. An thou hadst hated medlars sooner, thou should'st have lov'd thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?
Tim. Who, without these means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?
Apen. Myself.
Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.
Apen. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?
Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What would'st thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?
Apen. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.
Tim. Would'st thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

_Apem._ Ay, Timon.

_Tim._ A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee; if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee; if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee; and still thou livest but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life: all thy safety were remotion; and thy defence, absence. What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation?

_Apem._ If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here: The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

_Tim._ How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

_Apem._ Yonder comes a poet, and a painter: The plaque of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way: When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

_Tim._ When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog, than Apmantus.

_Apem._ Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

_Tim._ 'Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon.

_Apem._ A plague on thee, thou art too bad to curse.

_Tim._ All villains, that do stand by thee, are pure.

_Apem._ There is no leprosy but what thou speakest.

_Tim._ If I name thee,—

_I'll beat thee,—but I should infect my hands.

_Apem._ I would, my tongue could rot them off!

_Apem._ Away, thou issue of a mangy dog!

Choler does kill me, that thou art alive; I swoon to see thee.

_Apem._ 'Would thou would'st burst!

_Apem._ Away,

Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry, I shall lose

_Apem._ A stone by thee. [Throws a stone at him."

---

_Apem._ Beast!

_Tim._ Slave!

_Apem._ Toad!

_Tim._ Rogue, rogue, rogue! [Apem. retreats backward, as going.

_Apem._ I am sick of this false world; and will love nought
But even the mere necessities upon it.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave;
Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat
Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph,
That death in me at others' lives may laugh.
O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

[Looking on the Gold.

'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler
Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!
Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate woer,
Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow
That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,
And solder'st close impossibilities,
And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue,
To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts!
Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire!

_Apem._ 'Would 'twere so;—

But not till I am dead!—I'll say, thou hast gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

_Apem._ Throug'd to?

_Tim._ Ay.

_Apem._ Thy back, I pr'ythee.

_Apem._ Live, and love thy misery!

_Tim._ Long live so, and so die!—I am quit.—

[Exit Apem.

Moro things like men?—Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter Thieves.

1st Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder: The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2nd Thief. It is noiseless, he hath a mass of treasure.

3rd Thief. Let us make the assay upon him; if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; If he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

2nd Thief. True; for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid.

1st Thief. Is not this he?

Thieves. Where?

2nd Thief. 'Tis his description.

3rd Thief. He; I know him.
Thieves. Save thee, Timon.
Tim. No, thieves?
Thieves. Soldiers, not thieves.
Tim. Both too; and women's sons.
Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.
Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat. Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots; Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips:
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush
Lays her full mess before you. Want? why want?
1st Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries,
As beasts, and birds, and fishes.
Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds and fishes;
You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con,
That you are thieves professed; that you work not
In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves, Here's gold: Go, suck the subtle blood of the grape,
Till the high fever seeth your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;
Do villainy, do, since you profess to do't,
Like workmen. I'll example you with thievish:
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robb's the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrescence: each thing's a thief;
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power
Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves; away;
Rob one another. There's more gold: Cut throats;
All that you meet are thieves: To Athens, go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal,
But thieves do lose it: Steal not less, for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!
Amen. [TimoN returns to his Cave.
3rd Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.
1st Thief. 'Tis in the palate of mankind, that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.
2nd Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1st Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens:
There is no time so miserable, but a man may be true. [Exit Thieves.

Enter Flavius.

Flav. O you gods!
Is you desip'sd and ruinous man my lord?
Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour has Desperate want made!
What viler thing upon the earth, than friends,
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!
Now rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd to love his enemies:
Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me, than those that do
He has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,
Still serve him with my life.—My dearest master!

TIMON comes forward from his Cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou.
Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?
Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;
Then, if thou grant'st thou're man, I have forgot
thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not: I ne'er had honest man
About me, I; all that I kept were knaves,
To serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,
'Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep?—Come nearer:— than I love thee,
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust, and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief, and, whilst this poor wealth lasts,
To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward so true, so just, and now
So comfortable? It almost turns
My dangerous nature wild: Let me behold
Thy face. Surely, this man was born of woman.—
Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
Perpetual sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one;
ACT V.

No more, I pray,—and he is a steward.—
How fain would I have hated all mankind,
And thou redeem'st thyself: But all, save thee,
I fell with curses.

Methinks, thou art more honest now, than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou might'st have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters,
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,) Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usuring kindness; and as rich men deal gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. Now, my most worthy master, in whose breast
Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast:
Suspect still comes where an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living: and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,

For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, That you had power and wealth
To requite me, by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so!—Thou singly honest man,
Here, take:—the gods out of my misery
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy:
But thus condition'd; Thou shalt build from men;
Hate all, curse all: show charity to none:
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow them,
Debts wither them: Be men like blasted woods,
And may diseases lick up their false bloods
And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou livest
Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou 'rt bless'd and free:
Ne'er see thou man and let me ne'er see thee.

[Exeunt severally.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before Timon's Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter; Timon behind, unseen.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor stragglng soldiers with great quantity: 'Tis said, he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore, 'tis not amiss, we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us; and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation: only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o'the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will, or testament, which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Tim. Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking, what I shall say I have provided for him: It must be a personating of himself: a satire against the softness of prosperity; with a discovery of the infinite flatteries, that follow youth and opulence.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:

Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.
Pain. True; When the day serves, before black-corner'd night, Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light. Come.

Tim. I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's gold, That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple, Than where swine feed! 'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark, and plough'st the foam; Sottishest admired reverence in a slave: To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey! 'Tis I do meet them. [Advancing.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir, Having often of your open bounty tasted, Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off, Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits! Not all the whips of heaven are large enough— What! to you! Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence To their whole being! I'm rapt, and cannot cover The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the better: You, that are honest, by being what you are, Make them best seen, and known.

Pain. He, and myself, Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts, And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.

Tim. You are honest men; You have heard that I have gold; I am sure you have: speak truth: you are honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord: but therefore Came not my friend, nor I.

Tim. Good honest men:—Thou draw'st a counterfeit 58 Best in all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best; Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. Even so, sir, as I say:—And, for thy fiction, [To the Poet. Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth, That thou art even natural in thine art.— But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends, I must needs say, you have a little fault: Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I, You take much pains to mend. Both. Beseech your honour To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you, indeed? Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's ne'er a one of you but trusts a knave, That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him ceg, see him dissimile, Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him, Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur'd, That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I. Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold, Rid me these villains from your companies: Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a draught, Confound them by some course, and come to me, I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord, let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this, but two in company:— Each man apart, all single and alone, Yet an arch-villain keeps him company. If, where thou art, two villains shall not be. [To the Painter. Come not near him.—If thou would'st not reside But where one villain is, then him abandon.— Hence! pack! there's gold, ye came for gold, ye slaves: You have done work for me, there's payment: Hence! You are an alchymist, make gold of that:— Out, rascal dogs! [Exit, beating and driving them out.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Flavius, and Two Senators.

Flav. It is in rain that you would speak with Timon;
TIMON OF ATHENS.

ACT V.

SCENE II.

For he is set so only to himself,
That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.

1st Sen. Bring us to his cave:
It is our part, and promise to the Athenians,
To speak with Timon.

2nd Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'Twas time, and griefs,
That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer hand,
Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him: Bring us to him,
And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.—
Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends: The Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort' st burn!—Speak, and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a caut'ring to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

1st Sen. Worthy Timon,—
Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

2nd Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.

1st Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators, with one consent of love,
Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

2nd Sen. They confess,
Toward thee, forgetfulness too general, gross:
Which now the public body,—which doth seldom
Play the recanter,—feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us, to make their sorrowed render,
Together with a recompense more fruitful
Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprise me to the very brink of tears:

Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

1st Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens (thine, and ours) to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority:—so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;
Who, like a bear too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

2nd Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword
Against the walls of Athens.

1st Sen. Therefore, Timon,—
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir;
Thus,—
If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That—Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then, let him know,—and tell him, Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him, that—I care not,
And let him tak't at worst; for their knives care not.
While you have throats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whistle in the unruly camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reverend' st throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow; My long sickness
Of health, and living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1st Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country; and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit doth put it.

1st Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Command me to my loving countrymen,—
1st Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.

2nd Sen. And enter in our ears like great trium-phers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Command me to them;
Act V.

Timon of Athens.

Scene III.

And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do
them:
I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

2nd Sen. I like this well, he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it; Tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whoso please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself:—I pray you, do my greeting.

Flav. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Which once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.—
Lips, let sour words go by, and language end:
What is amiss, plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works; and death, their gain!
Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign.

[Exit Tim.]

1st Sen. His discontents are unremovably
Coupled to nature.

2nd Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear peril.

2nd Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The Woods. Timon's Cave, and a
Tombe-stone seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking Timon.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.
Who's hero? speak, ho!—No answer?—What is this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:
Some beast rent'd this; there does not live a man.
Dead, sure; and this his grave.—

What's on his tomb I cannot read; the character
I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose full the mask of his ambition is. [Exit.

Scene V.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpet sound. Enter Alcibiades, and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach. [A Parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice; till now, myself, and such
As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd
Our sufferance vainly: Now the time is flush:
When crouching narrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries, of itself, 'No more!' now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And pursy insolence shall break his wind,
With fear, and horrid flight.

1st Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Bore thou hadst power, or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee; to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2nd Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city’s love,
By humble message, and by promis’d means;
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

1st Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv’d your griefs: nor are they such,
That these great towers, trophies, and schools
Should fall
For private faults in them.

2nd Sen. Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,
(If thy revenges hunger for that food,
Which nature loathes,) take thou the destin’d tenth;
And by the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

1st Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square, to take,
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lauds,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and cull the infected forth,
But kill not all together.

2nd Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Than hew to ’t with thy sword.

1st Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir’d gates, and they shall ope;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say, thou’lt enter friendly.

2nd Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal’d thy full desire.

Alecib. Then there’s my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports;60
Those enemies of Timon’s, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more: and,—to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city’s bounds,
But shall be remedied, to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. ’Tis most nobly spoken.

Alecib. Descend, and keep your words.
[The Senators descend, and open the Gates.

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb’d upon the very hem o’ the sea:
And, on his grave-stone, this insculptrue; which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alecib. [Reads.] Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name; A plague consume you wicked citizens left!
Here lie I Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:
Pass by, and curse thy fall; but pass, and stay not here thy gait.64

These well express in thee thy latter spirits;
Though thou abhorrest in us our human griefs,
Scorn’st our brain’s flow, and those our droplets which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword;
Make war breed peace; make peace stilt war;
make each
Prescribe to other, as each other’s leech.—
Let our drums strike.

[Exeunt.]
NOTES TO TIMON OF ATHENS.

1 He passes.
That is, he exceeds, goes beyond common bounds; the meter would be perfect, and the passage less abrupt, if we were to read, he passes praise.

2 If he will touch the estimate.
Agree to the price.

3 When use for recompense have prais'd the vile, &c. The poet is here reading his own work, and these three lines are the introduction of a poem addressed to Timon.

4 In a wide sea of wax.
The ancients wrote upon waxen tables with an iron stile. The meaning is, he does not limit his subject, but lets it run out to such extent, that the writing of it consumes a wide sea of wax.

5 Tis conceiv'd to seepe.
Grandly imagined; it is a conception without restraint.

6 Therefore he will be, Timon.
He is honest because it is his nature to be so; let him enjoy the happiness arising from his honesty, but not the love of my daughter.

7 It would unclaw me quite.
To unclaw is to unwind or undo.

8 Till I be gentle, stay for thy good morrow.
When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest.
Wait for my courtesy until that happen, which will never happen; namely, until thou art transformed to a dog, and these parasites become honest men.

9 That I had no angry wit to be a lord.
Warburton reads;—
That I had so hungry a wit to be a lord.
That is, I should hate myself for having no more wit than to covet so insignificant a title. Mr. Heath proposes to read;—
That I had so wrong'd my wit to be a lord.
But all alterations of the line must be merely conjectural.

10 Ho, ho, confess'd it? hang'd it, have you not?
The line contains an allusion to a proverbial saying of the time of Shakspeare, "Confess and be hanged."

11 Methinks they should invite them without knives.
"It was the custom," says Ritson, "in our author's time for every guest to bring his own knife, which he
T. 3 M
occasionally whetted on a stone that hung behind the door. One of these whetstones may be seen in Parkinson's Museum. They were strangers at that period to the use of forks.

12 My lord in heart.
That is, your health, my lord, with all my heart, in all sincerity.

13 Honour, and fortunes, keep with you Lord Timon.
The sense would be more clearly expressed, and the line more metrical, if the word you were omitted.

14 Will give away thyself in paper shortly.
That is, he ruined by securities entered into. Dr. Farmer would read—thyself in proper.

15 I'll look
Thy heaven from thee.

By his heaven he means good advice. He will no longer by counsel attempt to save Timon from ruin.

16 Be not ceased, i.e. silenced or stopped.

17 Good even, Varro.
Dr. Johnson says that this good even is before dinner, for Timon tells Alcibiades, that they will go forth again as soon as dinner's done. On this Mr. Tyrwhitt remarks that good even, or as it was sometimes written, good den, was the usual salutation after noon, the moment that good morrow became improper. It may also be remarked that the servants here call each other by their masters' names; this might have been a sly satire on the assumptions of servants, or it might have proceeded from the negligence of the poet.

18 That with your other noble parts you'll suit.
That is, that you will on this occasion act in a manner consistent with your other noble qualities.

19 Enter Aemelius and a Fool.
Dr. Johnson supposes something to be here lost, in which the audience are informed that the Fool and the Page, who subsequently enters, were the fool and page of Prynne, Timandra, or some other courtezan; upon a knowledge of which depends the greater part of the ensuing jocularity. Shakspeare, however, frequently introduces his characters with much abruptness, and leaves their condition and previous history to the imagination of his readers.

20 More than his artificial one.
His artificial one was the philosopher's stone, which in those times was much talked of.
21 I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock.
Sir T. Hanmer says a wasteful cock is a cock-loft or garret put to no use, but Mr. Collins has an explanation which I prefer. He says a wasteful cock is what we now call a waste-pipe; a pipe which is continually running, and thereby prevents the overflow of cisterns, and other reservoirs, by carrying off their superfluous water.

This circumstance served to keep the idea of Timon's unceasing prodigality in the mind of the steward, while its remoteness from the scenes of luxury within the house, was favourable to meditation.

22 With certain half-cap.
With a stiff and cold courtesy; a half-cap signifies a cap slightly moved, not put off.

23 Ingeniously I speak.
Ingenious, that is, witty, inventive; was anciently used in the same sense as ingenious—open, frank, candid.

24 To expel sickness, but prolong his hour.
That is, prolong the hour of sickness. His for its.

25 Yet had he mistrust him and sent to me.
Dr. Johnson proposes to read—"had he not mistrust him," i.e. had he not been deceived in his opinion of him, and sent to me, I would have supplied his wants.

26 With so many talents.
Thus the old copy, but we should certainly read with fifty talents, the sum Servilius was directed to apply for.
This is evident by the answer—"He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents."

27 I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him.
This passage is evidently corrupt; the wealth of the speaker could not have return'd to Timon, because it never came from him. Sir T. Hamner proposed to substitute attorn'd, but that reading would be hard and forced. Mr. Steevens says the word return'd being sometimes used by Shakspere in the sense of replies; as thus he returns, i.e. answers, he would so explain it in this passage, and the sense would be as follows:—The best half of my wealth should have been the reply returned to Timon, in answer to his request.

28 Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house.
That is, keep within doors for fear of duns.

29 He is a man setting his fate aside.
That is, setting aside this unfortunate deed which was predetermined by fate, and for which he is therefore not strictly chargeable.

30 But, in defense, by mercy, 'tis most just.
That is, I call mercy herself to witness that defensive violence is just.

31 The rest of your fees.
Fees has no sense; it is probably a misprint for fees.

32 Green, i.e. young, immature.

32 With multiplying banes.
That is, accumulated curses; multiplying is used for multiplied.

33 Let me be recorded.
Sir T. Hamner would substitute the much clearer and more forcible reading—Let it be recorded.

35 Not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,
But by contempt of nature.

This passage is unintelligible, but may be made clear enough by the addition of a single letter. If we read—not natures, &c., the sense will be:—Not those wretched beings who are afflicted with all kinds of evils, can bear a sudden reverse of fortune, and become prosperous without despising their fellow-creatures.

36 It is the pasture lards the brother's sides.
This is an obscure line which the editors of Shakspere have, in their attempts to explain, rendered still more doubtful. Warburton proposes—the weather's sides.
This is merely a conjectural reading, but I think it the best offered.

37 Fung mankind, i.e. seize upon, gripe, or tear.

38 Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold?
No, gods?
I am no idle votarist.

No, I do not desire wealth; my protestations against it are sincere. I am no inconstant suppliant of nature, gold will not tempt me to forsake her solitudes for society.

39 The wappent'd widow.
Of this word, Johnson says, he has found no example, nor does he know the meaning. Mr. Steevens suggests the meaning of it to be debilitated by the diseases of debauchery.

40 She, whom the spital-house, and ulcerous sores
Would cast the garge at.

She whose ulcerous sores the spital-house, &c.

But the passage may stand without emendation; the spital-house is used metaphorically, for the inmates of it, and ulcerous sores for the possessors of them.

41 I will make thee
Do thy right nature.

That is, I will bury thee again, consign thee to the earth where nature placed thee.

42 Phrynia.
Shakspere probably meant Phryne, but spelt the name from recollection. She was an Athenian courtezan, so exquisitely beautiful, that when her judges were promising to condemn her for numerous and enormous offences, a sight of her bosom, which was artfully uncovered by her advocate so softened her judges that they spared her life.
NOTES TO TIMON OF ATHENS.

43 With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules. We might repair the defective metre by adopting a Shaksperian epithet, and reading—gules total gules.

44 I see them now; then was a blessed time. From Timon's answer it is probable that Shakspero wrote—Thine was a blessed time.

45 I'll trust to your conditions. You need not swear to continue your dissolute lives, I will trust to your wanton natures that you will do so.

46 —— And thatch your poor thin roofs. With burdens of the dead. Poor thin roofs mean heads which have lost much of their hair from the effects of disease, which he tells them to hide by wearing false hair, hair which belonged to the dead. Thus in Drayton's Moonecalf:

And with large sums they stick not to procure Hair from the dead, yea, and the most unclean To help their pride they nothing will disdain.

47 Below crisp heaven.

Mr. Upton says crisp is used as curled, bent, hollow; Dr. Warburton would read cri'd, i.e. vaulted.

48 Hug their deceas'd perfumes, i.e. their mistresses.

49 What a knave too? I always knew thee for a fool, now I see thou art a knave also, for to vex another by design is villany.

50 They mock'd thee for too much curiosity. For too much refinement, or rather finical delicacy.

51 Wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee.

In Gesner's Animal History, it is said that the unicorn and the lion being enemies by nature, as soon as the lion sees the unicorn, he betakes himself to a tree; the unicorn in his fury, and with all the swiftness of his course, running at him, sticks his horn fast in the tree, and then the lion descends and kills him.

52 O thou touch of hearts. Touch is used for touchstone: Thou touchstone of hearts.

53 Your greatest want is, you want much of meat. We should read much of meet, i.e. much of what you ought to be.

54 Yet thanks I must you con.

To con thanks, is a common expression among our old dramatic writers, for to give or owe thanks.

55 ——— It almost turns

My dangerous nature wild.

Warburton says it should be mild for wild. Timon's nature was already wild enough, but the conduct of the steward was such as to calm and soften his distraction.

56 Thou draw'st a counterfeit

A counterfeit is a portrait or picture.

57 Allow'd with absolute power.

Allow'd is licensed, privileged: absolute command shall be granted him.

58 Travell'd arms, i.e. arms folded across.

59 The time is flush, i.e. mature.

60 Your uncharg'd ports, i.e. unattacked ports.

61 ——— To atone your fears,

With my more noble meaning.

To reconcile them to his noble intention, to gain their belief of it.

62 But pass, and stay not here thy gait.

Shakspero formed this epitaph out of two which he found in Plutarch; the following is the passage containing them. "He [Timon] was buried at Hale near the sea, and the water surrounded his tomb in such a manner, that he was even then inaccessible to mankind. The following epitaph is inscribed on his monument:—

At last I've bid the knaves farewell;
Ask not my name—but go—to hell.

It is said that he wrote this epitaph himself. That which is commonly repeated was written by Callimarchus:—

My name is Timon: knaves begone!
Curse me, but come not near my stone!

II T.
SHAKSPERE, in the two concluding lines of the prologue to this play, appears to have anticipated that it would not be exceedingly popular; to say the truth, it is the most desultory and rambling of his acknowledged works: extending over too great a period of time for the poet fairly to grasp, consisting of too many incidents for effective combination, and of too many characters to permit of their complete development. In this play we miss that constructive art which is generally to be traced in the works of Shakspere; it is less a drama than a narrative; the story is unconnected and incomplete, and the end is no conclusion. Hector, the hero and favourite of the poet—the brave, yet gentle and generous Hector—is shamefully murdered, in violation both of the laws of arms and humanity, and the large-limbed savage who hacks him to death by deputy, escapes unhurt and in triumph. Troilus talks largely of revenge, but accomplishes none; Cressida is false and unpunished, and, we are to suppose, lives to be the happy mistress of Diomed, until her voluptuous and fickle nature prompts her to abandon him as readily as she has previously left Troilus.

The destruction of Troy would have been a theme worthy of the pen of Shakspere, had he confined his overflowing and sometimes erratic genius to his subject; he had admirable materials in his hand, had he attempted less. The play abounds with characters, but they are introduced and then abandoned: before we are fairly acquainted with them, they vanish. Cressida is little more than a sketch, and Cassandra, the mad prophetess, something less than one. The best developed character is Pandarus, and he is altogether contemptible. Thersites is probably the original of Apenants; there is, at least, a resemblance between them, but the latter is the most finished character. Shakspere apparently intended to create a sympathy and admiration for Troilus, for he makes "that same dog-fox, Ulysses," speak eloquently in his favour, comparing him with Hector, and declaring that he was:

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word;
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provoked, nor, being provoked, soon calmed:
His heart and hand both open and both free.

Still, a mere lover is generally an insipid creation, and Troilus is scarcely an exception to the rule; he wants purpose, decision, and moral courage. The conduct of Pandarus is mean and officious enough, but Troilus shares his shame by employing him. Cressida was open to be wooed, and easy to be won; she is sufficiently complying, in all conscience, and only retires when she is feebly pursued. Had Troilus won her in an open, manly manner, he would probably have preserved both her affection and her honour. Fanciful, giddy coquette as she is, she would have remained virtuous, had she not encountered temptation.

But I must qualify my censure; vague as the play is, it is full of fine poetry and profound observations; if we are for a moment angry with Shakspere for his wanderings or his inconsistency, he soon wins us back to him with bribes of thought and beauty. The play also has many fine scenes; for instance, that between Cressida and her uncle, in the first act, is remarkable for sparkling dialogue; the same may be said of the first scene of the second act, between the savage jester Thersites, and the blunt Ajax. The short scene in the third act, where Helen is introduced, is exceedingly natural and lively; the equivocations of the servant whom Pandarus addresses, are fully as humorous as the sayings of the licensed fools in other of our poet's plays. The following scene in the garden of Pandarus, where the lovers meet and confess their affection, is exceedingly beautiful; we are reminded for a moment of a similar scene in Romeo and Juliet, but the resemblance soon ceases—the passionate, though chaste and womanly affection of Juliet, compared to the wanton appetite of Cressida, is as a pure bright star in heaven to the cold delusive fire which dances in darkness over the stagnant pool or trackless marsh. The dialogue between Achilles and Hector, after the tournament, is in Shakspere’s happiest style. The bulky Achilles scanning the Trojan prince with his eyes, and soliciting the gods to tell him in what part of his body he should destroy great Hector, is the sublime of chivalry. Hector’s passionate rejoinder:

Henceforth, guard thee well;
For I’ll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithed Mars his helm,
I’ll kill thee everywhere, yea, o’er and o’er.

is equally fine; while the whole of the fifth act is full of vigour and bustle, and exceedingly animated.

Schlegel ingeniously accounts for the manner in which Shakspere has treated this subject by saying:—”The whole is one continued irony of that crown of all heroic tales, the tale of Troy. The contemptible nature of the Trojan war, the laziness and discord with which it was carried on, so that the siege was made to last ten years, are only placed in clearer light by the noble descriptions, the sage and ingenious maxims with which the work overflows, and the high ideas which the heroes entertain of themselves and each other.”

Shakspere is supposed to have produced this drama in 1601 or 1602; he borrowed the story chiefly from Chaucer’s poem of the same name; though he was also indebted to Lydgate’s Historie of the Destruction of Troy, and the first seven books of Chapman’s translation of Homer. But his chief obligations were certainly to Chaucer, who details the love of Troilus and Cressida, and the assistance they derived from Pandarus, at great length. In his story Troilus is slain by Achilles; and, says the venerable old gossip:—

And when that he was slain in this manere
His lightest gote ful blissfully is went
Up to the holownesse of the seventh sphere,
In his place letting everyhelelement,
And there he sawe, with ful avisement,
The erratake sterres, hearnekeing harmonie,
With somnis ful of hevin’s melodie.
And down from thennis fast he gan avise
This litil spote of erth that with the se
Embraced is, and fully gan dispise
This wretchid world, and heide al vanite
In respecte of the plaine felicite
That is in heven above, and at the last
There he was shane his leking down he east.

The old poet’s story consists of eighteen hundred and sixty-nine stanzas, and is, in my estimation, sufficiently tedious to wade through. It may be very barbarous and tasteless to say so; but although sentiments, which might be eloquent but for the rude and obsolete language in which they are expressed, occasionally occur, still the whole tale does not contain one great or brilliant thought, or one exquisitely poetical simile. Little more than a century and a-half occurred between the death of Chaucer and the birth of Shakspere, yet the works of the former are obsolete and half-forgotten, while the dramas of the latter are yet as fresh, vivid, and attractive as if they had but just been given to the world. The works of Chaucer have but a feeble ray of genius, cold and flickering—those of Shakspere contain a pregnant heat of vital power which attracts and warms all hearts.

In the collected works of Chaucer, the story of Troilus and Cressida is followed by The Testament of Cresseide, a conclusion of the tale by another writer, supposed to be one Robert Henderson, a schoolmaster of Dunfermline. In this continuation, Cresseide, for railing upon Venus and Cupid, is by the gods transformed into a leper; and ends her life in great poverty and misery. The idea is coarse and unpoetical but it is not unskilfully treated, when we consider the rudeness of our language at that period.

Trojan and Greek Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Troy; and the Grecian Camp before it.
Troilus and Cressida.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf’d,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraght with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: Sixty and nine, that were
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia: and their vow is made,
To ransack Troy; within whose strong immures
The ravish’d Helen, Menelaus’ queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; And that’s the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come;
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorgo
Their warlike fraughtage: Now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam’s six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilias, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples,
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard:—And bither am I come
A prologue arm’d,—but not in confidence
Of author’s pen, or actor’s voice; but suited
In like conditions as our argument,—
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o’er the quaint* and firstlings of those broils,
'Ginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
Now good, or bad, ’tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

Enter Troilus armed, and Pandarus.

Tro. Call here my varlet, I’ll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this gear ne’er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Fierceto their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;
But I am weaker than a woman’s tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance;
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skill-less as unpractis’d infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: for my part, I’ll not meddle nor make no further. He, that will have a cake out of the wheat, must tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening: but here’s yet in the word—hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e’er she be, Doth lesser blest at sufferance than I do.
At Priam’s royal table do I sit;
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—
So, Traitor! when she comes!—When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—When my heart, As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain;

465
ACT I.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE II.

Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have (as when the sun doth light a storm,)
Bury'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to,) there were no more comparison between the women,—But, for my part,
she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her,—But I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit; but—

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,
When I do tell thee, There my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love: Thou answer'st, She is fair;
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
Handlest in thy discourse, O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach; To whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me,
As true thou tell'st me, when I say—I love her;
But, saying, thus, instead of oil and balm,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in 't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus! How now, Pandarus?

Pan. I have had my labour for my travel; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you; gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what,
with me?

Pan. Because she is kin to me, therefore, she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-armoor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father; let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her:
for my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,— 456

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me; I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit Pan. An Alarm.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!
Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus—O gods, how do you plague me!
I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?
Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:
Between our Ilium, and where she resides,
Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood;
Ourselves, the merchant; and this sailing Pandar,
Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter Aeneas.

Aene. How now, prince Troilus? wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there; This woman's answer sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence.
What news, Aeneas, from the field to-day?

Aene. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Aeneas?

Aene. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.

Aene. Hark! what good sport is out of town
to-day?

Tro. Better at home, if "would I might," were
"may."

But, to the sport abroad;—Are you bound thither?

Aene. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Street.

Enter Cressida and Alexander.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba, and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience Is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was mov'd: If I chid Andromache, and struck his armourer; And, like as there were husbancy in war, Before the sun rose, he was harness'd light, And to the field goes he; where every flower Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?
Alex. The noise goes, this: There is among the Greeks A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector; They call him, Ajax.

Cres. Good; And what of him?
Alex. They say he is a very man per se; And stands alone.
Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular Additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humour, that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: There is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attainnt, but he carries some taint of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: He hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes no smile, make Hector angry?
Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the diadain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cres. Who comes here?
Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.
Cres. Hector's a gallant man.
Alex. As may be in the world, lady.
Pan. What's that? what's that?
Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.
Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?
Cres. This morning, uncle.
Pan. What were you talking of, when I came? Was Hector armed, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?
Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'cv so; Hector was stirring early.
Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.
Pan. Was he angry?
Cres. So he says here.
Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that: and there is Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.
Cres. What, is he angry too?
Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.
Cres. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.
Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?
Do you know a man if you see him?
Cres. Ay; if ever I saw him before, and knew him.
Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.
Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.
Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.
Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.
Pan. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus! I would, he were,— Cres. So he is.
Pan. —Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.
Cres. He is not Hector.
Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself.—Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; Time must friend, or end: Well, Troilus, well,—I would, my heart were in her body!—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.
Cres. Excuse me.
Pan. He is elder.
Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.
Pan. The other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.
Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.
Pan. Nor his qualities;—
Cres. Nor matter.
Pan. Nor his beauty.
Cres. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.
Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself awoke the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, (for so 'tis, I must confess,)—Not brown neither.
Cres. No, but brown.
Pan. 'Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.
Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.
Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE II.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then, Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief, Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think, Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into a compassed window,—and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young: and yet will be, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter? 10

Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him;—she came, and put me her white hand to his cloven chin,—

Cres. Juno have mercy!—How came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think, his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then:—But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,— Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you 'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin;—Indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rank.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But, there was such laughing;—Queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes;—Did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, "Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white."

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. "One and fifty hairs," quoth he, "and one white: That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons." "Jupiter!" quoth she, "which of these hairs is Paris, my husband?" "The forked one," quoth he; "pluck it out, and give it him." But, there was such laughing! and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed.

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on 't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 'tis true; he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a mettle against May. [A Retreat sounded.

Pan. Hark, they are coming from the field: Shall we stand up here, and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece Cressida. At your pleasure.

Pan. Hero, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names, as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

AENAS passes over the Stage.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Aenas; Is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you; But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

ANTENOR passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor; he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one o' the soundest judgments in Troy, whoseover, and a proper man of person:—When comes Troilus— I'll show you Troilus anon; if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.
Cres. Will he give you the nod?
Pan. You shall see.
Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

Hector passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; There's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector;—There's a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—Look, how he looks! there's a countenance: Is 't not a brave man?
Cres. O, a brave man!
Pan. Is 'a not? It does a man's heart good— Look you what hacks are on his helmet? look you yonder, do you see? look you there! There's no jesting: there's laying on; take't off who will, as they say: there be hacks!
Cres. Be those with swords?

Paris passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not: an the devil come to him, it's all one: By god's lid, it does one's heart good:—Yonder comes Paris, yonder come Paris: look ye yonder, niece; Is 't not a gallant man too, is 't not?—Why, this is brave now.—Who said, he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now. Ha! 'would I could see Troilus now;—you shall see Troilus anon.
Cres. Who's that?

Helenus passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus,—I marvel, where Troilus is:—That's Helenus;—I think he went not forth to-day:—That's Helenus.
Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?
Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he'll fight indifferent well:—I marvel, where Troilus is!—Methinks you do not hear the people cry, Troilus?—Helenus is a priest.
Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Troilus passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus: 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece!—Hem!—Bravo Troilus! the prince of chivalry!
Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!
Pan. Mark him; note him;—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece; look you, how his sword is bloomed, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's; And how he looks, and how he goes!— O admirable youth! he no'er saw threes and twenty. Go thy way Troilus, go thy way; had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris?

is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Forces pass over the Stage.

Cres. Here come more.
Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die 't the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.
Cres. There is among the Greeks, Achilles; a better man than Troilus.
Pan. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.
Cres. Well, well.
Pan. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?
Cres. Ay, a minded man: and then to be baked with no date in the pie,—for then the man's date is out.
Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.
Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.
Pan. Say one of your watches.
Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding; and then it is past watching.
Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.
Pan. Where?
Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.
Pan. Good boy, tell him I come: [Exit Boy. I doubt, he be hurt.—Pare ye well, good niece.
Cres. Adieu, uncle.
Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.
Cres. To bring, uncle,—
Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.
Cres. By the same token—you are a bawd.—

[Exit Pan.

Words, vows, griefs, tears, and love's full sacrifice,
He offers in another's enterprise:
But more in Troilus thousand fold I see
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing:
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing:11
That she belov'd knows nought, that knows not this,—

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:
That she was never yet, that ever knew
Love got so sweet, as when desire did sue:
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach,—
Achievement is command; ungain'd, beseech:
Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before Agamemnon's Tent.

Trumpets. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, and Others.

Agam. Princes,
What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?
The ample proposition, that hope makes
In all design on earth below,
Fails in the promis'd largeness: checks and disasters
Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infest the sound pine, and divert his grain
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us,
That we come short of our purpose so far,
That, after seven years' siege, yet Troy walls stand;
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that unbody'd figure of the thought
That gav't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,
Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works;
And think them shame, which are, indeed, nought else
But the protractive trials of great Jove,
To find persisitive constancy in men?
The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love: for then, the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin:
But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath mass, or matter, by itself
Lies, rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance
Lies the true proof of men: The sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of nobler bulk?
But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold
The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,
Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Persians' horse:12 Where's then the saucy boat,
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness? either to harbour fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Doth valour's show, and valour's worth, divide,
In storms of fortune: For, in her ray and brightness,
The herd hath more annoyance by the brize,13
Than by the tiger: but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies fled under shade, Why, then, the thing
of courage,
As rons'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent turn'd in self-same key,
Returns to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,—
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,
Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up,—hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation
The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway,—

[To Agam.

And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-on't-life.—
[To Nest.

I give to both your speeches,—which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass; and such again,
As venerable Nestor, hach't in silver,14
Should with a bond of air (strong as the axletree
On which heaven rides,) knit all the Greekish ears
To his experienced tongue,—yet let it please both,— Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect
That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips; than we are confident,
When rank Thersites opes his mastiff jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,
But for these instances.

460
The specialty of rule hath been neglected:
And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive,
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
The unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre,\textsuperscript{16}
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order:
And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other; whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans check, to good and bad: But, when the planets,
In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
What plagues, and what portents? what mutiny?
What raging of the sea? shaking of earth?
Commotion in the winds? frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and demecinate\textsuperscript{16}
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixture? O, when degree is shak'd,
Which is the ladder of all high designs,
The enterprise is sick! How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place?
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets
In mere oppugnancy: The bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe:
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead:
Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
(Between whose endless jar justice resides,
Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforse an universal prey,
And, last, eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocated,
Follows the choking.
And this negligence of degree it is,
That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
It bath to climb. The general's disdain'd

By him one step below; he, by the next;
That next, by him beneath: so every step,
Exempl'd by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

\textbf{Next.} Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick.

\textbf{Again.} The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
What is the remedy?

\textbf{Ulysses.} The great Achilles,—whom opinion crowns
The snow and the forehead of our host,—
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs: With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests;
And with ridiculous and awkward action
(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls.)
He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless deputation he puts on;
And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the seafoldage,—
Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
Ho acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
'Tis like a chimera mending; with terms un squad'd,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd
Would seem hyperboles. At this lusty stuff,
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed rolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
Cries—"Excellent!—'tis Agamemnon just.—
Now play me Nestor;—hem, and stroke thy beard,
As he, being 'drest to some oration."
That's done;—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his wife:
Yet good Achilles still cries, "Excellent!"
'Tis Nestor right! Now play him me, Patroclus, Arming to answer in a night alarm."
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough, and spit,
And with a palsy-fumbling on his gore,
Shake in and out the rut— and at this sport,
Sir Valour dies; cries, "O!—enough, Patroclus;—
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall spit all
In pleasure of my spleen." And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Several and genera of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.\(^\text{17}\)

\textit{Nest.} And in the imitation of these twain (Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice,) many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles: keeps his tent like him;
Makes factions feasts; rails on our state of war,
Bold as an oracle: and sets Thersites
(A slave, whose gall coins slanders like a mint,)
To match us in comparisons with dirt;
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

\textit{Ulyss.} They tax our policy, and call it cowardice;
Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,—
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on; and know, by measure
Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this—bed work, mappery, closet-war:
So that the ram, that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness o' his poize,
They place before his hand that made the engine;
Or those, that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

\textit{Nest.} Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons. \[\text{Trumpet sounds.}\]

\textit{Agam.} What trumpet? look, Menelaus.

\textbf{Enter Aeneas.}

\textit{Men. From Troy.}

\textit{Agam.} What would you 'fore our tent?

\textit{Aene.} Is this Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray?

\textit{Agam.} Even this.

\textit{Aene.} May one, that is a herald, and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

\textit{Agam.} With surety stronger than Achilles' arm
'Tore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice
Call Agamemnon head and general.

\textit{Aene.} Fair leave and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

\textit{Agam.} How?

\textit{Aene.} Ay; I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the check be ready with a blush

\textbf{Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phoebus:}
Which is that god in office, guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

\textit{Agam.} This Trojan scorus us; or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious courtiers.

\textit{Aene.} Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd,
As bending angels; that's their fame in peace:
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord,
Nothing so full of heart. But peace, \textit{Aeneas},
Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips!
The worthiness of praise disdains his worth,
If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth:
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame follows; that praise, sole pure, Transcends.

\textit{Agam.} Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself \textit{Aeneas}?

\textit{Aene.} Ay, Greek, that is my name.

\textit{Agam.} What's your affair, I pray you?

\textit{Aene.} Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

\textit{Agam.} He hears nought privately, that comes from Troy.

\textit{Aene.} Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him:
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.

\textit{Agam.} Speak frankly as the wind;
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour:
That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.

\textit{Aene.} Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;—
And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly, shall be spoke aloud.

\[\text{[Trumpet sounds.]}\]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy
A prince call'd Hector, (Priam is his father,)
Who in this dull and long-continued truce\(^{18}\)
Is rusty grown; he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords!
If there be one, among the fair'st of Greece,
That holds his honour higher than his ease;
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril;
That knows his valour, and knows not his fear;
That loves his mistress more than in confession,
(With truant vows to her own lips he loves,) And dare avow her beauty and her worth,
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.
Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms;
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love:
If any come, Hector shall honour him;
If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retires,
The Grecian dares are sun-burn'd, and not worth
The splinter of a lance.\(^{19}\) Even so much.

Another. This shall be told our lovers, lord Enæs;
If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home; but we are soldiers;
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

Nestor. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now;
But, if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man, that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, Tell him from me,—
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver,
And in my vambrace put this wther'd brawn;
And, meeting him, will tell him, That my lady
Was fairer than her grandame, and as chaste
As may be in the world; His youth in flood,
I'll prove this truth with my three drops of blood.

Enæs. Now heavens forbid such sacrety of youth!

Ulysses. Amen.

Another. Fair lord Enæs, let me touch your hand;
To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir.
Achilles shall have word of this intent;—
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent:
Yourself shall feast with us before you go,
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but Ulyss. and Nest.

Ulysses. Nestor,—

Nestor. What says Ulysses?

Ulysses. I have a young conception in my brain,
Bo you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nestor. What is 't?

Ulysses. This 'tis:—
Blunt wedges rive hard knots: The seeded pride
That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles, must or now be crop'd;
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To overbark us all.

Nestor. Well, and how?

Ulysses. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nestor. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grossness little characters sum up:
And, in the publication, make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough,—will with great speed of judgment,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulysses. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nestor. Yes,
It is most meet; Whom may you else oppose,
That can from Hector bring those honours off,
If not Achilles? Though 'tis a sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dearest repute
With their fin'st palate: And trust to me, Ulysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this wild action: for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such inkeuces, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby-figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He, that meets Hector, issues from our choice:
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election: and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; Who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence a conquering part,
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulysses. Give pardon to my speech;—
Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perehance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed,
By showing the worse first. Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nestor. I see them not with my old eyes; what are they?

Ulysses. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were not proud, we all should share with him.
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
ACT II.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE I.—Another Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites,—
Ther. Agamemnon—how if be had boils? full, all over, generally?
Ajax. Thersites,—
Ther. And those boils did run?—Say so,—did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?
Ajax. Dog,—
Ther. Then would come some matter from him; I see none now.
Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf’s son, canst thou not hear? Feel then. [Strikes him.
Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee;[2] thou mongrel beef-witted lord!
Ajax. Speak then, thou unsalted leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.
Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o’thy jade’s tricks!
Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.
Ther. Dost thou think, I have no sense, thou strikest me thus?
Ajax. The proclamation,—
Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.
Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not; my fingers itch.
Ther. I would, thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another.

Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project’s life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax, empoy’d, plucks down Achilles’ plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other; Pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as ‘twere their bone

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—
Ther. Thou grumblest and raillest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina’s beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.
Ajax. Mistress Thersites!
Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.
Ajax. Cobloaf!
Ther. He would pun thee into shivers[2][with his fist], as a sailor breaks a biscuit.
Ther. Do, do.
Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!
Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinage[2][may tutor thee: Thou sevry valiant ass! thou art here put to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, Thou thing of no bowels, thou!
Ajax. You dog!
Ther. You sevry lord!
Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax? wherefore do you thus?
How now, Thersites? what’s the matter, man?
Ther. You see him there, do you?
Achil. Ay; what’s the matter?
Ther. Nay, look upon him.
Achil. So I do; what’s the matter?
Ther. Nay, but regard him well.
Achil. Well, why I do so.
Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.
Achil. I know that, fool.
Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.
Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.
Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what meddlesome wit he utters! his evasions have ears long. I have bobbed his brain, more than he has beat his bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax,—who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head,—I'll tell you what I say of him.
Achil. What?
Ther. I say, this Ajax—
Ajax. Nay, good Ajax.
[ Ajax offers to strike him, Achil. interposes.
Ther. Has not so much wit—
Achil. Nay, I must hold you.
Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.
Achil. Peace, fool!
Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he; look you there.
Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall—
Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?
Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.
Patr. Good words, Thersites.
Achil. What's the quarrel?
Ajax. I bade the vilo owl, go learn me the tenor of the proclamation, and he Raise upon me.
Ther. I serve thee not.
Ajax. Well, go to, go to.
Ther. I serve here voluntary.
Achil. Your last service was suffrance, twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary; Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.
Ther. Even so?—a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains; 'a were as good crack a dusty nut with no kernel.
Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?
Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor,—whose wit was mouldy croe your grandsires had nails on their toes,—yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the wars.
Achil. What, what?
Ther. Yes, good sooth; To, Achilles! to, Ajax! to!

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.
Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou, afterwards.
Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace.
Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' branch bids me, shall I?
Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.
Ther. I will see you hanged, like crotches, ere I come any more to your tents; I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools.
[Exit.

Patr. A good riddance.
Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaimed through all our host:
That Hector, by the first hour of the sun,
Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy,
To-morrow morning call some knight to arms,
That hath a stomach; and such a one, that dare Maintain—I know not what; 'tis trash: Farewell.
Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?
Achil. I know not, it is put to lottery; otherwise
He knew his man.
Ajax. O, meaning you:—I'll go learn more of it.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Troy. A Room in Priam's Palace.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,
Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks;
"Deliver Helen, and all damage else—
As honour, loss of time, travel, expense,
Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd
In hot digestion of this cormorant war,—
Shall be struck off":—Hector, what say you to 't?
Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,
As far as toucheth my particular, yet,
Dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out—"Who knows what follows?"—
Than Hector is: The wound of peace is surely,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,
Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand diseases;
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:
If we have lost so many tenth's of ours,
To guard a thing not ours; not worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten;
What merit's in that reason, which denies
The yielding of her up?

_Tro._ Fie, fie, my brother! Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,
So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past-proportion of his infinite?
And buckle-in a waist most fathomless,
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame!

_Hel._ No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,
You are so empty of them. Should not our father
Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,
Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

_Tro._ You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest,
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:
You know, an enemy intends you harm
You know, a sword employ'd is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels then, when Helemus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do act
The very wings of reason to his heels;
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star dis-orb'd?—Nay, if we talk of reason,
Let's shut our gates, and sleep: Manhood and honour
Should have bare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
With this cram'd reason: reason and respect
Makes livers pale, and lusthoid extinct.

_Hect._ Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost
The holding.

_Tro._ What is aught, but as 'tis valued?

_Hect._ But value dwells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry,
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes, that is attributable
To what infectious itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

_Tro._ I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment: How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,

The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blemish from this, and to stand firm by honour:
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have soil'd them; nor the remainder viands
We do not throw in unrespective sieve,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet,
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath with full consent bellied his sails;
The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,
And did him service: he touch'd the ports desir'd;
And, for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive,
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness
Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes pale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Greeks keep our aunt:
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch, 'twas wisdom Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cry'd—"Go, go,"")
If you'll confess, he brought home noble prize,
(As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,
And cry'd—"Inestimable!"") why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdom rate;
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggar the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O theft most base;
That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

_Cas._ [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

_Pri._ What noise? what shriek is this?

_Tro._ 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

_Cas._ [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

_Hect._ It is Cassandra.

Enter Cassandra, raving.

_Cas._ Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

_Hect._ Peace, sister, peace.

_Cas._ Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled elders,
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of mean to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;
Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen, and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.
Hec. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?
Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once deceit the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad; her brain-sick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!
Par. Else might the world convince of levity
As well my undertakings, as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what, alas, can these my single arms
What propagnation is in one man's valour,
To stand the push and emuity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.
Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant, is no praise at all.
Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it; But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up,
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unsu'm'd,
Where Helen is the subject: then, I say,
Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hec. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well;
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glo'red—but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy:
The reasons, you allege, do more conduces
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; For pleasure and revenge,
Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature eraves,
All dues be rendered to their owners; Now
What nearer debt in all humanity,
Than wife is to the husband? if this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection;
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,—
As it is known she is,—these moral laws
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth; yet, no'evertheless,
My spritely brethren, I impend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities.
Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:
Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may bent down our foes,
And fame, in time to come, canonize us:
For, I presume, brav'o Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.
Hec. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus,—
I have a roasting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factions nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazenment to their drowsy spirits:
I was advér'tis'd, their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept;
This, I presume, will wake him.
[Exeunt.]

Enter Thersites.

Ther. How now, Thersites? what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! ’twould, it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me: ’Sfoot, I’ll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I’ll see some issue of my spiteful excreations. Then there’s Achilles,—a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus; if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have! which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circum-vention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons, and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the baneache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependant on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers; and devil, envy, say Amen. What, ho! my lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gift counterfeit, thou wouldest not have slipped out of my contemplation; but it is no matter; Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she, that lays thee out, says—thou art a fair cors, I’ll be sworn and sworn upon’t, she never shrouded any but lazers. Amen. Where’s Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; The heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who ’s there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come; what ’s Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles;—Then tell me, Patroclus, what ’s Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites; Then tell me, I pray thee, what ’s thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus; Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayest tell, that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I ’ll decline the whole question. Agamem-non commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus’ knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool; I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the prover. —It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, and Ajax.

Achil. Patroclus, I ’ll speak with nobody:—Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is, a cuckold, and a whore; a good quarrel, to draw envious factions, and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpigo on the subject! and war, and lechery, confound all! [Exit.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos’d, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him, that we are here.
He shent our messengers; and we lay by
Our appertainments, visiting of him:
Let him be told so; lest, perchance, he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent;
Ho is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man;
but, by my head, 'tis pride: But why, why? let him show us a cause.—A word, my lord.

[ Takes Agam. aside.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?
Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.
Nest. Who? Thersites?
Ulyss. He.
Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.
Ulyss. No you see, he is his argument, that has his argument; Achilles.
Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish, than their faction: But it was a strong composure, a fool could disunite.
Ulyss. The unity, that wisdom knits not, fully may easily unite. Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.
Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.
Patr. Achilles bids me say—he is much sorry, If any thing more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness, and this noble state, To call upon him: he hopes, it is no other, But, for your health and your digestion sake, An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus;— We are too well acquainted with these answers: But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions. Much attribute he hath; and much the reason Why wo ascribe it to him: yet all his virtues,— Not virtuously on his own part beheld,— Do, in our eyes, begin to lose their gloss; Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him, We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin, If you do say—we think him over-proud, And under-honest; in self- assumption greater, Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on; Disguise the holy strength of their command, And underwrite in an observing kind His humorous predominance; yea, watch His pettish lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Go, tell him this; and add, That, if he overhold his price so much, We'll none of him; but let him like an engine

Not portable, lie under this report— Bring action hither, this cannot go to war: A stirring dwarf we do allowance give Before a sleeping giant:—Tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently. [Exit.]

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied, We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter.

[Exit Ulyss.

Ajax. What is he more than another?
Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.
Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am?
Agam. No question.
Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say—he is?
Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.
Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.
Agam. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.
Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the en-gendering of toads.

Re-enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.
Agam. What's his excuse?
Ulyss. He doth rely on none; But carries on the stream of his dispose, Without observance or respect of any, In will peculiar and in self-admission. Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request, Untent his person, and share the air with us? Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only, He makes important: Possess'd he is with greatness; And speaks not to himself, but with a pride That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth Holds in his blood such swarm and hot discourse, That, 'twixt his mental and his active parts, Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages, And batters down himself: What should I say? He is so plagiour proud, that the death tokens of it Cry:—"No recovery."

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.—
Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent:
'Tis said, he holds you well; and will be led,
At your request, a little from himself.
Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so!
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: Shall the proud lord,
That bastes his arrogance with his own seam;
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts,—save such as do revolve
And ruminates himself,—shall he be worshipp'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;
Nor, by my will, assuage his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:
That were to enlard his fat-already pride;
And add more coals to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid;
And say in thunder—'Achilles, go to him.'

Nest. O, this is well; he rubs the vein of him.
[Aside.
Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause!
[Aside.

Ajax. If I go to him, with my arm'd fist I'll push him
Over the face.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.
Ajax. An he be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride:
Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.
Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow,—
Nest. How he describes himself!
[Aside.

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulyss. The raven
Chides blackness.

Ajax. I will let his humours blood.

Agam. He'll be physician, that should be the patient.

Ajax. An all men
Wore o' my mind,—

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion.

Ajax. He should not bear it so,
He should eat swords first: Shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 'twould, you'd carry half.

Ulyss. He'd havo ten shares.

Ajax. I'll knead him, I will make him supple:—

Nest. He's not yet thorough warm: force him with praises:
Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.

Ulyss. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

Nest. O noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—But 'tis before his face;
I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!

I would, he were a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice
Were it in Ajax now——

Ulyss. If he were proud?

Dio. Or covetous of praise?

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne?

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected?

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;
Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature
Thric-fam'd, beyond all erudition:
But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,
Let Mars divide eternity in twain,
And give him half: and, for thy vigour,
Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,
Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines
Thy spacious and dilated parts: Here's Nestor,— Instructed by the antiquary times,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;—
But pardon, father Nestor, were your days
As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be ru'd by him, lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no rulling here; the hart
Achilles
Keeps thicket. Please it our great general
To call together all his state of war;
Fresh kings are come to Troy: To-morrow
We must with all our main of power stand fast:
SCENE II.—Troy. A Room in Priam’s Palace.

Enter Pandarvs and a Servant.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: Do not you follow the young lord Paris?
Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.
Pan. You do depend upon him, I mean?
Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.
Pan. You do depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.
Serv. The lord be praised!
Pan. You know me, do you not?
Serv. ’Faith, sir, superficially.
Pan. Friend, know no better; I am the lord Pandarvs.
Serv. I hope, I shall know your honour better.
Pan. I do desire it.
Serv. You are in the state of grace.

[Music within.

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles:—What music is this?
Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is music in parts.
Pan. Know you the musicians?
Serv. Wholly, sir.
Pan. Who play they to?
Serv. To the hearers, sir.
Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?
Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
Serv. Who shall I command, sir?
Pan. Friend, we understand not one another; I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning: At whose request do these men play?
Serv. That’s to’t, indeed, sir: Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love’s invisible soul,—
Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?
Serv. No, sir, Helen; Could you not find out that by her attributes?
Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimential assault upon him, for my business seeth.
Serv. Sudden business! there’s a stewed phrase, indeed!

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow!
Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.
Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.
—Fair prince, hero is good broken music.
Par. You have broke it, cousin: and, by my life, you shall make it whole again: you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance:—Nell, he is full of harmony.
Pan. Truly, lady, no.
Helen. O, sir,—
Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.
Par. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits.
Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen:—My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?
Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we’ll hear you sing, certainly.
Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me.—But (marry) thus, my lord,—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—
Helen. My lord Pandarvs; honey-sweet lord,—
Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself most affectionately to you.
Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody; If you do, our melancholy upon your head!
Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that’s a sweet queen, i’faith.
Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad, is a sour offence.
Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
Helen. My lord Pandarvs,—
Pan. What says my sweet queen,—my very very sweet queen?
Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?
Helen. Nay, but my lord,—
Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.
Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida. 30
Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide; come, your disposer is sick.
Par. Well, I'll make excuse.
Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say—Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.
Par. I spy.
Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.
Helen. Why, this is kindly done.
Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.
Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.
Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain.
Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.
Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now.
Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.
Pan. Ay, you may, you may.
Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!
Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, I'faith.
Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.
Pan. In good troth, it begins so:

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!
For, oh, love's bow
Shoots buck and doe:
The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds
But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!
Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!
So dying love lives still:
Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!
Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Hey ho!
Helen. In love, I'faith, to the very tip of the nose.
Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds?—Why, they are vipers: Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day?
Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy; I would fain have armed to-night, but my Neil would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?
Helen. He hangs the lip at something; —you know all, lord Pandarus.
Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen.—I long to hear how they sped to-day.—You'll remember your brother's excuse?
Par. To a hair.
Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.
Helen. Commend me to your niece.
Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit.

[A Retreat sounded.
Par. They are come from field: let us to Priam's hall,
To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles, With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd, Shall more obey, than to the edge of steel, Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do more Than all the island kings, disarm great Hector.
Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris:
Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty, Give us more palm in beauty than we bare; Yea, overshines ourself.
Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Pandarus’ Orchard.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant, meeting.

Pan. How now? where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida’s?
Serv. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?
Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door, Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon, And give me swift transportance to those fields, Where I may wallow in the lily beds
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

MINORUS 'Come draw that curtain, and let's see your wares.'

Act 3 Sc 2
Propos’d for the deserver! O gentle Pandarus, From Cupid’s shoulder pluck his painted wings, And fly with me to Cressid!

Pan. Walk here i’the orchard, I’ll bring her straight.

[Exit Pan.

Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirs me round. The imaginary relish is so sweet That it enchants my sense; What will it be, When that the watry palate tastes indeed Love’s thrice-reputed nectar? death, I fear me;

Swooning destruction; or some joy too fine, Too subtle-potent, tun’d too sharp in sweetness, For the capacity of my ruder powers: I fear it much; and I do fear besides, That I shall lose distinction in my joys; As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps The enemy flying.

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. She’s making her ready, she’ll come straight: you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were fray’d with a sprite: I’ll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain:—she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta’en sparrow.

[Exit Pan.

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom: My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse; And all my powers do their bestowing lose, Like vassalage at unawares encount’ring The eye of majesty.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame’s a baby.—Her she is now: swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me.—What, are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; if you stand backward, we’ll put you i’ the fill’s.35—Why do you not speak to her?—Come, draw this curtain, and let’s see your picture. Alas, the day, how loth you are to offend daylight! an ’twere dark, you’d close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now, a kiss in fox-farm!36 build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out, ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i’the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds: she shall bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here’s

"In witness whereof the parties interchangeably"—Come in, come in; I’ll go get a fire.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me this?

Cres. Wished my lord?—Tho gods grant!—O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dress enpipes my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my ears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils cherubims; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: To fear the worst, oft cures the worst.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid’s pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady,—that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say, all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions, and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we: Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare, till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert, before his birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truer, not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, unete, what folly I commit, I deliberate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that; if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me: Be true to my lord:
if he flinch, chide me for it.

_Tro._ You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

_Pan._ Nay, I'll give my word for her too; our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant, being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they 'll stick where they are thrown.

_Cres._ Boldness comes to me now, and brings me
heart;

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day
For many weary months.

_Tro._ Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

_Cres._ Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord,
With the first glance that ever—Pardon me;—
If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.
I love you now; but not, till now, so much
But I might master it:—in faith, I lie;
My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother: See, we fools!
Why have I blab'd? who shall be true to us,
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?
But, though I lov'd you well, I woor'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man;
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue:
For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,
Cunning in dullness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of counsel: Stop my mouth.

_Tro._ And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

_Pan._ Pretty, 'tis faith.

_Cres._ My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss:
I am asham'd:—O heavens! what have I done?—
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

_Tro._ Your leave, sweet Cressid?

_Pan._ Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning,—

_Cres._ Pray you, content you.

_Tro._ What offends you, lady?

_Cres._ Sir, mine own company.

_Tro._ You cannot shun Yourself.

_Cres._ Let me go and try:
I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave,
To be another's fool. I would be gone:—
Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

_Tro._ Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

_Cres._ Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love;

And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts: But you are wise;
Or else you love not; For, to be wise, and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

_Tro._ O, that I thought it could be in a woman,
(As, if it can, I will presume in you,)
To feed for ay her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays!
Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me,—
That my integrity and truth to you
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How wero I then uplifted! but, alas,
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

_Cres._ In that I'll war with you.

_Tro._ O virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right!
True swains in love shall, in the world to come,
Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,
Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,—
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,—
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.

_Cres._ Prophet may you be!
If I be false, or swear a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing; yet let memory,
From false to false, among false maids in love, Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said—as false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to hoifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
As false as Cressid.

_Pan._ Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it;
I'll be the witness.—Here I hold your hand; here, my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—

474
ACT III.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,
The advantage of the time prompts me aloud To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind, That, through the sight I bear in things, to Jove I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, Incurr'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself, From certain and possess'd conveniences, To doubtful fortunes; sequest'ring from me all That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition, Made tame and most familiar to my nature; And here, to do you service, am become As new into the world, strange, unacquainted I do beseech you, as in way of taste, To give me now a little benefit, Out of those many register'd in promise, Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What would'st thou of us, Trojau? make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor, Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear. Oft have you, (often have you thanks therefore,) Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange, Whom Troy hath still denied: But this Antenor, I know, is such a wrest in their affairs, That their negotiations all must slack, Wanting his manage; and they will almost Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam, In change of him: let him be sent, great princes, And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence Shall quite strike off all service I have done, In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him, And bring us Cressid hither; Calchas shall have What he requests of us.——Good Diomed, Furnish you fairly for this interchange:

Withal, bring word—if Hector will to-morrow Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Dio. and Cal.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus, before their Tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands! the entrance of his tent:— Please it our general to pass strangely by him, As if he were forgot; and, princes all, Lay negligent and loose regard upon him: I will come last: 'Tis like, he'll question me, Why such unpleasive eyes are bent, why turn'd on him:

If so, I have derision med'ciable, To use between your strangeness and his pride, Which his own will shall have desire to drink; It may do good: pride hath no other glass To show itself, but pride; for supple knees Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on A form of strangeness as we pass along:— So do each lord; and either greet him not, Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What, comes the general to speak with me?

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The better. [Exeunt Agam. and Nest.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit Ajax.

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles;

To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep

To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune,

Must fall out with men too: What the declin'd is,
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,
As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings, but to the summer;
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour; but honour for those honours
That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit:
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean’d on them as slippery too,
Do one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But ’tis not so with me:
Fortune and I are friends; I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men’s looks; who do, methinks, find out
Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses;
I’ll interrupt his reading.—

How now, Ulysses?

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis’ son?
Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here
Writes me, That man—how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without, or in,—
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others’ eyes: nor doth the eye itself
That most pure spirit of sense,) behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos’d
Salutes each other with each other’s form.
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell’d, and is married there
Where it may see itself: this is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position,
It is familiar; but at the author’s drift:
Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves—
That no man is the lord of any thing,
(Though in and of him there be much consisting,) Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form’d in the applause
Where they are extended; which, like an arch

The voice again; or like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this;
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse;
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,
Most abject in regard, and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth! Now shall we see to-morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renown’d. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish fortune’s hall,
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another’s pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder;
As if his foot were on brave Hector’s breast,
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it: for they pass’d by me,
As misers do by beggars; neither gave to me
Good word, nor look: What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratiations:
Thoso scraps are good deeds past: which are Devour’d,
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: Persévérance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: To have done, is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a dusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way;
For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast; keep then the path;
For emulation hath a thousand sons,
That one by one pursue: If you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter’d tide, they all rush by,
And leave you bindmost:—
Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear, O’er-run and trampled on: Then what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must o’ertop yours:
For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand;
And with his arms out-stretch’d, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer: Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,—
That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past;
And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
More laud than gilt o'er dusty.
The present eye praises the present object:
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye,
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might; and yet it may again,
If thou would'st not entomb thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods them-
And drave great Mars to faction.

_Achil._ Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.

_Ulyss._ But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and herculeal:
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.37

_Achil._ Ha! known?

_Ulyss._ Is that a wonder?
The providence that 's in a watchful state,
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold;
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps;
Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb oracles.
There is a mystery (with whom relation
Durst never meddle) in the soul of state;33
Which hath an operation more divine,
Than breath, or pen, can give expressurc to:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly is ours, as yours, my lord;
And better would it fit Achilles much,
To throw down Hector, than Polyxena:
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her trump;
And all theGreekish girls shall tripping sing,—
"Great Hector's sister did Achilles win;
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him."
Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.

[Exit.

_Patr._ To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you:
A woman impatient and manish grown
Is not more leath'n than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this;
They think, my little stomach to the war,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.

_Achil._ Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

_Patr._ Ay; and, perhaps, receive much honour by him.

_Achil._ I see, my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

_Patr._ O, then beware;
Those wounds heal ill, that men do give themselves:
Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

_Achil._ Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus:
I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
To invite the Trojan lords after the combat,
To see us here unarmed: I have a woman's long-
ing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage
Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

_Enter Thersites._

_Ther._ A wonder.

_Achil._ What?

_Ther._ Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself:

_Achil._ How so?

_Ther._ He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector; and is so prophetically proud of an herculeal endlessmng, that he raves in saying nothing.

_Achil._ How can that be?

_Ther._ Why, he stalks up and down like a peac-cock, a stride, and a stand: ruminate, like an hostess, that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say—there were wit in this head, an twould out; and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck into the combat, he'll break it himself in vain glory. He knows not mo: I said, "Good-morrow, Ajax;" and home replies, "Thanks, Agamemnon." What think you of this man, that takes me for the general?
He is grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

_Achil._ Thou must be my ambassador to him,
Thersites.

_Ther._ Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he profess not answering; speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: Tell him,—I humbly desire the valiant Ajax, to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to procure safe conduct for his person, of the magnanimous, and most illustrious, six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax.

Ther. Humph!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you, to invite Hector to his tent?——

Ther. Humph!

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to 't?

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, at one side, Æneas and Servant, with a Torch; at the other, Paris, Delphorus, Antenor, Diomed, and Others, with Torches.

Par. See, ho! who's there?

Dei. 'Tis the lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?—

Had I so good occasion to lie long, As you, prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas; take his hand: Witness the process of your speech, wherein You tood—how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir, During all question of the gentle truce; But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance, As heart can think, or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other; howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not: But, I am sure, none; unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain stir'd;

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exit Achil. and Patr.

Ther. 'Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a valiant ignorance.

[Exit.

Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long, health: But when contention and occasion meet.

By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life, With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly With his face backward.—In humane gentleness, Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear, No man alive can love, in such a sort, The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Dio. We sympathise:—Jove, let Æneas live,

If to my sword his fate be not the glory,

A thousand complete courses of the sun!

But, in mine emulous honour, let him die,

With every joint a wound; and that to-morrow!

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despiteful gentle greeting, The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.—

What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.
Par. His purpose meets you 50 'Twas to bring this Greek
To Calchas' house; and there to render him,
For the enfreed Antenor, the fair Cressid:
Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us: I constantly do think,
(Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge,)
My brother Troilus lodges there to-night;
Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear,
We shall be much unwelcome.
Æne. That I assure you;
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Than Cressid borne from Troy.
Par. There is no help;
The bitter disposition of the time
Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.
Æne. Good morrow, all. [Exit.
Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; 'tis faith, tell me
true,
Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship,—
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best,
Myself, or Menelaus?
Dio. Both alike:
No merits well to have her, that doth seek her
(Not making any scruple of her soilure,)
With such a hell of pain, and world of charge;
And you as well to keep her, that defend her
(Not palating the taste of her dishonour,)
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends:
He, like a piling euckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece;
You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are ples'd to breed out your inheritors:
Both merits ples'd, each weighs nor less nor more;
But he as he, the heavier for a whore.
Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman,
Dio. She's bitter to her country: Hear me, Paris,—
For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath been slain: since she could speak,
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.
Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this virtue well,—
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.
Here lies our way. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Court before the House of Pandarus.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself; the morn is cold.
Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle
down;
He shall unbolt the gates.
Tro. Trouble him not;
To bed, to bed: Sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses,
As infants' empty of all thought!
Cres. Good morrow then.
Tro. 'Pr'ythee now, to bed.
Cres. Are you weary of me?
Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rou'd the ribald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,
I would not from thee.
Cres. Night hath been too brief.
Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays,
As tediously as hell; but flies the grasps of love,
With wings more momentary-sweet than thought.
You will catch cold, and curse me.
Cres. 'Pr'ythee, tarry;—
You men will never tarry,—
O foolish Cressida!—I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.
Pan. [Within.] What, are all the doors open here?
Tro. It is your uncle.

Enter Pandarilus.
Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life,—
Pan. How now, how now? how go maidenheads?
—Here, you maid, where's my cousin Cressid?
Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!
You bring me to do, and then you flout me too.
Pan. To do what? to do what?—let her say what: what have I brought you to do?
Cres. Come, come; beshrew your heart! you'll no' er be good,
Nor suffer others.
Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capuchin!—hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!

[Knocking.]
Cres. Did I not tell you?—'would he were knock'd o' the head!—
Who 's that at door? good uncle, go and sec.—
My lord, come you again into my chamber;
You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.
Tro. Ha, ha!
Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing.
[Knocking.
How earnestly they knock!—pray you, come in;
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.
[Exeunt Tro. and Cres.
Pan. [Going to the door.] Who 's there? what 's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now? what 's the matter?

Enter Æneas.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.
Pan. Who 's there? my lord Æneas? By my troth, I knew you not: what news with you so early?
Æne. Is not prince Troilus here ?
Pan. Here! what should he do here ?
Æne. Come, he is here, my lord, do not deny him;
It doth import him much, to speak with me.
Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know,
I 'll be sworn:—For my own part, I came in late:
What should he do here ?
Æne. Who!—nay, then:—
Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you are 'ware:
You'll be so true to him, to be false to him:
Do not you know of him, yet go fetch him hither;
Go.

As Pandarbus is going out, enter Troilus.

Tro. How now? what 's the matter?
Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash: There is at hand
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes' hand
The lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?
Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy:
They are at hand, and ready to effect it.
Tro. How my achievements mock me!
I will go meet them: and, my lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.
Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity. [Exeunt Tro. and Æne.

Pan. Is 't possible? no sooner got, but lost? The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad.
A plague upon Antenor! I would, they had broke's neck!

Enter Cressida.

Cres. How now? What is the matter? Who was here?
Pan. Ah, ah!
Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord gone?
Tell me, sweet uncle, what 's the matter?
Pan. 'Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!
Cres. O the gods!—what 's the matter?
Pan. Prythee, get thee in; 'Would thou had'st ne'er been born! I know, thou would'st be his death:—O poor gentleman!—A plague upon Antenor!
Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you on my knees, I beseech you, what 's the matter?
Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus; 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.
Cres. O you immortal gods!—I will not go.
Pan. Thou must.
Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;
I know no touch of consanguinity;
No, kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me,
As the sweet Troilus.—O you gods divine!
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,
If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,
Do to this body what extremes you can;
But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very centre of the earth,
Drawing all things to it.—I 'll go in, and weep;—
Pan. Do, do.
Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised checks:
Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart
With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before Pandarbus' House.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Æneas, Deiphobus, Antenor, and Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour prefix'd
Of her delivery to this valiant Greek
Comes fast upon:—Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.

Tro.
Walk in to her house;
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently:
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar; and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit.

Par. I know what 'tis to love;
And 'twould, as I shall pity, I could help!—
Please you, walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in Pandarus’s House.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it: How can I moderate it?
If I could temporize with my affection,
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like ailmentment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying dress:
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Here, here, here, he comes.—Ah sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus! [Embracing him.

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here: Let me embrace too: “O heart,”—as the goodly saying is:—

——O heart, O heavy heart,
Why sigh’st thou without breaking?

where he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart,
By friendship, nor by speaking.

There never was a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse; we see it, we see it.—How now, lambs?

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain’d a purity,
That the best gods—as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy, and Troilus.

In it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justice roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock’d embrasures, strangles our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath:
We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time now, with a robber’s haste,
Crams his rich thievish up, he knows not how:
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign’d kisses to them,
He fumbles up into a loose adieu;
And scants us with a single furnish’d kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Enter. [Within.] My lord! is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call’d: Some say, the Genius so Cries, “Come!” to him that instantly must die.—
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root!

Cres. I must then to the Greeks?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!

When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love: Be thou but true of heart,—

Cres. I true! how now? what wicked dream is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly
For it is parting from us:
I speak not, “be thou true,” as fearing thee;
For I will throw my glove to death himself,
That there’s no maculation in thy heart:
But, “be thou true,” say I, to fashion in
My solemn protestation; be thou true,
And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos’d, my lord, to dangers
As infinite as imminent! but, I’ll be true.

Tro. And I’ll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve,

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet, be true,

Cres. O heavens!—be true, again?

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love;
The Grecian youths are full of quality;
They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature flowing,
And swelling o'er with arts and exercise;
How novelty may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy
(Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,)
Makes me afeard.

_Cres._
O heavens! you love me not.
_Tro._ Die I a villain then!
In this I do not call your faith in question,
So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,
Nor heel the high lawnt, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell, that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discourse-devil,
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.

_Cres._ Do you think, I will?
_Tro._ No.
But something may be done, that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeable potency.

_Aene._ [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—
_Tro._ Come, kiss; and let us part.
_Par._ [Within.] Brother Troilus!
_Tro._ Good brother, come you hither;
And bring _Aeneas_, and the Grecian, with you.

_Cres._ My lord, will you be true?
_Tro._ Who is? alas, it is my vice, my fault:
While others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch more simplicity;
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit is—plain, and true,—there's all the reach of it.

_Enter_ _Aeneas_, _Paris_, _Antenor_, _Deiphobus_, and _Diomedes_.

Welcome, sir Diomed! here is the lady,
Which for Antenor we deliver you:
At the port,43 lord, I'll give her to thy hand:
And, by the way, possess thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilium.

_Dio._
Fair lady Cressid,
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage: and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

_Tro._ Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee,
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises,
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee, use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

_Dio._ O, be not mov'd, prince Troilus:
Let me be privileng'd by my place, and message,
To be a speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust: And know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge: To her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say—he's so,
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour,—no.

_Tro._ Come, to the port.—I'll tell thee, Diomed,
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head,—
Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend wo our needful talk.

[Exeunt _Tro._, _Cres._, and _Dio._

_Trumpet heard._

_Par._ Hark! Hector's trumpet.

_Aene._
How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field.

_Par._ 'Tis Troilus' fault: Come, come, to field with him.

_Dci._ Let us make ready straight.

_Aene._ Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity,
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth, and single chivalry.

[Exeunt._

SCENE V.—_The Grecian Camp._
Lists set out.

_Enter_ _Ajax_,  _armed_; _Agamemnon_, _Achilles_, _Patroclus_, _Menelaus_, _Ulysses_, _Nestor_, and _Others_.

_Agam._ Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,
Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful _Ajax_; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant,
And hate him bitter.

_Ajax._ Thou, trumpet, there's my purse.
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:
Blow, villain, till thy sphere'd bias check
Out-swell the chole of puff'd _Aquilon_:

482

ACT IV.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE V.
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood;
Thou blow'st for Hector.

[Trumpet sounds.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achill.
'Tis but early days.

Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas' daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the too: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

| Ulyss. Fye, fye upon her!

That give a coating welcome ere it comes,
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts
To every ticklish reader! set them down
For sluttish spoils of opportunity,
And daughters of the gano.

[Trumpet within.

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

---

| Enter Hector, armed; Aeneas, Troilus, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Aenea. Hail, all the state of Greece! what shall be done
To him that victory commands? Or do you purpose,
A victor shall be known? will you, the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other; or shall they be divided
By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Aenea. He cares not, he'll obey conditions.

Achill. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deal misprizing
The knight oppos'd.

Aenea. If not Achilles, sir,
What is your name?

Achill. If not Achilles, nothing.

Aenea. Therefore Achilles: But, whate'er, know this;—
In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that, which looks like pride, is courtesy.
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:
In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;
Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.
Achil. A maiden battle then?—O, I perceive you.

Re-enter Diomed.

Agam. Here is sir Diomed:—Go, gentle knight, Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Æneas Consent upon the order of their fight, So be it; either to the uttermost, Or else a breath: the combatants being kin, Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists.

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight; Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word; Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue; Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon calm'd: His heart and hand both open, and both free; For what he has, he gives, what thinks, he shows; Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath:

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous; For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes To tender objects; but he, in heat of action, Is more indicative than jealous love: They call him Troilus; and on him erect A second hope, as fairly built as Hector. Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth Even to his inches, and, with private soul, Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st; Awake thee!

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd:—there, Ajax!

Dio. You must no more.

Æne. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why then, will I no more:—Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son, A cousin-german to great Priam's seed: The obligation of our blood forbids A gory emulation 'twixt us twain: Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so, That thou could'st say—‘This hand is Grecian all, And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister Bounds-in my father's;' by Jove multipotent, Thou should'st not bear from me a Grecianish member Wherein my sword had not impressure made Of our rank feud: But the just gods gainsay, That any drop thou borrow'st from thy mother, My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax: By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms; Hector would have them fall upon him thus: Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector: Thou art too gentle, and too free a man: I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence A great addition earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable (On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st O yes Cries, “This is he,”) could promise to himself A thought of added honour torn from Hector. Æne. There is expectance here from both the sides, What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it; The issue is embracement:—Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success, (As said I have the chance,) I would desire My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemmon's wish: and great Achilles Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me: And signify this loving interview To the expectors of our Trojan part; Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin; I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name by name; But for Achilles, my own searching eyes Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one That would be rid of such enemy; But that's no welcome: Understand more clear, What's past, and what's to come, is strew'd with husks And formless ruin of oblivion; But in this extant moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing, Bids thee, with most divine integrity, From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agam. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.
Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting;—
You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.
Hect. Whom must we answer?
Men. The noble Menelaeus. I
Hect. O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks!
Mock not, that I affect the untried oath;
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.
Men. Name her not now, sir: she's a deadly theme.
Hect. O, pardon; I offend.
Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee,
As hot as Persus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduemnts,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' the air,
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
That I have said to some my standers-by,
"Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!"
And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: This have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy genial,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee: Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.
Aene. 'Tis the old Nestor.
Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time—
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.
Nest. I would, my arms could match thee in contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.
Hect. I would they could.
Nest. Ha!
By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow.
Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time—
Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.
Hect. I know your favour, lord Ulysses, well.
Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.
Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue:
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls, that perty front your town,
Yet towers whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.
Hect. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet; and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: The end crowns all;
And that old common arbitrator, time,
Will one day end it.
Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome:
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my tent.
Achil. I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses,
Though!—
Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.
Achil. Is this Achilles?
Achil. I am Achilles.
Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on thee.
Achil. Behold thy fill.
Hect. Nay, I have done already.
Achil. Thou art too brief; I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.
Hect. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er;
But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?
Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? whether there, there, or there?
That I may give the local wound a name;
And make distinct the very breach, whereout
Hector's great spirit flew: Answer me, heavens
Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man,
To answer such a question: Stand again
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to preconimine in nice conjecture.
Where thou wilt hit me dead?
Achil. I tell thee, yea.
Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er—
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag,
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words
Or may I never——
Afar. Do not chafe thee, cousin;—
And you Achilles, let these threats alone,
ACT V.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,
Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.—Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

Achil. How now, thon core of envy? Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said, Adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Pr'ythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-gripping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, lime-kilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why thou damn'ed box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt; you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle inmaterial skein of soft he, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies; diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle. Here is a letter from queen Hecuba; A token from her daughter, my fair love; Both taxing me, and gagging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it: Fall, Greeks; fall, fame; honour, or go, or stay; My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.——Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;
ACT V. TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. SCENE II.

This night in banqueting must all be spent.—
Away, Patroclus. [Exit Achilles and Patroclus.

Thersites. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Heros' Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: And the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds; a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox: to an ox were nothing: he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, aitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a heron without a roe, I would not care: but to be Menelaus,—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the house of a lazaretto, so were not Menelaus.—Hey-day! spirits and fires!

Enter Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Menelaus, and Diomed, with Lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

Hector. There, where we see the lights.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulysses. Here comes himself to guide you.

Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hector. Thanks, and good night, to the Greeks' general.

Menelaus. Good night, my lord.

Hector. Good night, sweet Menelaus.

Thersites. Sweet draught! Sweet, quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achilles. Good night, and welcome, both to those that go, or tarry.

Agam. Good night. [Exit Agam. and Menelaus.

Achilles. Old Nestor tarries; and you, too, Diomed, Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Diomed. I cannot, lord; I have important business, The tide whereof is now. — Good night, great Hector.

Hector. Give me your hand.

Ulysses. Follow his torch, he goes To Calchas' tent; I'll keep you company.

Troilus. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hector. And so good night.

Exit Ulysses and Troilus. Achilles. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exit Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor.

Thersites. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brablar the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it: it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent: I'll after. Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets! [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Before Calchas' Tent.

Enter Diomedes.

Diomed. What are you up here, ho? speak.

Calchas. [Within.] Who calls?

Diomed. Calchas, I think.—Where's your daughter?

Calchas. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulysses, at a distance; after them Thersites.

Ulysses. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter Cressida.

Troilus. Cressida come forth to him!

Diomed. How now, my charge?

Cressida. Now, my sweet guardian!—Hark! a word with you. [Whispers.

Troilus. Yen, so familiar!

Ulysses. She will sing any man at first sight.

Thersites. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted.

Diomed. Will you remember?

Diomed. Nay, but do then;

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Troilus. What should she remember?

Ulysses. List!

Cressida. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Thersites. Roguery! 487
ACT V.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

 Dio. Nay, then,—
Cres. I'll tell you what:—
Dio. Pho! Pho! come, tell a pin: You are forsworn.—
Cres. In faith, I cannot: What would you have me do?
Ther. A juggling trick, to be—secretly open.
Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?
Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath;
Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.
Dio. Good night.
Tro. Hold, patience!
Ulyss. How now, Trojan?
Cres. Dioimed,—
Dio. No, no, good night: I'll be your fool no more.
Tro. Thy better must.
Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.
Tro. O plague and madness!
Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart, I pray you,
Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself
To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly; I beseech you, go.
Tro. Behold, I pray you!
Ulyss. Now, good my lord, go off:
You flow to great destruction; come, my lord.
Tro. I pr'ythee, stay.
Ulyss. You have not patience; come.
Tro. I pray you, stay; by hell, and all hell's torments,
I will not speak a word.
Dio. And so, good night.
Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Tro. Doth that grieve thee?
O wither'd truth!
Ulyss. Why how now, lord?
By Jove, I will be patient.
Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!
Dio. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter.
Cres. In faith, I do not; come hither once again.
Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something; will you go?
You will break out.
Tro. She strokes his cheek!
Ulyss. Come, come.
Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a word:
There is between my will and all offences
A guard of patience:—stay a little while.
Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump, and potato finger, tickles these together! Fry, lochery, fry!
Dio. But will you then?
Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else.
Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.
Ulyss. You have sworn patience.
Tro. Fear me not, my lord;
I will not be myself, nor have cognition
Of what I feel; I am all patience.

Re-enter Cressida.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now!
Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.
Tro. O beauty! where's thy faith?
Ulyss. My lord,—
Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.
Cres. You look upon that sleeve; Behold it well.—
He loved me—O false wench!—Give 't me again.
Dio. Who was't?
Cres. No matter, now I have 't again.
I will not meet with you to-morrow night:
I pr'ythee, Diomed, visit me no more.
Ther. Now she sharpens;—Well said, whetstone.
Dio. I shall have it.
Cres. What, this?
Dio. Ay, that.
Cres. O, all you gods!—O pretty pretty pledge!
Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee, and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,
And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,
As I kiss thee,—Nay, do not snatch it from me
He, that takes that, must take my heart withal.
Dio. I had your heart before, this follows it.
Tro. I did swear patience.
Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; 'tis faith you shall not;
I'll give you something else.
Dio. I will have this; Whose was it?
Cres. 'Tis no matter.
Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.
Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.
But, now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yonder,
And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm;
And grieve his spirit, that dares not challenge it.
Tro. Wert thou the devil, and worst it on thy horn,
It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past;—And yet it is not;
I will not keep my word.

Dio. Why then, farewell:
Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.

Cres. You shall not go:—One cannot speak a word,
But it strait starts you.

Dio. I do not like this feeling.

Tlior. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you, pleases me best.

Dio. What, shall I come? the hour?

Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—
Do come:—I shall he plagu'd.

Dio. Farewell till then.

Cres. Good night. I pr'ythee, come.—

[Exit Dio.

Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee;
But with my heart the other eye doth see.
Ah! poor our sex! this fault in us I find,
The error of our eye directs our mind:
What error leads, must err; O then conclude,
Minds, sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.

[Exit Cres.

Tlior. A proof of strength she could not publish more,
Unless she said, My mind is now turn'd whore.

Ulyss. All's done, my lord.

Tlior. It is.

Ulyss. Why stay we then?

Tlior. To make a recordation to my soul
Of every syllable that here was spoke.
But, if I tell how these two did co-act,
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
An esperance so obstinately strong,
That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears;
As if those organs had deceptions functions,
Created only to calumniate.

Was Cressid here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tlior. She was not sure.

Ulyss. Most sure she was.

Tlior. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.

Tlior. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!
Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage
To stubborn critics—apt, without a theme,
For depravation,—to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

Tlior. Will he swagger himself out on 'a own eyes?

Tro. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida:
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This was not she. O madness of discourse,
That cause sets up with and against itself!
Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt; this is, and is not, Cressid!
Within my soul there doth commence a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate
Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no orifice for a point, as subtle
As is Arachne's broken web, to enter.
Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are alipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;
And with another knot, fire-finger-tied,
The fractions of her faith, oaths of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy relics
Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express?

Tlior. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well
In characters as red as Mars his heart
Inflam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek;—As much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed:
That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout,
Which shipmen do the hurricane call
Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more charmour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my prompted sword
Falling on Diomed.

Tlior. He'll tickle it for his enemy.

Tlior. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they 'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Aeneas.

Aeneas. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord:
Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

_Tro._ Have with you, prince:—My courteous lord adieu:

Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!
_Ulyss._ I'll bring you to the gates.
_Tro._ Accept distracted thanks.

[Exit Tro., Ene., and Ulyss.

_Thers._ 'Would, I could meet that rogue Diomed!
I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the parrot will not do more for an almond, than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: A burning devil take them!

[Exit.

_Enter Hector and Andromache._

_And._ When was my lord so much urgently temper'd,
To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.
_Hect._ You train me to offend you; get you in:
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.
_And._ My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.
_Hect._ No more, I say.

[Exit.

_Enter Cassandra._

_Cas._ Where is my brother Hector?
_And._ Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent:
Consort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.
_Cas._ O, it is true.
_Hect._ Ho! bid my trumpet sound!
_Cas._ No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.
_Hect._ Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.
_Cas._ The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows;
They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.
_And._ O! be persuaded: Do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.

_Cas._ It is the purpose, that makes strong the vow;
But vows, to every purpose, must not hold:
Unarm, sweet Hector.
_Hect._ Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the dear man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.—

_Enter Troilus._

How now, young man? mean'st thou to fight to-day?
_And._ Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit Cas.

_Hect._ No, 'faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth,
I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand, to-day, for thee, and me, and Troy.
_Tro._ Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion, than a man.
_Hect._ What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.
_Tro._ When many times the captive Grecians fall,
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.
_Hect._ O, 'tis fair play.
_Tro._ Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.
_Hect._ How now? how now?
_Tro._ For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mother;
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.
_Hect._ Fye, savage, fye!
_Tro._ Hector, then 'tis wars.
_Hect._ Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.
_Tro._ Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

_Re-enter Cassandra, with Priam._

_Cas._ Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:
He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.
ACT V.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE IV.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions;
Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly erect,
To tell thee—that this day is ominous.
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Aeneas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. But thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit And.]

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector.
Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns pale!
Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!
How poor Andromache shills her doleurs forth!
Behold, destruction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless antics, one another meet,
And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away!—Away!—

Cas. Farewell.—Yet, soft:—Hector, I take my leave:
Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. [Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim:
Go in, and cheer the town: we'll forth, and fight;
Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night.

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exit severally Pri. and Hect. Alarums.]

Tro. They are at it; hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?
Tro. What now?
Pan. Here's a letter from you' poor girl.
Tro. Let me read.
Pan. A whoreson phthisic, a whoreson rascally phthisic so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o'these days: And I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on't.—What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;

The effect doth operate another way.—
Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change togeth.

My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds.

[Exit severally.

SCENE IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter THEMISTHENES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same spiry dodging foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there, in his helm: I would see them meet; that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. 'O the other side, The policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor; and that same dog-fox, Ulysses,—is not proved worth a blackberry:—They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here come slave, and t'other.

Enter Diomedes, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for, shouldst thou take the river Styx,
I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire: I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrawed me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exit two. and Dio., fighting.

Enter Hector.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?

Art thou of blood, and honour?
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

ACT V.

SCENE V.—The Same.

Enter Diomedes and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse; Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid: Fellow, commend my service to her beauty; Tell her, I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan, And am her knight by proof. I go, my lord.

Serv. [Exit Serv.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus Hath beat down Menon: bastard Margarleon Hath Doreus prisoner; And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam, Upon the pashed corse of the kings Epistrophus and Cedius: Polixenes is slain; Amphimachus, and Thous, deadly hurt; Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers; haste we, Dione, To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles; And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.— There is a thousand Hectors in the field: Now here he fights on Galathe his horse, And there lacks work; anon, he's there afoot, And there they fly, or die, like scaled seals Before the belching whale; then is he yonder, And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him, like the mower's swath: Here, there, and every where, he leaves, and takes; Dexterity so obeying appetite, That what he will, he does; and does so much, That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great Achilles

Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance: Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood, Together with his mangled Myrmidons, That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him, Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend, And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it, Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution; Engaging and redeeming of himself, With such a careless force, and forceless care, As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Dio. Ay, there, there. Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector? Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face; Know what it is to meet Achilles angry. Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What would'st thou? Dio. I would correct him. Ajax. Were I the general, thou should'st have my office. Ere that correction:—Troilus, I say! what, Troilus!

Enter Troilus.

Tro. O traitor Diomed!—turn thy false face, thou traitor, And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse! Dio. Ha! art thou there? Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed. Dio. He is my prize, I will not look upon. Tro. Come both, you cogg'ing Greeks; have at you both. [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yen, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!
ACT V.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

ENTER ACHILLES.

Achil. Now do I see thee: Ha!—Have at thee, Hector.

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan. Be happy, that my arms are out of use: My rest and negligence befriend thee now, But thou anon shalt hear of me again; Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.

Hect. Farewell well:—I would have been much more a fresher man, Had I expected thee.—How now, my brother?

RE-ENTER TROILUS.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas; Shall it be? No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven, He shall not carry him; I'll be taken too, Or bring him off:—Fate, here me what I say! I reek not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.

ENTER ONE IN SUMPTUOUS ARMOUR.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark:— No? wilt thou not?—I like thy armour well; I'll flush it, and unlock the rivets all, But I'll be master of it:—Wilt thou not, beast, abide? Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—The Same.

ENTER ACHILLES, WITH MYRMIDONS.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons; Mark what I say.—Attend me where I wheel: Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath; And when I have the bloody Hector found, Empale him with your weapons round about; In fittest manner execute your arms. Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye;— It is decreed—Hector the great must die. [Exit.

SCENE VIII.—The Same.

ENTER MENELAUS AND PARIS, FIGHTING: THEN THEIRSITES.

Ther. The cuckold, and the cuckold-maker are at it: Now, bull! now, dog! 'Lo, Paris, 'Lo! now my double-hemmed sparrow! 'Lo, Paris, 'Lo! The bull has the game:—'Ware horns, ho! [Exit PARIS AND MEN.

ENTER MARGARETON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, ho tempts judgment: Farewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward. [Exit.

SCENE IX.—Another Part of the Field.

ENTER HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrid core, so fair without, Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life. Now is my day's work done; I'll take good breath! Rest, sword! thou hast thy fill of blood and death! [Puts off his helmet, and hangs his shield behind him.

ENTER ACHILLES AND MYRMIDONS.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set; How ugly night comes breathing at his heels: Even with the vail and dark'ning of the sun, To close the day up, Hector's life is done. Hect. I am unarmed: forego this vantage, Greek. Achil. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man I seek. [Hect. falls.

So, Ilion, fall thou not! now, Troy, sink down; Hero lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.— On, Myrmidons; and cry you all again, "Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain." [A RETREAT SOUNDED.

Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr. The Trojan trumpet sounds the like, my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night overspreads the earth, And, stickler like, the armies separate. My half-sup'rd sword, that frankly would have fed, Please'd this dainty bit, thus goes to bed. — [Sheaths his sword.

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail; Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exit.

SCENE X.—The Same.

ENTER AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, AND OTHERS, MARCHING. SHOUTS WITHIN.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?
Nest. Peace, drums.

[Within.] Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is—Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be;
Great Hector was as good a man as he.

Agam. March patiently along;—Let one be sent
To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—
If in his death the gods have us befriended,
Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

[Exeunt, marching.

SCENE XI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Aeneas and Trojans.

Aene. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field:
Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter Troilus.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector?—The gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail,
In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shamefull field.—
Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!
Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!
I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,
And linger not our sure destructions on!

Aene. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not; that tell me so:
I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;
But dare all imminence, that gods and men,
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!
Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?
Let him, that will a screech-owl aye be call'd,
Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead:
There is a word will Priam turn to stone;
Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,
Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,
Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away:
Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet;—You vile abominable tents,
Thus proudly light upon our Phrygian plains,
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
I'll through and through you!—And thou, great-siz'd coward!
No space of earth shall sunder our two hates;
I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy thoughts.—
Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:
Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit Tro.

Pan. A goodly med'cine for my aching bones!—
O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill required! Why should our endeavours be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—
Let me see:—
Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey, and his sting:
And being once subdued in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.—
Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pandar's hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall:
Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here be made:
It should be now, but that my fear is this,—
Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss:
Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for ease;
And, at that time, bequeath you my diseases. [Exit.
NOTES TO TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

1 Orygious, i.e. proud, disdainful.

2 Spurr up the sons of Troy.
To spurre, or spur, from the old Teutonic word Speren, signifies to shut up or defend by bars.

3 And hither am I come
A prologue armed.

The speaker of the prologue was to be habited in armour, not, says Dr. Johnson, "defying the audience, in confidence of either the author's or actor's abilities, but merely in a character suited to the subject, in a dress of war before a warlike play."

4 Leaps over the count.
That is, the arant, what went before.

5 She's a fool to stay behind her father.
Calchas, the father of Cressida, was a priest of Troy, who being sent by Priam to consult the oracle at Delphi, concerning the event of the war, and finding that the Greeks would obtain the victory, he deserted to them, and never returned to his own country.

6 Between our Ilium.
Ilium is here used to mean the royal palace of Priam, but Mr. Stevens says that Ilium, properly speaking, is the name of the city; Troy, that of the country.

1 How now, prince Troilus? wherefore not afield?
From various lines in this play it appears that Shakespeare pronounced Troilus improperly as a dissyllable.

8 They say he is a very man, per se.
That is, paramount, the paragon or flower of men.

9 Into a compassed window.
That is, a circular or bow window.

10 Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?
Lifter is here used equivocally to mean thief.

11 Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing.
This appears a contradiction, and the following lines express a meaning entirely opposite. We should read, "joy's soul dies in the doing," which means that the fire of passion is extinguished by enjoyment.

12 Bundling between the two moist elements,
Like Perses' horse.
Pegasus is the only flying horse that we hear of in ancient mythology, and he did not belong to Perseus, but Bellerophon. But Shakespeare followed the author of The Destruction of Troy, in which he found the fol-

19 The briz, i.e., the gad or horse-fly.

11 As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver.
We should read thatched with silver, his head roofed or covered with silvery white hair.

15 The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre.
By this centre, Ulysses means the earth itself, not the centre of the earth. According to the Ptolemaic system, the earth is the centre of the solar system.

16 Deracinate, i.e. tear up by the roots.

27 As staff for these two to make paradoxes.
Paradoxes has no discoverable meaning: we should probably read parodies.

20 Who in this dull and long-continued truce.
Shakspeare has fallen into an error here. In the previous scene the Trojan princes are represented as returning home from that day's fight; and Cressida's servant tells her that Ajax "yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down," yet here a long truce is spoken of as being then in operation.

20 Let blockish Ajax.
Shakspeare appears to have confounded Ajax Telamonius with Ajax Oileus. Perhaps he was led into this error by the author of The Destruction of Troy, who, in describing those two persons, improperly calls Ajax Oileus, simply Ajax, as the more eminent of the two.

21 The plague of Greece upon thee.
Probably an allusion to the plague supposed to be sent by Apollo on the Greek army.

23 He would pin thee into shivers.
Pin, says Dr. Johnson, is in the midland counties the vulgar and colloquial word for pound.

23 An assingeo, i.e. an ass.

24 Every tithe soul, amongst many thousand dimes.
Dime is the tithe or tenth. Every tenth among many thousand tenths.
NOTES TO TROLLUS AND CRESSIDA.

23 And, for an old aunt.

Priam’s sister, Hesione, whom Heracles gave to Telamon, who by her had Ajax.

24 Our fire-brand brother.

Heenba, when pregnant with Paris, dreamed she would be delivered of a flaming torch.

25 The soil of her fair rape.

Rape antecedently signified the carrying away of a female without any idea of personal violence.

26 Aristotle.

Aristotle was not born until 382 years before Christ, and Troy was taken by the Greeks 1,184 years before Christ, so that the poet is guilty of an anachronism of more than eight hundred years.

27 Make that demand of the prover.

The folio somewhat profanely reads, to thy Creator. The quarto has, of the prover, but the meaning is, I think, the same. Make that demand (i.e. why thou art a fool?) to thy Creator who hath made thee one.

28 I’ll lay my life with my disposer Cressida.

It is difficult to know how Cressida can be the disposer of Paris; Mr. Malone suggests that Shakespeare might have written desposer; and adds:—’What Pandarus says afterwards, that Paris and Cressida are tecuin, supports this conjecture.” Mr. Ritson offers a different solution; the line ought, he thinks, to be spoken by Helen. She calls Cressida her disposer, because she had deposited her in the affections of Troilus, whom Pandarus is ready to swear she loved more than Paris.

29 An you draw backward, we’ll put you in the fills.

That is, in the shafts. Fills is a word used in some counties for thills, the shafts of a cart or waggon.

30 A kiss in fee-farm.

That is, a prolonged kiss, a kiss of unlimited duration.

31 As true as steel, as plantage to the moon.

As true as steel is an old proverbial expression, a sword of good steel being a weapon on which its owner could rely. Plantage probably means vegetation, plants of any kind, and the allusion is to the common opinion of the influence which the moon was supposed to possess over the vegetable kingdom.

32 That through the sight I bear in things, to Jove.

This, some editors have altered to—the sight I bear in things to come. “The word,” says Dr. Johnson, “is so printed, that nothing but the sense can determine whether it be love or Jove. I believe that the editors read it as Jove, and therefore made the alteration to obtain some meaning.”

33 That man—how dearly ever parted.

However excellently endowed.

34 Who, in his circumstance.

That is, in the detail or circumduction of his argument.

21 ’Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam’s daughters.

Polyxena, in the act of marrying whom he was afterwards killed by Paris.

22 There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of state.

A secret administration of affairs, a sort of ubiquity, in wise governments, which no historian can unveil.

23 His purpose meets you.

I bring you his meaning and his orders.

24 My matter is so rash.

That is, my business is so hasty and abrupt.

41 The secrets of nature.

Have not more gift in taciturnity.

The first line is defective; Mr. Theobald would read—the secret things of nature, &c.

42 What wicked deem, i.e. thought, doubt, or judgment.

43 The port, i.e. the gate.

44 At every joint and motive of her body.

Motive is used for motion. Her wantonness shews in every act or motion.

45 That give a coasting welcome ere it comes.

A coasting welcome has been surmised to be an amorous glance of invitation, and, ere it come, to imply that the lady makes the first advance, and intimates by her manner that familiarity will not be unwelcome.

46 This blowned knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Ajax and Hector were cousins, Ajax being the son of Hesione, the sister of Priam and aunt of Hector.

47 Or else a breath.

A breathing, a friendly encounter just sufficient to make the combatants pant with their exertion.

48 Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath.

Does not utter an immature or unsuitable thought.

49 Most imperious Agamemnon.

Impersonal and imperial had the same meaning.

50 The noble Menelaus.

Menelaus would scarcely apply the epithet noble, to himself; Mr. Ritson supposes that this sentence should be spoken by Aneas.

51 I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses, thou.

By the utterance of this line as it stands, Achilles would evidently insult Ulysses. Should we not read though for thou?

52 You ruinous butt; you whorsen indistinguishable cur.

This is said in allusion to the deformity of Thersites; he is called a ruinous butt, on account of his graceless and lump-like figure; and indistinguishable, because he is of an unnatural and undeterminate shape.
